Belgrade, March 25.—The patchwork Cvetkovic government which capitulated to Germany in Vienna today and signed a pact with the Axis already was disintegrating tonight in Yugoslavia under a wave of outraged public anger.

Its complete collapse is confidently expected in high political circles here soon after Premier Dragisa Cvetkovic and Foreign Minister Cinar-Markovic return from Germany.

Belgrade was dumbfounded today by the resignation of the Germanophile minister of education, Dusan Pantitch. A sensation followed when usually reliable sources reported that Mihailo Konstantinovic, the minister of justice, was maintaining his resignation despite its nonacceptance by the Prince Regent.

Prince Paul himself was scheduled to broadcast to the country late today in an effort to soothe the inflamed peasantry and find some support among the people for a government which defied the will and traditions of the Yugoslavs, most of whom seem to be clamoring for the downfall of the government and an opportunity to defend the country with arms against Germany.

More Due to Resign

The broadcast was repeatedly postponed and appeared tonight to have been canceled.

Additional resignations from the Cvetkovic cabinet, led by those of Milan Protitch, minister of supply, and Jurai Shutej, finance minister, seemed almost certain, according to well-informed political circles here.

Agrarian Party circles here tonight said that the party president, Milan Gavrilovitch, had filed his resignation with the foreign office today from his post as Yugoslav Minister to Moscow and was returning immediately to lead his party with the now fast-uniting opposition.

While reinforced squads of regular and special police guarded the German and Italian legations, extra policemen were picketed in public gathering places to maintain order in Belgrade.

The huge public outcry against capitulation took shape in demonstrations throughout most of the provinces.

The British and Greek legations were besieged today by Serbian

Welles Hails Soviet Pledge To Turkey

U. S. 'Satisfaction' Expressed; Yugoslav Funds Are Frozen

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

The United States, in what one high official called a "radical departure," yesterday greeted with "satisfaction" Russia's declaration of friendship for pro-British Turkey.

At the same time, the Government admitted defeat in efforts to keep Yugoslavia out of the Axis orbit, by "freezing" upwards of $50,000,000 of Yugoslavian funds in this country, so they might not fall into German hands.

Using words of approval toward Russia for the first time since the Soviet-German pact of August, 1939, Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles issued the surprise statement of American pleasure.

Asked for comment on the Soviet pledge of "full and comprehensive neutrality" if Turkey were attacked and involved in war, Welles weighed his words carefully and then said:

"In times like these, and particularly during the past months when so many independent nations have had, at least temporarily, destroyed their autonomy and their independence . . . it is, of course a matter of satisfaction to this country when a power like the Soviet Union reaffirms its intention of maintaining what I understand is termed its 'comprehensive neutrality' in the

Single Order System Will Be Established, Huge Facilities Built

With the $7,000,000,000 lease-lend appropriation bill on its way by airplane to President Roosevelt for his signature, defense officials moved yesterday toward two major tasks immediately before them — the establishment of a "single-order" system for American and allied war purchases and creation of $750,000,000 worth of new plant facilities needed for the all-out program fo allied aid.

Meanwhile these other developments were noted along the preparedness front:

The House sent to conference the $3,446,000,000 Navy Department appropriation bill, carrying funds for continuation of work on two-ocean fleet.

The Office of Production Management took action designed to make available at once 200 tons of American magnesium to Great Britain, and simultaneously published a tabulation showing that, with the new $7,000,000,000 lease-lend appropriation, defense expenditures of $42,688,800,000 had been authorized or proposed in this country since June, 1940—$39,177,800,000 for the United States, and $3,511,000,000 in

Halifax Says British War Aim Is to Win for Freedom

By the Associated Press

New York, March 25.—The principal war aim of the British people and those fighting with them, Lord Halifax, British Ambassador, said tonight, "is to win this life-and-death struggle for the cause of human freedom."

It was the ambassador's first public address since arriving two months ago to succeed the late Lord Lothian and, following tradition, he made it before the Pilgrim's Society of the United States at a dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel. It was broadcast over the three major radio networks.

Halifax, in his prepared address, not only emphasized the nature of the struggle in Europe but sketched a post-war picture in which "every nation, great or small, will have its place and make its own contribution."

He touched briefly, too, on the question: "When will Hitler invade Britain?" which he said he could not answer.

"But if you ask me: 'Can such an invasion succeed?' or in other words, 'will all the help we are planning to send to Britain arrive too late?' Then both by head and heart join to tell you with all the conviction born of my knowledge

Three Floors Ablaze When Firemen Arrive; Flames Believed Traced to Victim's Room

One person was burned to death and six others were carried to safety by firemen early today when a three-alarm blaze swept through the upper floors of the Grand Hotel, 606 F Street Northwest.

At least 25 lodgers were routed from their beds, many awakened and helped to the street by firemen.

The burned body, found in a sixth floor room, was tentatviely identified as that of C. P. Hull, 45, of Los Angeles, who registered at the hotel at 12:15 p. m. yesterday. The identification was made by George Rogers, proprietor of the hotel.

Immediately after the first alarm, pulled at 12:32 a. m., firemen arrived to find the three upper stories of the six-floor brick building ablaze, flames swirling into the sky. Two more alarms were rung in quick succession.

The blaze was believed to have started in Room 603, in which the dead man was found and which was registered to Hull.

Orion Johnson, 37, a clerk in the hotel, was awakened in his sixth-floor room by the fire engine sirens. As he raced through the corridor, he told police, he saw a large fire inside Room 603. Johnson reached the street unhurt.

Fire Sergeant Charles Wolz carried three sixth floor roomers to the street via the extension ladder. These included James Jones, 47, who had been awakened by smoke, phoned the fire department, and rushed about awakening other lodgers; W. J. Miller, and a woman who declined to give her name.

Rescued from the fourth floor was Martin Davis, 39-year-old cab driver, who was not awakened until firemen smashed in his door. They brought him to the ground on a ladder.

Others on the sixth floor who made their way through the flame and smoke were Jack Pickard, 23, of Charlotte, N. C., who fought the fire with a hand extinguisher until he was forced to flee, and Joseph Leach, 73, who was aroused by the engines, then dressed and hurried down the stairs.

Altogether, there were five regular roomers and two transients asleep in the sixth floor. Except for Hull, all were believed to have

U. S. May Lend Convoy Ships To England

Leaders in Congress Say Plan Is Likely If Supplies Fail

By Robert C. Albright
By the United Press

Loan to England of the warships needed to afford safe conduct of American supplies was suggested yesterday as a possible next step in the program of assistance to Britain.

Several influential members of the House and Senate Foreign Relations Committees said they regarded ship loans as a likely alternative to convoys should British supply routes be cut.

These generally took the view that the necessary naval vessels could be lent with the stipulation that, manned by British crews, they be used solely in convoy service between the United States and England.

While administration of the aid law rests with the President, Congressional speculation followed first mention in the British press that aid in transfer of supplies may be needed.

Chairman George of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said the United States will be faced with important decisions if American supply lines are closed to the British, and warship loans may be one of them. The Aid Act empowers the President to lend ships, or transfer them outright. It does not authorize convoys nor does it ban

Britain Asks Norse in U. S. For 100 Ships

Vessels Now Plying American Routes Under Negotiation

Great Britain has asked Norwegian authorities here for 500,000 tons of cargo ships, many of which are now plying American trade routes, it was learned last night.

An urgent request for the tonnage, approximately 100 ships, is now being weighed by the Norwegian Shipping and Trade Mission in New York City, sources here disclosed.

Officials of the mission confirmed that they were negotiating with the British on the matter, but declined to give details on the ground that they were "confidential."

Sir Arthur Salter, British shipping coordinator, is due to arrive in the United States in a few days and is expected to spend considerable energy on securing a favorable Norwegian reply, it was disclosed.

The Norwegian vessels requested, almost all of them swift and modern freighters, are mostly now serving American trade routes. Well informed officials said that 1,700,000 tons of shipping of Norwegian registry are now in such service.

A rising rate of ship losses was the reason for the British plea to their Norwegian allies.

Already, officials said, more than 2,000,000 tons of Norwegian ships are in the British Atlantic war service. Carl J. Hambro, former president of the Norwegian Parliament now living in this country, Something new in the line of Roosevelts has been added to Government with the arrival yesterday of Col. Theodore Roosevelt's debutante grand-daughter, Sarah Alden Derby, of Oyster Bay, Long Island, as a Congressional stenographer.

Tucked behind the typewriter in Representative Joseph Clark Baldwin 3d's office was Congress' first Park Avenue glamour girl, complete with shoulder-length brunette bob, long red fingernails and jingling charm bracelets. The new careerist in the Roosevelt clan who followed Representative Baldwin down from the New York City Council, says, however, she "will not be social in any way."

State Troopers Rout Bethlehem Strikers After Day of Violence

Score Hurt in Riots As Police Help Reopen Chicago Harvester Plant

Strike violence that injured a score of police, demonstrators and would-be workers yesterday marked C. I. O. resistance to a "back-to-work" movement at the International Harvester Co. plant, Chicago.

The day of sporadic disorder at the big plant, next to the Bethlehem Steel disturbances, was the most spectacular side of the picture confronting Federal defense officials firmly endeavoring to keep factories speeding the output of war materials.

Other labor developments:

Two brief work stoppages at the Ford Motor Co.'s River Rouge plant in Michigan were reported, C. I. O. officials saying that 15,000 employes had won a promise of further consideration of complaints, while a similar stoppage by 6,000 workers followed a short time later.

Officials of the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co., at Milwaukee whose production of defense material has been held up for weeks by a C. I. O. strike, started for Washington at the request of Secretary of the Navy Knox. They were bringing a transcript of a State labor board hearing on the strike.

Employes of two plants of the Poeradio Manufacturing Co., St. Charles, Ill., with defense contracts for $1,000,000 in radio parts, struck as an A. F. L. union's demand for a closed shop was rejected.

A jurisdictional dispute caused a shutdown in plumbing work at the immense new Curtiss-Wright aviation plant near the Buffalo, N. Y., airport.

Labor-management negotiators for most of the country's soft coal industry made little progress at New York toward a new contract to replace the one expiring March 31.

Officials at Wilson & Co.'s Cedar Rapids, Iowa, packing plant insisted that 700 of their 1,600 employes were working despite a strike, but a C. I. O. agent declared only 75 were in the plant.

Chairman Mary Norton, of the House Labor Committee, called on employers and labor for "a supreme effort" to settle differences in defense industries. Senator Thomas (Democrat), Utah, voiced a similar plea, while opposing antistrike legislation.

The effort to reopen the I. H. C. plant at Chicago saw many workers streaming back to work, despite the C. I. O. picketing. Company officials said 3,800 of the normal 5,300-man day shift had returned, but C. I. O. leaders said the number was not more than 600.

Some workers, desiring to return to their jobs, were said to have marched with the pickets until they reached positions near plant gates, whence they dashed into the plant.

Public Thinks Union Chiefs Slow Defense

This is the second of five reports by the Gallup Poll on the public's attitude toward labor.

By Dr. George Gallup
Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., March 25.—Evidence that American labor unions face a real public relations problem in connection with National Defense is revealed in a nation-wide public opinion survey by the institute. A substantial majority of voters from coast to coast interviewed in the study believe that labor union leaders are not helping the National Defense production program as much as they should, and that, by comparison, business and industrial leaders are cooperating to a much greater extent.

The public may be wholly misguided in this attitude. It is possible that labor leaders could produce facts to show that they are trying to help defense production just as much as any business leaders. But from the standpoint of labor's public relations, the important fact is that, rightly or wrongly, a substantial section of

New Mediation Board Issues Peace Appeal

Chairman Dykstra Hints U. S. May Draft Balky Industries

By Joseph Driscoll.
Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

An appeal to labor and industry to avoid strikes which delay the national defense program was made yesterday as President Roosevelt's new 11-man National Defense Mediation Board held its first meeting and discussed what action to take to settle pending strikes and prevent additional strikes from breaking out all over the country.

"This is a time of world crisis," the board's chairman, Clarence A. Dykstra, said in a formal statement.

If the United States is to be an "arsenal for democracy," as President Roosevelt has promised it would be, then said Dykstra, "there must be an uninterrupted flow of production from mine, mill and factory."

The board's chairman made it plain that both labor and managemen will be asked to settle disputes around a conference table rather than with pickets and tear gas, and that agreements must be reached "before production is halted" rather than afterward.

One of the strongest weapons in the hands of the board is the mobilization of public opinion to head off strikes which jeopardize the Nation's defenses. Hinting in this direction, Dykstra said that in the

Steel Town Tense; Union May Seek An Injunction To Protect Pickets

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Bethlehem, Pa., March 25.—In a three-minute street clearing action, 150 State troopers, dispersed picket lines at the Bethlehem Steel Co.'s parent plant here tonight, and changed what had been a carnival scene into a field of brief but bitter battle.

The troopers, emerging on a signal from the plant gates, sent thousands of strikers and spectators milling and stumbling from the 4-mile street which parallels the plant.

Their former pubilance turned to fierce sullenness, the strikers gathered on the hills overlooking the plant and for two hours smashed lights and hurled stones and rocks down intersecting streets into the cleared thoroughfare below.

Although they roped off routes through which nonunion workers would have to pass if they were to go back to their jobs on the 11 o'clock shift, a threatened epidemic of mass violence failed to materialize and the deadline hour passed without further incident.

As a result of the two-hour action, however, in which strikers made occasional sorties to reach the plant gates, a dozen demonstrators were hospitalized with cuts and cracked heads.

Union May Seek Injunction

Leaders of the 36-hour-old strike, the largest and most threatening of all disputes in defense industries, gathered immediately to consider action, probably in the nature of an injunction against police opposition to picketing.

John V. Riffe, assistant director of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, countered the police action with a repetition of his determination to "maintain a picket line," which he termed a constitutional right of the strikers.

Strikers Overturn Cars

The day's violence, all of a sporadic nature, began at 6 a. m., when a Bethlehem policeman hurled a tear gas bomb at demonstrators before one of the gates. A striker picked it up before it exploded and hurled it back.

The most serious incident occurred at 1 p. m. when strikers overturned a police car, mauled the two occupants, one seriously, and bore away a tear gas gun in triumph.

Later in the evening, about 30 cars were overturned in parking lots near the main gate of the plant, and left lying in neat rows on their sides. One, however, was neatly tipped upside down.

The troopers called to the scene by the Northampton County sheriffs carried 4-foot night sticks, and wore the "hard hats" of London's bobbies. Some were mounted. Gathered in groups of three or four along the entire west side of the great plant, they allowed traffic to move on the streets, but permitted no gatherings of strikers in the main road, except behind the closed doors of all-night coffee shops.

Observers here did not minimize the seriousness of the strike in its

Oil-Fed Fire Trapped 18 Below Decks, Tanker Survivors Say

Beaufort, N. C., March 25.—One seaman was dead tonight and 18 others were feared lost after the explosion and fire which left the 9,316-ton Cities Service oil tanker Denver a smoldering hulk afloat off the North Carolina coast.

Oscar J. Degerstedt, of Two Harbors, Minn., most seriously injured of 22 crew members who escaped from the blazing ship and were rescued by Coast Guardsmen early today, died tonight in a Morehead City, N. C., hospital.

Meanwhile, Winfield George Campbell, 25, of Portland, Me., still in the hospital with severe burns, said the blast "might have been caused by faulty wiring" or "from fumes that ignited when someone struck a match in the crew's quarters."

Campbell's statement was the first indication as to what might have caused the terrific explosion that struck the tanker at 10:06 p. m. last night about 80 miles south of Cape Lookout, N. C., in a crowded shipping lane.

(In Washington, Capt. R. S. Field, of the Department of Commerce Marine Inspection Bureau, ordered an inquiry to seek the cause of the explosion. The inquiry will be held in New York Thursday after arrival of surviving members of the crew.)

Seventeen survivors, including Degerstedt and Campbell, were landed here during the morning by

Willkie Hopes For Post-War Confederation

By James A. Hagerty

Copyright by New York Times

Montreal, March 25.—Hope that after the present war the United States and the British commonwealth of nations might be joined in a great confederacy of democratic states so that the curse of Hitlerism would never occur again was expressed tonight by Wendell L. Willkie.

He made a farewell speech at the railroad station to a crowd of nearly 20,000 gathered to express their appreciation of his visit to Canada and his help in arousing American sentiment for all-out aid to Britain.

The vast throng, which turned out in a drizzly rain, cheered Mr. and Mrs. Willkie repeatedly, as they entered the station to the strains of the stirring Sousa march, "The Stars and Stripes Forever." The Second Battalion of the Black Watch, wearing their Scottish kilts, presented arms as Willkie went to a speaker's stand that had been erected in the station. As a military band played, the crowd joined in singing in succession "The Star-Spangled Banner, "O, Canada," and "God Bless the King."

As the crowd shouted "We want Willkie!" he leaped to the railing of the platform and stood upon it with outstretched arms so that all might see him.

"Mrs. Willkie and I have been much moved by the generous reception the people of Montreal have given us," he said.

Dedicated to Mission

"I have dedicated my life in these times to arousing sentiment for liberty and its preservation in this world. Liberty is the most precious thing in the world and must be preserved.

"Perhaps tonight in London bombs are raining down on people who love liberty just as much as you and I do. Is there anybody in Montreal, in Canada, or in the United States, who does not feel an absolute compulsion to uphold those who are defending liberty, not alone on their first line of defense, but on our first line?"

Willkie then made a plea for quick completion of the drive for $5,500,000 for the Associated War Services of Canada.

"I want everyone in Britain to know how you feel about it and I want Hitler and his crew to know how you feel about it," he continued.

"I am going back to the United States much heartened and to preach wherever I can the doctrine of liberty and the necessity for its preservation.

"And when the war is over, I hope we can all remain joined in a great confederacy of democratic states so that this curse will never occur again."

Praises Churchill

In a speech at a luncheon of the Canadian Club at the Windsor Hotel, Willkie had declared that the test in the world today was whether the political, business and labor leadership in the democratic nations had the capacity and character to measure up to what was required in these critical times.

Criticizing past political leadership of the democracies as inefficient and futile, Willkie brought cheers by saying that Great Britain had found its political leadership in Winston Churchill. The war could not be won, however, by political leadership alone, he added. He also criticized the business leadership of the last 20 years, saying it only had sought "to pile dollar on to dollar."

Willkie said that this war was a war of production and a test of whether the democratic free enterprise system could outproduce the totalitarian enslaved method of production. He declared that it was the boast of merchants that the United States was the greatest producing nation in the world, and said it was up to the businessmen of America to prove it.

Touching lightly on labor difficulties in the United States, Willkie said he knew most of the labor leaders and that they were patriotic men and that he did not know one who would not sacrifice all for liberty.

"But labor leadership," he continued, "must exert the responsibility and idealism of labor that will permit political leadership, business and labor leadership to say: 'Yes, yes, the democratic world can produce so as to make the totalitarian world seem like toy manufacturers'."

Aid Bill Sped to President

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

SPECIAL COURIER—Postal Inspector L. J. orders) for Great Britain and her Allies.

Congressional action on the Allied aid appropriation was completed shortly before 1 p. m., when Vice President Wallace signed the measure. Speaker Rayburn had affixed his signature a few minutes earlier in the presence of the House.

The bill was delivered to the White House posthaste by H. V. Husselman, clerk of the House Enrolling Committee, and at 3:45 was placed on an Eastern Airline plane bound for Miami. Postal Inspector Louis J. White had charge of the document and it will be taken from Miami either by Navy or Coast Guard plane to the President's yacht off the Florida coast.

The act only awaits the signature of the President to become law. Officials were not waiting those formalities, however. They were hard at work planning the necessary steps to put it into full force, and particularly to consolidate American and British purchases, which has been contemplated from the inception of the least-lend idea.

Defense administrators, including Secretaries Stimson and Knox and Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, told a Senate Appropriations subcommittee last week that as soon as the new act was put into full effect, separate orders for war materials by this country and the British would cease. From then on, they said, all purchases would be contracted for by the United States Government and distribution made after manufacture by the President's intra-Cabinet "defense ministry," composed of Secretaries Hull, Morgenthau, Stimson and Knox.

In its breakdown of defense authorizations and proposals in the United States, amounting to $39,177,800,000 since June, 1940, the OPM disclosed that the total actual outlay by the Treasury through March 17 of this year, was only $3,452,000,000. The OPM went on to show, however, that the rate of expenditure is now near $700,000,000 a month—$403,000,000 for the first 17 days of March—and other officials have calculated that the monthly rate will be close to $1,000,000,000 by the beginning of the new fiscal year on July 1.

The OPM's figure of total cash outlay to date included military expenditures of the War Department but not those for the Panama Canal and the Navy, or payments from the President's defense fund and the cost of administering the Selective Service law.

Of the approximately $40,000,000,000 in the American defense program (this includes the $7,000,000,000 lease-lend outlay), $29,912,600,000 has been covered by appropriations and contract authorizations, the OPM said. The additional $9,265,200,000 is proposed in the budget for the fiscal year 1942 (July 1, 1941, to June 30, 1942), and in bills now before Congress.

Further analysis of the OPM figures, under the heading of "Other U. S. Agencies" and "Defense Loans," revealed the extent to which branches of the Government other than the Army and Navy are participating or are expected to participate, in the defense program. This compilation lumped existing and proposed appropriations and authorizations, and showed that construction of merchant vessels, building of industrial facilities and erection of new housing are the principal fields in which other departments are assisting the services in the preparedness drive.

Bill Reaches Miami

Miami, Fla., March 25 (AP).—The $7,000,000,000 lend-lease appropriation bill was brought to Miami tonight and lodged for safekeeping overnight in a postoffice vault. It will be flown by Navy plane tomorrow to the White House yacht Potomac for President Roosevelt's signature.

ultimate effect not only on pending negotiations for wage increases throughout the steel industry, but also on the C. I. O. organized field conferences.

If the strike is broken here, it was freely admitted, SWOC bargaining power throughout the entire steel industry will be seriously jeopardized. Similarly, there were indications that employer groups considered the Bethlehem strike a test case which might have significant bearing on the future course of labor relations in defense industries.

Spread of the strike to the Bethlehem mills in Johnstown, Pa., appeared imminent as a mass meeting of C. I. O. members at that plant voted to quit work if the Employes' Representation Plan, rival union organization, attempts to hold a scheduled election there. It was such an election that touched off the strike resulting disorder here.

Meanwhile, the company appeared to be preparing for a siege, as it moved to provide sleeping and eating facilities for those workers remaining in the plant. A half dozen railroad dining cars had been turned into field kitchens within the company property.

The State police were sent here after Sheriff W. Calvin Nnickle wired Gov. Arthur H. James he was "unable to control the situation with men at my disposal." The message was sent after turmoil that included the pelting of local police with some of their own tear gas bombs taken from them by the strikers.

Later the Governor telegraphed the United States Mediation Board at Washington urging that it step in at Bethlehem "to relieve the threat of serious rioting and serious delay to defense work." Bethlehem has more than $1,000,000,000 of defense contracts.

"The value of the Mediation Board can be demonstrated," James told the board, "in its constructive efforts to settle this strike. Your board is the final court of appeal which every American hopes will justify its creation by its success in this matter."

Fears that the strike would spread to other plants of the mamomth company, engaged in work on $1,500,000,000 of defense orders, were confirmed as Howard T. Curtis, former Presbyterian minister who is the SWOC regional director here, read telegrams of support from other locals in the Bethlehem system.

House Votes Permanent Reports Office

By Hedley Donovan

Post Staff Writer

The House yesterday passed and sent to the Senate legislation giving permanent status to the Office of Government Reports and authorizing an annual appropriation of $1,500,000 for the agency. The vote was 200 to 144.

The roll call came after three hours of debate marked by Republican charges that the reports office is a "propaganda agency" and potential instrument of censorship.

Representative Cochran (Democrat), Missouri, replied that "the fight is not on this bill—it's a renewal of the fight against the President of the United States."

The bill would establish the Reports Office as a permanent part of the executive office of the President. Since its establishment in 1933 the agency has been operated with funds allocated from emergency relief appropriations.

Representative Whittington Democat), of Mississippi, said critics of the Reports Office had not produced "a single scrap of evidence" supporting the charges that the agency has disseminated propaganda.

A former newspaper reporter, Representative Boggs (Democrat), of Louisiana, in answer to the assertion that the bill carries a censorship threat, said that no publishers or newspapermen had appeared before the House Committee on Expenditures in Executive Departments to oppose the measure.

Representative Bender (Republican), of Ohio, said the purpose of the bill is to entrench in the Government "an agency whose major purpose will be the perpetuation in power of the Administration which creates it."

From Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, came an assertion that passage of the bill would be the first step toward restriction of freedom of the press.

escaped unhurt.

Because the flames menaced the rear of the building next door, 608 F Street, firemen climbed a fire escape and awakened two third floor occupants, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Puccinelli, and brought them to the street.

Twenty-five engines and other apparatus were called, as well as police scout cars and motorcycles from five precincts. Police reserves also were called out as approximately 1,000 onlookers gathered.

declared recently that there were more Norwegian merchant marine sailors in the war area than British sailors.

When the war began Norway had the fourth largest merchant fleet, numbering 4,308 vessels of 4,756,000 total gross tonnage. Much of this is still in control of "free" Norwegians, either here or in London, despite German occupation of their homeland. Submarine depredations have probably reduced the fleet several hundred thousand tons.

No answer has yet been worked out to the problem of how the ships would be replaced if they were taken off American trade routes for British war service.

The pinch in demand for shipping space is now at its height, officials explain. British and American needs are growing daily, the toll of U-boat warfare is rising and still the 200 "ugly duckling" ships of the emergency construction program are only on order. Virtually all the over-age tonnage held by the Maritime Commission has already been bought by the British. Other remaining sources of tonnage are United States intercoastal shipping and Great Lakes shipping and officials are now studying these vessels with an eye to possible transfers to Great Britain.

Negotiations between private American and German shipowners to buy up 31 Nazi vessels in this hemisphere are still under way and some announcement is expected soon.

The Maritime Commission, meanwhile, forged ahead yesterday with the work of letting contracts for the "ugly duckling" vessels. The commission announced that the Office of Production Management had cleared contracts for all but 38 of the 200-ship program. Contracts for the remainder will be signed soon, the announcement said.

The four contracts for 137 vessels awarded yesterday were:

Bethlehem - Fairfield Shipyard Inc., Baltimore, 50 ships at a total estimated base construction cost of $75,000,000.

Oregon Shipbuilding Co., Portland, 31 ships at an estimated base construction cost of $46,500,000.

California Shipbuilding Co., Los Angeles, 31 ships at an estimated base construction cost of $46,500,000.

Houston Shipbuilding Co., Houston, Tex., 25 ships at an estimated base construction cost of $37,500,000.

U. S. May Lend Convoy Ships to British

George, who led the Senate lend-lease fight, expressed doubt that the President would use American naval vessels for convoy purposes without submitting the question to Congress for decision.

Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, who hinted the Administration's "all out" aid policy far in advance of the lend bill, said loan of vessels for convoy purposes is one of several steps that may be needed to insure the main objective of British survival.

"We have decided on the strategy," said Pepper. "We are not going to let England be captured or destroyed. The rest is a question of tactics."

Asked whether Britain had crews available trained to man American ships, Pepper said he assumed there is a surplus in crews from ships already lost. Transfer of the original 50 destroyers, he said, had demonstrated British seamen can swiftly adapt themselves to American equipment.

Representative Luther Johnson (Democrat), of Texas, ranking member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, said he regarded loan of naval vessels for British convoy use as one means of averting American convoys.

Senator George in an interview said the matter of safe conduct for American supplies will become increasingly pressing as the German counterblockade intensifies.

"It is of course possible," he said, "that we may never have to make the decision. We will know in my opinion in April or May."

He said he thought England would have an opportunity in that time to demonstrate whether she can keep her Atlantic sea lanes open.

If an emergency arose he said the United States under the Lend-Lease Act could lend Britain a certain number of destroyers and other ships for exclusive operation in convoy service by British crews.

Pointing out that the Lend-Lease Act expressly fought shy of the question of convoys, George said:

"Though the President may have that authority under the Constitution, I am quite convinced in my own mind that if the emergency became so great they were needed, he would lay the question directly before Congress. If a decision on convoys must be made, Congress probably would be asked to make it. It may never have to be made."

Senator Pepper listed transfer of American vessels to England for convoy service third among "tactical" steps in aid of Britain.

The first, "let them have supplies and take responsibility for deliveries," he said, has already been taken.

Pepper's second step: "Furnish additional merchant vessels."

And his third: "Let them have the means for safeguarding the goods in transit."

In addition to destroyers, Pepper said he would loan England to safeguard her deliveries, bombing planes, airplane carriers, and possibly some submarines and cruisers "and a battleship."

"It isn't necessary that we operate the ships if England has the crews," Pepper said.

"We have said that England must not falter. That is the strategy. Everything else is tactics. We have resolved to exhaust every effort to save England with materials. We are sparing nothing to achieve that purpose. If the tactics that may be adopted to achieve the strategy have to be revised, that is just detail. The question of whether we must use convoys comes under tactics. The important thing is—we have decided we are not going to let England be destroyed."

Public Blames Union Chiefs in Defense

the public has formed the impression that labor leaders are cooperating less than they should.

The evidence is contained in the vote on three issues put to a national cross-section of persons who voted, or who were eligible to vote, in the last presidential election. In order to test their attitude toward labor leaders in relation to defense, the institute asked this question:

"Do you think labor union leaders are helping the National Defense production program as much as they should?"

The vote follows:

YES	18%
NO OPINION	14

As a test of the attitude toward business or industrial leaders in the same connection, this question was asked:

"Do you think industrial (business) leaders are helping the National Defense production program as much as they should?"

The vote is:

YES	51%
NO OPINION	18

Finally, voters were asked to state which of the two—labor leaders or business leaders—are the more willing to help defense production.

"Which do you think is trying harder to help national defense production—labor union leaders, or industrial leaders?"

The results are:

INDUSTRIAL LEADERS	56
BOTH THE SAME	16
NO OPINION	18

A noteworthy fact in the above results is that, although the public attitude toward business leaders is on the whole more favorable, nonetheless a substantial minority (31 per cent) finds fault with business leaders as well. It is a situation in which the people are not wholly satisfied with either type of leaders insofar as helping defense productoin is concerned.

William Green, of the A. F. of L., and Philip Murray, of the C. I. O., will find, if they investigate, that a sizable proportion of the rank and file of labor union members themselves believe that union leaders are not helping defense production as much as they should. Of the labor union members reached in the sample, or cross-section, 40 per cent, or two-fifths, say union leaders fail to cooperate sufficiently with the defense program, while 43 per cent have no fault to find and 17 per cent express no opinion.

In the first article of the Institute's current series on labor, published early this week, it was shown that a majority of American voters are not satisfied with the progress of defense production and they lay the chief blame for this on strikes and the failure of some labor unions to cooperate with the defense program.

FRIDAY—The Gallup Poll will continue its series of articles on public opinion and labor with another report Friday, showing what the public thinks is the chief argument in favor of labor unions, and the chief argument against.

Marine Union Is Communist, Dies Charges

By the Associated Press

Chairman Dies (Democrat), of Texas, of the House Committee Investigating un-American Activities, told the House yesterday that the National Maritime Union was "a completely dominated Communist organization."

Dies, calling on the Federal Administration and unions "to drive Communists from their ranks, and employment," inserted in the Congressional Record exhibits which he said proved his contentions.

"The N. M. U.," he said, "had its roots in the Marine Workers Industrial Union. The M. W. I. U. was one of the affiliated unions in the Trade Union Unity League which was an out-and-out Communist Party Federation of Labor organization. The Trade Union Unity League was headed by William Z. Foster and was affiliated internationally with the Red International of Labor Unions with headquarters in Moscow."

Refers to Curran

"The Marine Workers Industrial Union," said Dies, "never sought to conceal its connections with the Communist Party and other Communist-controlled groups."

Joseph Curran, head of the C. I. O.'s National Martime Union, said Dies, "was among those, in the early days, who frankly charged the N. M. U. with domination by the Communist Party."

Asserting that two "prominent" figures in the recent Harvill plant strike at Inglewood, Calif., were Communists, Representative Starnes (Democrat), of Alabama, told the House that it was "shameful" to ask managers of American defense industries to bargain collectively with such "so-called labor leaders."

The two he named were Kenneth Eggert and Ralph Dawson. He said they were actively engaged in strike work under auspices of the C. I. O. The strike was settled yesterday.

Charges Purpose of Sabotage

Starnes, a member of the Dies committee, said Eggert until recently was the section organizer for the Communist Party in Toledo, Ohio. He added that he had been sent to the Pacific Coast "for the express purpose of sabotage in the aircraft industry."

The Dies committee, Starnes said, had learned that Eggert was trained "under the very shadow of the Kremlin for the work which he has been doing in the California aircraft industry under the auspices of the C. I. O."

Starnes read a telegram from Dies committee investigators in Los Angeles in which Dawson was said to have a criminal record including arrests for strike agitation, assault, criminal syndicalism and escape from custody.

Striker, Worse for Wear, Is Carried Away

HIS HEAD HURTS—One of several persons whose heads were cracked by police when they broke up a parade of C. I. O. strikers and sympathizers yesterday near the International Harvester Co. McCormick works in Chicago is carried away by other paraders. Numerous fights flared as A. F. of L. workers went back to their jobs after C. I. O. strike

New Post Reported For Mrs. Harriman

Reports were circulated today that Mrs. Florence Jaffray Harriman, former Minister to Norway, would be selected soon as the first American Minister to New Zealand. However, it was stated officially that no selection had definitely been made.

It is expected that the appointment will fall to a noncareer diplomat. It will complete United States diplomatic representation to the British Dominions.

threatened last night to strike all plants of the I. H. C., in retaliation for reopening of the McCormick works at Chicago.

Plant officials said 3,800 workers, chiefly A. F. L. members, of the normal 5,300-man shift reported for work yesterday, but C. I. O. leaders said not more than 700 entered the plant.

At the same time a War Department report disclosed that there were 19 strikes tying up 25,035 workers on Army contracts alone as of Monday. It said that 1,085,545 man days of labor had been lost since January 1 through strikes in factories working on Army contracts.

Aside from the new strike at the Bethlehem Steel Co., with its $1,000,000,000 of defense work, the Army and Navy were reported principally concerned over the Allis-Chalmers strike near Milwaukee, where 7,800 men have been out since February 22. C. I. O. automobile workers seek a union shop, wage increase and seniority adjustments. This strike was reported to be holding up equipment vitally needed in he Navy's destroyer-building program and turbo-generators for the Army's new powder plant at Radford, Va.

Providence, R. I., March 25 (AP).—Brig. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, wage-hour administrator, said tonight that mothers of inducted and enlisted men of the armed forces may force Congress to take recognition of losses caused by strikes in defense industries.

Gen. Fleming said that members of Congress were receiving heavy mail from parents of selective and other service men demanding to know why high-wage workers should be permitted to tie up defense plants by strikes for higher wages when youths were being conscripted for a year at $21 a month.

Milwaukee, Wis., March 25 (INS).—Officials of the C. I. O. United Auto Workers local which is striking against the big Allis-Chalmers plant in Milwaukee admitted tonight that irregular ballots were cast in the strike vote, but reiterated their determination to "continue the strike and win it."

Company attorneys charged before the State Labor Board that 1,800 irregular ballots were discovered by handwriting experts. The union admitted the irregularities, and in a statement to strikers declared it will "expose and punish those who participated in the acts" of fraud.

Mediation Board Meets, Gives Aims

American democracy "public opinion is of decisive importance," and he expressed the hope that the public would support the board in its insistence that all factions subordinate "purely private or personal interest" to the welfare of the country as a whole.

Dykstra hinted at the possibility that recalcitrant industries may be "drafted" into the national defense program if they persist in their unwillingness to cooperate on a voluntary basis.

Talking to reporters, the board chairman recalled that the Selective Service law, which he administered until he resigned to take over his present position, included a provision authorizing the President to draft balky industries. He said he assumed that his Mediatoin Board "can make whatever recommendations it feels are warranted by the facts, and that includes the draft-industry clause."

However, he said he hoped that such extreme compulsion would not be required and that labor and management would work together as a team to carry out the President's program.

Atmosphere of Gravity

The Mediation Board's first meeting was held in an atmosphere of gravity, intensified by the start of a strike at the Bethlehem Steel Co. plant at Bethlehem, Pa.

During a recess for lunch, Dykstra told reporters that he believed one provision of President Roosevelt's order creating the board imposed a "cooling off" period designed to avert strikes. The provision to which he called attention specifies that employers and employes should give to the conciliation service of the Department of Labor and to the Office of Production Management "notice in writing of any desired change in existing agreements, wages or working conditions" and "such sufficient advance notice of any threatened interruptions to continuous production."

The cooling-off period, he explained, would give the Labor Department's conciliation service ample time to settle labor disputes before certifying the "unadjustable" ones over to the Mediation Board.

The latter group, according to Dykstra, agreed after considerable discussion that it can take up no cases except those certified to it by the Labor Department. None has been certified as yet.

"Open for Business"

Dykstra said he did not know when any cases would be certified to the board but he said his organization was "open for business." He said it would reconvene as quickly as it got its first case, which might come before the end of this week.

Before adjourning, the board appointed William H. Davis, of New York, as vice chairman, and Ernest P. Marsh as temporary executive secretary.

Sitting in as advisers on yesterday's session were Sidney Hillman, associate director of the Office of Production Management; Charles V. McLaughlin and Daniel W. Tracy, assistant secretaries of labor, and Dr. John R. Steelman, head of the labor department's conciliation service. They gave the new board a complete list of current labor disputes.

Hillman outlined to the board some of the problems involved in 400 labor disputes which have come to the attention of the OPM steel man reported that 98 per cent of labor difficulties had been settled without stoppages.

Members of the board attending the meeting, which was described as "mainly organizational," were:

Representing the public—Chairman Dykstra, president of the University of Wisconsin on leave; William H. Davis, of New York, patent attorney, and Frank P. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina.

Representing employes—George Meany, general secretary of the American Federation of Laber; Philip Murray, president of the C. I. O.; Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers, and Harrison, of the Railway Brotherhood.

Representing employers—Walter C. Teagle, former president of Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey; Roger D. Lapham, president of the American Hawaiian Steamship Co.; Eugene Meyer, editor and publisher of The Washington Post, and Cyrus S. Ching, vice president of the United States Rubber Corporation.

Mrs. Bard Named Mine-Layer's Sponsor

Secretary Knox yesterday designated Mrs. Ralph A. Bard, wife of Assistant Secretary of the Navy Bard, as sponsor of the mine layer Terror.

The Terror is scheduled to be launched during the first week of June at the Philadelphia Navy Yard. Mrs. Bard lives at 2311 Connecticut Avenue.

Stimson Drafts Dillon to Head Transportation

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Secretary Stimson yesterday drafted Col. Theodore H. Dillon, an official of the Carnegie Institution here, to serve as transportation chief of the Army.

Dillon, a former Army officer, college professor and traffic executive of the United Fruit Co., will head the transportation division of the Office of the Quartermaster General. The post, normally filled by a ranking officer of the Regular Army, has been unfilled for several months.

The assignment taken over yesterday by Col. Dillon, the War Department said, involves the control and coordination of all Army traffic moving by any commercial means, supervision of troop transportation moving by commercial routes, and the procurement and operation of the Army's "navy."

The Army Transport Service, which Dillon will direct, now numbers 30 large troop transports and freighters, besides numerous smaller craft. A large proportion of the ships have been added to the military fleet since last year. Two additional Dollar liners, one vessel of the United States Lines and numerous smaller craft will be purchased under a $23,509,000 appropriation now pending before Congress.

Col. Dillon, a West Pointer, served in the Regular Army from 1900 to 1919. He was deputy chief engineer of the First Army in France and won the Distinguished Service Medal for handling troop transportation at the front. He was a technical adviser to the American Peace Commission in Paris.

After the war, Dillon became a professor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Later he served as professor of public utility management at Harvard Business School and from 1926 to 1936 was assistant to the president of the United Fruit Co. After operating South American mines for three years, he became director of the office of publications and public relations for the Carnegie Institution in 1939. He is married and lives at 2734 Thirty-fourth Place Northwest.

Defense Housing Bill Approved by House

The House completed Congressional action yesterday on legislation authorizing the Federal Housing Administration to insure a maximum of $100,000,000 in mortgages for homes for defense workers.

The measure, technically known as Title Six of the Federal Housing Act, would permit the defense workers to buy the homes directly on a 20-year amortization schedule, or would permit contractors to build them and use monthly rental payments to retire the mortgage.

Bill to Exempt Former Navy Men In Draft Approved

The House Military Affairs Committee yesterday approved a modification in the Selective Service law—the first recommended since passage of the unprecedented measure last summer—which would exempt former Navy men from military training.

Legislation exempting former members of the regular Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard, who served at least three consecutive years, from the required year of military service, was recommended. If the measure becomes law, such men would be liable to serve only in war-time.

"FROM THOROUGHBRED STOCK"
BIT-O KENTUCKY

KENTUCKY STRAIGHT BOURBON WHISKEY
A study in contrasts is offered by two of Kentucky's greatest products—thoroughbreds and whiskey. One is symbolic of speed, and more speed. The other's fame rests on the fact that it has been slowly made, patiently aged, and carefully stored away in specially selected stout white oak casks to mature until it is ready for consumption. Such a whiskey is Bit O' Kentucky, made in the heart of the blue grass country, where whiskey making has been a tradition for generations. May we suggest that you enjoy this whiskey treat now?

Text of Speech by Lord Halifax Predicting Brittsh Victory With U. S. Aid

Invasion Will Fail, He Tells Pilgrims of U. S.

New York, March 25.—The text of the speech of Lord Halifax, British Ambassador, before the Pilgrims of the United States tonight, follows:

My last engagement before leaving England was to meet the Pilgrims at a farewell luncheon given to me on the eve of sailing. And it is in accordance with tradition that the first public speech of a new British Ambassador in this country should be made to the kindly and distinguished audience of the Pilgrims of the United States.

I confess that one of my earliest feelings on appointment as Ambassador to the United States was a tremor of apprehension at the number of speeches which I might be expected to make. Nor was it possible for me, except at a price that I should have been reluctant to ask of you, to find relief in the advices once given to me by Lord Balfour when I first entered the House of Commons 30 years ago. I told him that I felt rather like a new boy arriving at a strange school. "My dear fellow," he said, "there is never any need to be nervous in the House of Commons. All you have to do is to speak as often as you can and as long as you can, and you will rapidly lose any sense of mercy for your audience, as every bore always does."

The reason of my coming here is known to you all. I told your fellow Pilgrims in London some of the reasons which had moved me to submit to the King the name of Philip Lothian to be His Majesty's Ambassador at Washington. He came to you indeed as no stranger but as one who already knew and loved your country, and had many good friends among you, and was in especial degree equipped to undertake the task. I little thought at that time that it would fall to me to succeed him after the tragically short period of 16 months.

Served Without Stint

But the value of men's work and lives is not to be measured in length of days, and I do not hesitate to say that the year that Lothian spent here was the most formative and important of his life. He had long prepared unconsciously for it, and when the opportunity came, he gave himself without stint to that which is the purpose of your society, the cause of better understanding between our peoples. The fruits of his labor stand today for all the world to see. He would not, I think, have wished any better monument.

Seldom before in the world's history can so much have depended on that understanding—and for that reason the prime minister rightly described this post "as the most important at this time which any British subject can occupy outside the United Kingdom."

Nor is the reason far to seek why recent months have seen a steady drawing together of the thought of our two countries. You and we have felt from the outset set that the instinctive reaction of our two peoples to the challenge offered by the new philosophy of totalitarian dictatorship must be identical. As the struggle has grown more intense, reason and conscience have combined to make us both realize even more clearly the dark menace to things that are equally precious to your country and to to mine.

This common purpose has been sealed anew by the recent passage into law of the Lease-Lend Act. It is difficult to exaggerate what this means, across the seas, in the front line, which is Britain, as in the hearts of those submerged for a time under the German wave, there will be felt new confidence; in the camp of the enemy new doubts; as all alike remember the history of the last war and see the time surely approaching when the weight of this Nation must tip the scales.

And if we have felt able, as we have, to count upon the increasing support of your moral and industrial partnership in this business, we hope that you too have seen the bearing of the British people to be such as you would have expected from your own people if they were similarly placed.

Certainly, as personality often lingers where at some forgotten time has been stamped the mark of deep human feeling, so day by day the number of those places grows, which will long speak to any Englishman of the courage and self-sacrifice that they have seen.

Principles in Peril

We are wont to say that we are fighting for freedom and for democracy—for freedom, as the quality of life that we desire; for democracy as the system of government which is at once its best expression and the surest guarantee for its protection.

What do we mean when we use these large words?

I can only tell you what I mean, and what I know my fellow countrymen mean, even if they do not always translate it into precise language; and I do not think you will take any different view.

There seem to us to be certain principles that are essential to life and we wish to live it and see it lived. These principles are now in dire peril, and we believe therefore that we are truly fighting for our lives, since life to us is worthless if the principles on which it is built are to be destroyed.

We do well to remind ourselves of what these principles are. They, like the iceberg, of which the greater part is out of sight, lie deep below the surface of man's outward being.

I would state thus what in varying forms is in many minds today:

First, the religious principle of the absolute value of every human soul.

Second, the moral principle of respect for personality and conscience.

Third, the social principle of individual liberty. This finds its expression in two ways; in the sphere of politics through equal opportunity, justice, and the rule of law; economically, through the direction of national effort to the creation of conditions that may bring some real security into the daily life of the humblest citizen.

And finally, the domestic principle of the sanctity and solidarity of the family, which is the natural development of the individual.

Basis for Happiness

Unless we build on these foundations—religious, moral, social and domestic—we have no hope of finding the way to happiness.

It is only by slow process that man has learned to apprehend these principles. They have come to him by Chirstianity and by other great religions. They have drawn vitality from the best of human thought throughout the centuries. For us they are expressed and protected by democracy, and that is why we value it. There are, of course, other nations, who have different systems of government, but who are not less concerned than ourselves to secure the way of life which these principles reflect. And this is because it is on their maintenance that rights fundamental to human life and progress plainly rest.

From those principles, I believe, derive rights that, following your Declaration of Independence more than 150 years ago, and following also that historic speech of your President ten days ago, I would assert for all men today:

The right to think, speak and act freely within the law and have free access to the thoughts of others;

The right of free association, both national and international, with their fellow men;

The right to live without fear of aggression, injutscie or want;

The right to believe and worship as conscience may dictate.

It is the vindication of those rights that men passionately desire.

It has sometimes been suggested that the tradition of freedom in western Europe is a recent growth. But the heroic struggle for popular government, continuously waged since the early Middle Ages, in my own country, as in almost every part of Europe, proves conclusively how old and how widely rooted is the idea of freedom.

America is the creation of men who so valued freedom that they called a new world into being in order to maintain it. The British Commonwealth has grown in an atmosphere of freedom and has developed the principle and practice of self-government. We see the fruits of it in the march of free men from the four corners of the earth, men whose loyalty to the common crown—for them the symbol of liberty—has brought them to fight by sea, and land, and air, at our side today.

Nazi System Is Bondage

Now there is no inch of common ground between those who accept and reject these principles, or assert and deny these rights.

The Nazi system is bondage, bodily and spiritual; political and economic.

According to Nazi philosophy, the state both may and must claim the whole allegiance of man's body and soul. Truth, conscience, mercy, honor, justice, love; where these clash with what is held to be the overriding interest of the state, they are regarded by Hitler as offenses.

As Hitler plans the world under his so-called "new order," it would be divided into Germans, the master race, and other nations, second class peoples with rights and interests subordinated to the ruling caste.

For Europe such a system involves the shackling of industry and commerce, ruthless compulsion in place of free contract, and the permanent enslavement of all peoples.

But German ambitions do not stop at Europe. Already Hitler is scheming to overrun great tracts of Africa and Asia.

Across what have now becmoe the Straits of Dakar the invader of Africa, if he could once establish undisputed mastery of Europe, could swiftly pounce upon your Latin neighbors to the south. The American continent, a standing challenge to German domination, could be attacked before it had time to arm in self defense. In any case the doors of trade in Europe, Asia and Africa would be closed to it except on terms laid down by Germany.

Would Hitler attempt this last and greatest act of highway robbery? We cannot tell. Some will advance arguments against the likelihood of his so acting; he might indeed achieve much the same result without actual armed attack. Others may surely feel with great force that where national security is involved it is not enough to rest upon a disputed balance of probability. We in Great Britain had to answer much the same question for ourselves. I have no doubt that at the price of allowing Hitler to work his will in Europe we could at any time in the last few years have temporarily reached an understanding between the British Commonwealth and the German Reich.

Likened to Cancer

But, quite apart from the morality of any such arrangement, what would have been the assurance of its durability? Lust for power is like a cancer that must constantly extend its ravages, and with all the experience we had had, I have no doubt in my own mind that any such agreement would only have served to establish Hitler in a position of still greater strength to attack the British Commonwealth at his own selected moment. And certainly no pact or treaty ever made with Hitler, who has broken nearly every international promise he has ever made, would either have been, or be worth any more than all the others made in all good faith by his European victims.

I am not surprised, therefore, that the overwhelming sense of your people should be to reject the new dispensation that with all its inevitable consequences Hitler seeks to impose upon the world.

It is sometimes suggested that the evil things against which we strive are less black than they appear. We are but witnessing today, so runs the argument, one of those titanic outbursts of human energy that since the dawn of history have blazed the path of progress. As then, so now, time will purge the dross, until from the ashes new truth, new beauty spring.

Such judgment takes no account of the stark realities with which we are faced. This struggle is a mortal clash of two philosophies, and we only delude ourselves if we suppose that the civilization that we share with you could survive a Nazi victory. It is not only with physical invasion that you or I are concerned, but with a spiritual invasion which, if permitted, would work greater havoc than all the tons of high explosive that it is in the power of the German air force to unload.

For human society is ultimately subject to the same law that in the individual sphere makes it impossible for any man to keep his soul alive if he consciously permits his life to reflect contradictory ideals.

That, then, is why we are at war—to save our freedom and the world's freedom from being murdered, as it has been murdered in Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, Norway, Denmark, Holland, Belgium and France. We will never accept Hitler's new order, which is in truth a reversion to the old order before men were civilized, and which would paralyze them again with chains of brutal, selfish and material force. We reject it because, as the President finely said on the 6th of January, we prefer that conception of a moral order based on noble human qualities that Hitler would destroy, by which nations and men can grow to full stature through service freely given to the common good. And so the principal war aim of my people and of those who are fighting with us is to win this life-and-death struggle for the cause of human freedom.

Quotes Churchill

But even the achievement of victory would be Dead Sea fruit unless we can also achieve that which must be the greatest peace aim, of securing the world, so far as it is within human power to do so, against a repetition of this tragedy.

Mr. Churchill, in a moving passage at the end of one of the volumes of the "World Crisis" said:

"Merciful oblivion draws its veils; the crippled limp away; the mourners fall back into the sad twilight of memory. New youth is here to claim its rights, and the perennial stream flows forward even in the battle zone, as if the tale were all a dream.

"Is this the end? Is it to be merely a chapter in a cruel and senseless story? Will our children bleed and gasp again in devastated lands?"

These questions demand an answer today even more insistently than when they were first asked 20 years ago. For on large attempt at general resettlement has crashed in ruins and left the pieces to be put together under conditions of far greater difficulty.

This is not the time to appraise the several elements which have conspired to defraud the deepest hopes of men. It may be argued that the authors of the Treaty of Versailles were overburdened with political problems to the detriment of economic. But, if so, they are not the only people who have made mistakes. We must all acknowledge part of the responsibility for failure, and, if we may, learn wisdom from it.

And when this great battle has been won, the nations which have preserved or regained their freedom will have a sovereign opportunity to show what freedom means, and what it can do for the welfare of mankind.

It is not possible now to draw detailed plans for the future structure of the community of nations. These must naturally await discussion in free council by those concerned. But we are already in a position to see the basis on which agreement must be founded. Nations like individuals can only exist in freedom and security if they are prepared to cooperate for mutual economic welfare, and, if need be, for mutual defense. In the economic sphere indeed, everything depends upon such cooperation. But no party to such an association as we picture will be ambitious to dominate its partners. Every nation, great or small, will have its place and make its own contribution.

Moreover, past experience teaches that a stable international order must admit of ordered change in the relations between states. Just as the liberty of the individual must have regard to the needs of the community, so must every nation in the future accept its obligations to the general family of nations. Rights, whether personal or national, are always morally linked with duties. The spirit that impels a good citizen to give willing service in one form or another to the state will imply for the nation a readiness in both political and economic spheres to consider the welfare of its neighbors.

Bridge of World Unity

We for our part are prepared to join hands with any state which genuinely seeks the peace and prosperity of the world by loyally observing engagements and by insuring individual liberty within its borders. It will be of no value to force unwanted associations upon unwilling nations. We must rather try to create conditions, political and economic, in which there may grow among the peoples themselves a real sense of their community of interest.

In the British Commonwealth of Nations our experience has taught us that nations differing greatly in numbers and wealth, in race and social structure, can yet freely associate together. What has been possible for them is not impossible for others, and the British Commonwealth which, by the quality of its resolutions, is the bastion of world defense today may well by its geographical dispersion become the bridge of greater world unity tomorrow.

In many respects the world must be treated in future as a single whole. Since the last war we have seen an increasing difficulty in securing the distribution of the world's abundance both within and across national frontiers, with adverse effects upon the workers' standard of living everywhere. We had hoped to see the vision of plenty banishing the spectre of scarcity; but what in fact we have seen has been the failure of men to exchange with their fellow men the abundant products of both farm and factory. When therefore victory has been won, it must be our aim to promote the common interest in the greatest possible interchange of goods and services. problems involving common needs can only be solved by common action.

We see the urgent need for economic cooperation, and we are ready to take part in plans to promote it on a world-wide scale. Our aim will be prosperity justly shared. Even now we are making plans to remedy the impoverishment which must follow in the train of war. We are arranging to establish stocks of food and raw materials which can be released as soon as we can be sure that they will be used for this work of healing and not for our destruction.

This business of rebuilding after the war will be a task far beyond the strength of any single country. Great Britain is resolved to do her utmost, but it is clear that if the world is to be brought back to health after so devastating a sickness, it will only be by the united action of all men and all nations of good will.

It will not be easy, for we may be very sure that the upheaval now convulsing the nations will not leave things as they were. A new world is being born of bitter suffering, and the problems of peace will in many ways be more difficult than those of war. New needs will demand new remedies, and there will be room alike for all the courage and imagination of youth, and all the clear thinking of experience that can be rallied to the task.

Seeks No Selfish End

In this war Great Britain seeks no selfish end. Its immediate cause, as in 1914, was the German breach of a treaty on the one hand, and the fulfillment of a treaty by Great Britain on the other. The ultimate cause was German lust for world power and the concentration of her resources for the single purpose of military conquests. Therefore it must be our aim in the present war to convince the people of Germany that these traditional ambitions and methods do not pay. One of the greatest tragedies of this time is that for years German youth has been impelled by its rulers to the pursuit of spurious ideals and the worship of been dug between them and our false gods. The gulf that has thus own younger generations will take time to bridge. And therefore after the war is over, and until we can be satisfied of Germany's cooperation, I can hardly doubt that nations resolved to preserve peace and freedom must needs retain sufficient armed strength to make their will effective.

I dare to hope that in this as in other matters our two peoples will appreciate the immense responsibility that will jointly rest upon them; and that, in the words of Pascal, "We may combine justice and power, making what is just strong, and what is strong, just." So may the spirit of our cooperation deserve and win the support of all other peoples, likeminded with ourselves to strengthen the foundations of world society.

Thus only will it be possible to ensure that neither Germany nor any other nation shall revert, or has any reason to revert, to those policies which have plunged Europe into five wars within the last 80 years.

I have not spoken to you tonight about the fortunes of war as they may be in whatever field during the coming months, and of what the future may hold for us of good or ill. Nor of the flagging purpose of the Italian people, following the rout of Mussolini's legions in Africa, and Albania, where a small country has once again written history in letters of gold for all the world to read. Nor have I spoken of that particular threat to the passage across the ocean highways, on which our war effort, and your great reinforcement of it, rests.

Certainly we do not minimize its gravity, or shut our eyes to the fact that it is here that Hitler will put forth his greatest effort. Our experience, however, shows that, while in the coming months these attacks may cause us grave losses, our defensive measures are sound, provided they can be developed with adequate strength and speed.

In the next few critical months it will, as I see it, be a race between the counting total of our shipping losses and the increase in the defensive weapons that will reduce them below the danger level.

I have no doubt, with the help that you will be able to give, of our ability to win this race.

I have preferred to talk to you of other matters that were in my mind, the more so since you heard the prime minister himself some weeks ago make a speech which once more stamped him as a born leader of men determined to be free. There is, however, one thing more I would like to say.

The question which I find most constantly on the lips of my American friends is "when will Hitler invade Britain?"

The question is vital, for Hitler can sprawl across the continents where he will; but unless he can reduce that small island in the North Sea, which is the cradle of the British race, the end he seeks eludes him. And he knows, better perhaps than we do, that provided we can hold, as we surely shall, his dreams are doomed. When, then, will he put it to the test?

For many months people in more countries than yours or mine have been asking the same question. I daresay Hitler has been asking it of himself, and therefore you will hardly expect me to answer it. But if you ask me, "Will all the help we are planning to send to Britain arrive too late?" Then both my head and my heart join to tell you, with all the conviction born of my knowledge of how the British people feel, and of being a member of the war cabinet since its formation, that the answer is a confident and unhesitating "No."

I base this belief not only upon all the preparations for defense which have been forging ahead night and day since Dunkirk; not only upon the tireless devotion with which the navy, the army and air force, yes, and men and women throughout the length and breadth of the country have been fitting themselves to do their duty in the ordeal they know they may have to face on any day, at any hour. Nor on the generous help that you have given and are giving, and that, as Hitler's desperate bid to prevent it is brought under control, will reach our shores in steadily increasing volume. These all play great part; but there is something more which it is not easy to reduce to words.

Absence of Hysteria

It may be expressed by what an Englishwoman wrote to an American friend after the first great onslaught from the air: "... there is a complete absence of hysteria everywhere and only a lovely growth of friendly behavior."

A woman in a country village writes: "We are expecting the invasion now, and we are told that if they get as far as this we have to 'stay put.' It won't be easy, but it's going to be done. We are not going to hamper our men by cluttering up the roads."

A London woman, warned to leave her house on account of a time bomb lying nearby, declared: "The landlord has tried to turn me out; the bailiffs have tried to get me out; I'm damned if Hitler's going to do it."

Or one gets a glimpse of it in the words of an airman whose leg had been amputated and who, in a brief interval of returning consciousness, said: "It takes a lot to kill a man from Stoke-on-Trent."

I could multiply these stories, and you have no doubt heard others. At some we laugh, but our laughter is not always far from tears. But they may explain why I feel able to tell you tonight with a conviction that is unshakable that the British people will not be unworthy of the cause by which they stand.

Utility Attacks 'Death Sentence' Clause at Hearing

By the Associated Press

Attacking the constitutionality of the "death sentence" clause of the Holding Company Act, Engineers Public Service Co. contended yesterday that standards of size and control established by the act bore no relation to the price paid by consumers for gas and electricity.

In most cases, counsel for the company told an SEC hearing, consumers served by large companies and by holding company subsidiaries "pay less for their service" than consumers served by smaller or independent companies.

Although engineers company has assets of $375,000,000, it is the smallest of nine systems which the Securities Commission is seeking to integrate into single geographical areas.

Browder Loses His Freedom And Appetite at First Jail Lunch

Communist Party Secretary Begins Four-Year Term

By the Associated Press

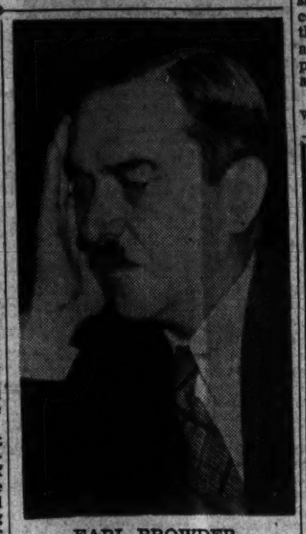
New York, March 25.—Earl Russell Browder, former general secretary of the Communist Party in the United States, surrendered in Federal court today to start a four-year prison sentence imposed on his conviction 15 months ago of using a fraudulently obtained passport.

Taken a few minutes later to a cell already occupied by two small-time mail fraud defendants, he said he wasn't hungry and declined lunch.

The place of Browder's eventual confinement was not made public, but most Federal prisoners convicted here of felonies are sent to the Lewisburg (Pa.) Penitentiary.

Browder's surrender and payment of a $2,000 fine closed—at least temporarily—his fight to stay out of prison for the second time. The Supreme Court last month upheld his conviction and he was not long in appointing Robert Minor, writer and lecturer, as his heir to the Communist Party control.

Minor accompanied Browder as he surrendered. A few hours earlier the clerk of the United States District Court received in the mail a check for his fine. Rubber-stamped "Defense Committee of Civil Rights for Communists, 799 Broadway," it was signed by Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, high in the party councils.



EARL BROWDER

Browder's first prison experience came during the World War. He was convicted as a draft dodger and sentenced to two years in Leavenworth Penitentiary.

A. A. A. Proposes Parking Provisions In Building Code

New buildings constructed in Washington in the future would be required to have certain minimum off-street parking facilities for their tenants and patrons, under recommendations drafted yesterday by the traffic and parking committee of the American Automobile Association advisory board.

The committee voted five proposed amendments to the District building and zoning regulations to provide off-street parking facilities. They were:

That apartment houses provide one parking space for each one-to-five family unit—depending upon location and density of development; that single family dwellings be provided with one parking space for each family unit; that office buildings, department stores, etc., provide the equivalent of 20 per cent of total floor space; that theaters and public assembly places provide one parking space for each eight seats in the congested area and one space for each four seats in outlying districts; that new establishments be required to provide off-street loading and unloading facilities for merchandise.

Young Will Ask Funds for Second D.C. Health Center

Commissioner John Russell Young said yesterday he would request funds for a second health center as an investigation disclosed the health clinic building at 512 I Street Northwest was structurally safe.

Fifteen persons were injured Monday when plaster fell from the ceiling in the waiting room at the clinic. Thomas F. Roche, assistant building inspector, said there was evidence that a quantity of disinfestant had seeped through an upper floor and loosened the plaster.

Health Officer George C. Ruhland has repeatedly requested funds for a clinic in the Northwest central area of the city. Each year his request has been denied. The 1942 budget estimates contain funds for a site for a second clinic, but not for the building. Commissioner Young said he was anxious that money for the building be placed in the budget.

Roosevelt Tells Greeks 'Will to Victory Will Be Awarded'

President Roosevelt expressed to King George of Greece in a message made public yesterday "every certainty that the resources which the United States is making available to free peoples will make it possible for these peoples to create a nobler world."

The message said Mr. Roosevelt was sure "that the will to victory of the soldiers of Greece will be rewarded by success."

It was in response to one from King George expressing the gratitude of Greece for President Roosevelt's address of March 15 in which the President pledged full aid to Britain, Greece and other nations fighting aggression.

King George declared in the name of the Greek army that "every cannon, every shell placed in its hands will be a gain for the ideas" to which the United States devotes its "immense resources."

The King declared that Greek soldiers were resolved to win."

The President replied:

"I deeply appreciate Your Majesty's cordial message. Greece has abundantly proved herself a free nation worthy of the liberty she is so brilliantly maintaining.

"I have every certainty that the resources which the United States is making available to free peoples will make it possible for these peoples to create a nobler world. I am very sure that the will to victory of the soldiers of Greece will be rewarded by success."

Fire Trapped 18, Tanker Survivors Say

the S. S. Pan New York.

The other five rescued, including Capt. John Saxon, were aboard the tanker W. W. Bruce, en route to Boston or New York.

Campbell said he had just gone below from his turn at the ship's wheel when the lights went out. "Then there was an awful explosion," he said, "and the next thing we knew fire was spreading everywhere."

The blast shook the big ship fore and aft and the flames billowed upwards over the deck, according to survivors.

Capt. E. J. Raven, of the Pan New York, said it was "almost impossible to believe" that any of the 18 men trapped in the fore hold could have escaped alive.

Carl J. Matthews, 35, first assistant engineer of the Denver, said neither he nor anyone else aboard the tanker had any idea what caused the blast.

"I was sleeping when the explosion occurred," Matthews said. "It was a terrific blast which rocked the entire ship. It occurred in the fore part of the ship, apparently in the forward hold."

"I went to my fire station on deck and by the time I reached there flames from the hold of the ship were coming over the side of the deck.

"It was about an hour after the explosion when the two lifeboats were lowered, one from the middle of the ship and one from the rear. Seventeen of us were in one boat and five in the other.

"Twenty men were sleeping in quarters in the fore hold near where the explosion occurred, and apparently only the two of them got out.

"We were sure we would be picked up shortly because the Pan New York and the W. W. Bruce were only a mile or so behind us when the explosion occurred and they were standing by alongside when we took to the lifeboats.

"But we kept looking for men in the water, hoping that some of those trapped in the fore hold had gotten out and were swimming. We were picked up after about an hour in the lifeboat.

"It was about eight hours before the Pan New York hove to 10 miles off Beaufort this morning and we were taken ashore by Coast Guard lifeboats in a running sea. The Coast Guard did a wonderful job."

Halifax Declares Liberty Is War Aim

of how the British people feel, and of being a member of the war cabinet since its formation, that the answer is a confident and unhesitating 'no'."

Halifax touched on the "steady drawing together of the thought" of the United States and Britain and "as the struggle has grown more intense, reason and conscience have combined to make us both realize even more clearly the dark menace to things that are equally precious to your country and to mine."

"This common purpose has been sealed anew by the recent passage into law of the Lease-Lend Act," he said. "It is difficult to exaggerate what this means.

Across the seas in the front line, which is Britain, as in the hearts of those submerged for a time under the German wave, there will be felt new confidence; in the camp of the enemy new doubts; as all alike remember the history of the last war and see the time slowly approaching when the weight of this nation must tip the scales."

Lord Halifax pointed out that "we are wont to say that we are fighting for freedom and for democracy—for freedom as the quality of life that we desire; for democracy as the system of government which is at once its best expression and the surest guarantee for its protection."

As to "what we mean when we use these large words," Halifax said "I can only tell you what I mean and what I know my fellow countrymen mean . . . and I do not think you will take any different view."

"There seem to us to be certain principles that are essential to life as we wish to live it and see it lived," he added. "These principles are now in dire peril, and we believe therefore that we are truly fighting for our lives, since life to us is worthless if the principles on which it is built are to be destroyed."

Walton League Will Convene Here Tomorrow

Nearly a thousand delegates and members of the Izaak Walton League of America will convene at the Willard Hotel tomorrow and, instead of swapping tall tales about the big ones that got away, will devote most of their time to discussions of conservation.

The convention will open officially at 10 a. m. with addresses by John F. Stowell, president of the League's District of Columbia Chapter, and Tappan Gregory, National president.

In the afternoon the delegates will leave for an inspection tour of the Patuxent Refuge, Beltsville, Md. There they will hear talks by Dr. Ira N. Gabrielson, director of the Fish and Wildlife Service, and J. Hammond Brown, president of the Outdoor Writers Association of America, on wildlife conservation.

Friday's session will be devoted to a panel discussion on "Public Rights in Water;" annual election of officers and the banquet dance. Gregory will be toastmaster and Dr. John W. Scott, of Laramie, Wyo., will show a color motion picture of sage grouse.

The convention officially will close Saturday morning, following meetings of the national directors and the national executive board.

Gen. Graziani Pays Price Of Libyan Defeat by Retiring

Gariboldi, Roatta Take Over; Further Shake-ups Predicted

By Herbert L. Matthews

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, March 25.—Marshal Rodolfo Graziani, who was considered Italy's greatest colonial soldier and one of the best all-around generals in the Italian army, paid the price for defeat today by retiring.

His post as chief of the army general staff has been taken over by General of Army Corps Mario Roatta, while his command in Libya, which included the governorship of the colony, went to Gen. Italo Gariboldi. Gen. Francesco Rossi becomes assistant chief of the army general staff.

A communique said Marshal Graziani gave up his post "at his own request."

Since Marshal Graziani had suffered a complete and disastrous defeat and had entered into a public controversy with Premier Mussolini over the lack of material at his disposal, it was obvious that he had to go. Indeed since the fall of Bengasi he has had very little to do with his command. Gen. Gariboldi took over about March 1 and he is today merely confirmed in the post.

Roatta Close to Germans

In the same way, Gen Roatta has been doing the job as chief of the army general staff for a long while, in fact, ever since Marshal Graziani went to Libya early in the war. The latter had the title, but Gen. Roatta did the work, except during Marshal Graziani's visits to Rome. Now Gen. Roatta is rewarded with the title as well.

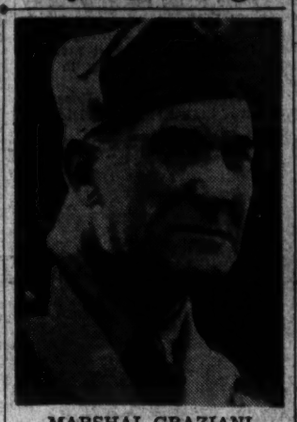
He is very close to the Germans. During the Ethiopian war, Gen. Roatta had an important post in the "S. I. M." (Servizio Informazione Militare)—the military intelligence service. He organized the military end of Italy's intervention in the Spanish Civil War, so that as soon as it started Italy was able to step in. As a partial reward he was given command of the Italian force which took Malaga early in 1937. Thereafter he acted as sort of liaison officer between Spain and Italy.

When the Spanish war ended, Gen. Roatta was sent to Berlin as military attache and that was where the Germans learned to appreciate him. He was on the Italian armistice commission which made terms with France and he has also been in on te various Italo--German military talks.

Gen. Rozzi used to work with Gen. Roatta in the S. I. M. and that may account for his choice as assistant chief of staff.

Gen. Garibaldi has had long experience in Libya and East Africa. He led the flanking column which accompanied Marshal Badoglio on the final march into Addis Ababa and then remained in Ethiopia for some years. When this war started he was chief of staff in Tripoli.

This is probably not the last shakeup in the Italian high command. Four of its highest commanders have been ousted—Marshal Badoglio, Marshal Graziani, Gen. Ubaldo Soddu and Admiral Domenico Cavagnari, but there is much to be dissatisfied about and other heads are expected to fall.



MARSHAL GRAZIANI

Year in Army Is Invaluable, General Says

Young men coming into the Army now are not giving up a year of their lives—they are adding many years to their potential usefulness to themselves and their community, Maj. Gen. Robert C. Richardson, jr., last night told the heads of 50 military schools throughout the Nation.

Speaking at the annual banquet of the Association of Military Colleges and Schools of the United States, the War Department public relations director said that selectees were "taking a step toward the future which will be of invaluable service to them."

"They are learning how to get along with others. They are learning tolerance. They are learning discipline. They are learning to live under trying conditions. And they are learning the art of determination," he said.

Gen. Richardson asserted that the last thing an Army officer wants is war. "There is no one in the world who hates his trade as does the professional soldier, but—we have been trained at the expense of the people and we will defend the people."

Violence Spreads Over Yugoslavia

boys and young men, most of them demanding uniforms and transportation to the Albanian and African fronts. The waiting rooms of both legations and of the Turkish Embassy were jammed with Britons and other foreigners pleading for visas immediately to leave the country.

While the tide of evacuation reached a new high and gloom ruled in the foreign colony, church leaders, Yugoslav political opposition leaders, young army officers and common soldiers, the peasants and townspeople appeared to be uniting in an impressing and apparently spontaneous nation-wide determination to undo what has been done, unseat those who did it, and to confront Germany with an about-face of Yugoslav policy—made, this time, in Yugoslavia.

The shortest route to an overthrow of the government is, of course, wholesale resignation of the cabinet. Agrarian and independent democratic leaders hope to precipitate this by their wholesale resignations from all state posts and a common front in opposition.

The Serbian Orthodox Church leaders at their meeting tomorrow will present the patriarch with a formal resolution condemning the capitulation, according to information from church circles tonight.

Soldiers and young officers are making their pressure felt up through the ranks to the divisional and general staff leaders who have the ear of War Minister Peter Pesitch. The people who are already rising in widespread and still unorganized opposition probably will be the final factor.

The Serbian Comitadjis, the irregular but tightly-knit organization of guerrilla fighters, already have flung down their warning: That capitulation means death or exile for every man who participates.

Some observers here today wondered whether Ljubomir Pantitch's resignation from his post as physical culture minister was not partly inspired by receipt of a Comitadji letter. Pantitch's friends said the Germanophile minister quit because he had been promised a higher post—justice or agriculture—during the tentative cabinet juggling over the weekend and was forgotten in the excitement.

Whatever the reason for Pantitch's resignation, the Comitadjis are uniformly furious, resolute and determined that today's scenes at Vienna shall be obliterated; peacefully if possible, by violence if necessary, but obliterated.

Welles Finds 'Satisfaction' in Soviet Pledge to Turks

event that a neighboring country were to suffer attack."

The statement was in marked contrast to displeasure shown at the State Department when Russia invaded Poland, Finland, Latvia, Lithuania, Esthonia and Rumania.

The Welles declaration followed a weeks-long series of conferences he has held with Soviet Ambassador Constantine A. Oumansky and led to speculation that the United States was attempting to wean the powerful Soviet state away from the Axis and into opposition against German, Italian and Japanese aggression.

Reports that Russia has shipped no oil to Germany since March 1 were believed to have been a factor in Welles' decision to make his bid for Russian favor at this time.

There was no official indication whether concrete concessions to the Moscow government would follow yesterday's friendly words.

Ambassador Oumansky is pressing here for release of $50,000,000 worth of Russian orders already placed, for release of further ship tonnage, for review of United States seizure of "propaganda" mail from Russia and for settlement of other lesser matters.

The Welles statement was the second conciliatory move toward Russia this year. Late in January the State Department lifted the "moral embargo" on shipments of military aircraft which was imposed against the Russians when they marched into Finland.

Earlier in the day, a bare few minutes after Yugoslav diplomats signed the pact with Germany in Vienna, the Treasury announced the immobilizing of Yugoslav funds. President Roosevelt signed the order Monday, in advance of the Vienna ceremonies.

The order, which prohibits use or removal of any Yugoslav cash, securities or other movable assets, is designed to maintain United States control over Yugoslav funds. It is similar to the impounding orders affecting $4,500,000,000 imposed previously against Norway, Denmark, France, the Netherlands, Belgium, Luxembourg, Latvia, Lithuania, Esthonia, Roumania, Bulgaria and Hungary.

Americans have about $36,000,000 worth of investments in Yugoslavia, mostly in government bonds, which might be affected if the Belgrade government should take measures of reprisal.

Welles confirmed reports yesterday that the United States had tried to keep Yugoslavia out of the Axis. Yugoslavian dispatches reported that Arthur Bliss Lane, American Minister in Belgrade, had conducted a four-week campaign to impress the Yugoslavian government with the United States pledge to help "any nation which would defend itself."

Belgrade, March 25 (AP).—A qualified neutral source said today Arthur Bliss Lane, United States Minister to Yugoslavia, conducted a vigorous campaign to let Yugoslavia know the position of the United States.

Lane's campaign kept up until last Sunday, when he learned of the final decision to sign the Tripartite Pact.

The American Legation was notified today of the freezing of Yugoslav funds in the United States and Washington's action on the freezing of Yugoslav funds was broadcast by foreign radios heard here.

Government circles took the attitude that they had been amply warned of the possible freezing of funds and were reconciled to paying this price for adherence to the Axis bloc.

United States diplomatic quarters said the amount of Yugoslav funds in America would "comfortably cover" American investments in Yugoslavia. The last official figures estimated Yugoslavia's gold supply at $60,000,000, of which approximately $40,000,000 was deposited abroad, chiefly in London and New York.

British Hope To Beat Rains To Addis Ababa

By the Associated Press

Cairo, March 25.—Capture of Addis Ababa before the rains come in early May appeared tonight to be the goal of British forces in East Africa—already knocking at the gates of the walled city of Harar.

There was every indication the goal would be reached, observers here said, although they thought it unlikely that the Italians would yield the city without fighting at least one big battle.

One Fascist division (10,000 to 15,000 men) was believed holding Harar under the command of Gen. de Simioni. Although the town is walled, its defenses are not regarded as particularly strong.

The way westward from the captured Ethiopian town of Jijiga apparently was opened by the seizure of Marda Pass.

(Although British sources in London said the pass, 10 miles beyond Jijiga, had been taken, the Italian high command said "strong enemy pressure" in that sector was "being held in check by our troops."

(A sign of German offensive action in North Africa was given in Berlin where, without explanation or elaboration, authoritative sources said Nazi troops had raised their flag over Agheila, 150 miles southwest of British-occupied Bengasi, Libya.

(Agheila, on the Gulf of Sidra between Bengasi and Tripoli, marked about Britain's deepest thrust westward.)

Fleet Air Arm And Pompoms Beat Off Nazis

By Larry Allen
Associated Press Staff Writer

Aboard the Aircraft Carrier Formidable with the British Mediterranean Fleet, March 25.—Britain's battlefleet, hunting trouble even on convoy duty, is beating off solo dive-bomber attacks with a skillful coordination of planes and pompom guns.

The men on ships and planes express determination that there shall be no duplication of the mass attack on the fleet of last January 10. They declare they are out to rid the Mediterranean of the German air menace. Daily flying orders for the fleet air arm carry this notation:

"Gunnery—From dawn onwards, as arranged by Hitler and Mussolini, an unlimited number of high-speed targets are available at short notice."

Small Formations

Three times in the last few days I have seen German Junkers 88's take a quick stab at the fleet or a crack at the ships it is convoying. British naval pilots and guns shot down one for sure, damaged and possibly brought down the other two.

No large formations have appeared, although battleships, cruisers, antiaircraft carriers and destroyes have splashed with their convoys within easy range of the Luftwaffe's bases.

This is the way they came:

West of Crete, a Junkers 88 power-dived out of rainy skies, apparently intending to bomb the convoyed ships.

But a few minutes earlier British fighter planes had taken off the broad flight deck of this 23,000-ton carrier, sister ship of the Illustrious, a main target of the January 10 attack.

Germans Met Halfway

The fighters met the German halfway to his target. The machine gun of a young British flight lieutenant opened up. The bullets ripped into the Junkers' engine and the plane nosed straight downward into the bursts from the big A. A. guns and pompoms of the carrier and nearby destroyers.

I stood on the rear admiral's bridge and watched the black explosions from 4.5 shells and white ones from the pompoms make the clouds look like a field of mushrooms.

The blast of the carrier's gunfire splintered the windows of the rear admiral's glass-inclosed bridge as the German plane crashed into the sea.

Farther westward, late in the same day, another Junkers 88 tried to scout the fleet. Again British fighters sped off the carrier deck.

They got under the German, tore into his port engine with their machine-gun bullets, and he last was seen spiraling toward the sea.

Still another pilot emptied his machine gun to get rid of a third Junkers and the fleet was unmolested for the rest of the trip.

Use Blockade 'Ruthlessly,' Briton Urges

By the Associated Press

London, March 25.—The British reported a sharp drop in shipping losses for a second successive week today while Commons heard an appeal for the government to apply the blockade ruthlessly against unoccupied France.

An admiralty report said British and Allied merchantmen lost in the week ended March 16 were 23 ships totaling 71,773 tons, compared with destruction of 98,832 tons the previous week and 141,314 tons the week before.

Seventeen were British ships totaling 60,670 tons and the remaining six Allied losses totaled 11,103 tons.

Nazi Losses Given

The British listed no comparable Axis losses for the week ended March 16, but claimed that in the five weeks up to that date they had destroyed 300,000 tons compared with 410,000 tons lost by Allied and neutral shipping.

This four to three loss ratio against the British—expectable in view of the far-flung operations of a larger merchant fleet—indciated a large part of the destruction of Axis craft was along the European coastal routes now vital to Germany's war economy.

The British blockade was described by Hugh Dalton, minister of economic warfare, as "useful only if it is applied ruthlessly," in a statement answering a House member's appeal to apply the weapon as stringently to France as to Germany and territories she occupies.

Weather Slows Up Raids

Dalton warned that although the British have agreed to the passage of two shiploads of food from the United States to unoccupied France, the Navy would seize any cargoes not navicerted.

Cloudiness over the Straits of Dover limited German air attacks to hit-and-run forays during the day. Three planes which dived out of clouds in an attack were reported chased away by British spitfires.

Wavell Moving To Greece, Capital Hears

By the Associated Press

Advices in diplomatic quarters here last night indicated that England is preparing to throw the full weight of her Mediterranean armies into the expected battle of the Balkans, and that Gen. Archibald P. Wavell already may be moving his headquarters from Egypt to Greece.

Although they never admitted it officially, the British are known to have established a large expeditionary force in Greece. Belgrade reports today said this force totaled 150,000 men.

There has been practically no military activity in north Africa since the British captured Bengasi, last Italian stronghold between them and an invasion of Tripolitania.

Anthony Eden, British foreign minister, remains in the Mediterranean area to participate in decisions affecting the campaign, and only today addressed a message to the King of Greece.

One informed diplomatic source said that British landing forces in Greece probably far exceeded the Belgrade figure of 150,000.

Yugoslavia's capitulation to reduced German demands was accounted a heavy loss to the British-Greek side, but her delay in signing up with the Axis was said to have given the British valuable time to pour reinforcements into Greece.

It was considered likely here that Wavell had been flying back and forth between North Africa and Greece, supervising landings and consolidating all the British forces in the eastern Mediterranean.

Opinion was divided on how soon important military developments might be expected in that region.

In some diplomatic circles, the belief was expressed that there might be a comparative lull until next month during which both sides would continue to strengthen their positions.

800,000 Nazis Reported

London, March 25 (AP).—Germany has approximately 800,000 troops fully equipped for immediate battle in the Balkans, to enforce the German drive toward the southeast and guard the Russian frontier, a reliable foreign source declared today.

British quarters declined to comment on this report and refused to indicate whether it checked with their intelligence.

Germany, the foreign source said, has 50,000 men in Italy and Africa, 600,000 in France, 300,000 in Denmark, and from 750,000 to 1,000,000 in Germany, Poland, Norway and the low countries or in transit.

Baering Down On the News

By Arthur "Bugs" Baer

Lord Beaverbrook seems to think it would be the berries if Great Britain and America hooked up after the war. That's a lot of laundry to send out together.

Well, we've rewritten the Constitution. We might as well rewrite the declaration of indignation. I can see Paul Revere coming back to the starting gate saying, "Sorry, boys, I made a false break."

It will be pretty tough on Maj. Andre and Nathan Hale, who didn't do so well in the course of inhuman events. And it scores old Benedict Arnold as throwing a perfect strike with the crystal ball.

This is a bit of historical facelifting that puts a new expression on old wrinkles. If England came in as the forty-ninth State, the first thing it would want would be a bridge.

I met Beaverbrook with Runyon and he invited me over to London as his guest. I asked, "How about those bombs?" He said, "well, if one has your name on it . . ."

I said, "Beaver, a bomb with your name on it isn't enough if it doesn't know your address."

I didn't go but I may have to visit our forty-ninth State as a member of the Rivers and Harbors Committee.

The purpose of our little junket will be to sound the Atlantic Ocean from New York to Liverpool. We will decide whether to dredge it deeper or fill it in.

Germans Call Yugoslav Pact Reply to Churchill, Roosevelt

By the Associated Press

Vienna, March 25.—Adolf Hitler brought Yugoslavia into modified membership in the German-Italian-Japanese military alliance today and after the one-hour ceremony was over the Germans observed pointedly that Britain's Greek ally was thus left as "the only black spot on the Balkan map."

Yugoslavia got something that was given none of the four other junior partners—a written pledge that troops would not be moved across her territory—but she was understood to have agreed to permit the transportation of war material, hospital supplies and wounded soldiers through the country.

Hungary, Rumania, Slovakia (a part of the old and now dismembered Czecho-Slovakia) and Bulgaria had signed previously.

"Answer to Roosevelt"

The introduction of Yugoslavia was at once pictured by official Germany as "an answer to Churchill and Roosevelt;" a defeat, as German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop put it, of "English and American attempts to influence" the Belgrade government.

Hitler himself did not attend the signing, but twice during the day he received the Yugoslav representatives, Premier Dragisa Cvetkovic and Foreign Minister Aleksander Cincar-Markovic.

No phrase of these conversations was given out; it was said merely that they went forward "in the spirit of traditional friendship of the two states."

(The entry of Yugoslavia was bad—but long-expected—news to the Greeks and to Britain, which has 100,000 or more imperial troops already in Greece to help meet the expected German assault by way of occupied Bulgaria. The Greeks had told Yugoslavia in advance that lining up with the Axis would be "a hostile act.")

Pledge of Respect

The German promise to respect Yugoslavia's territorial integrity was put in these words, signed by Von Ribbentop:

"The German government confirms its determination to respect the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Yugoslavia for all time.

"With reference to the negotiations in connection with Yugoslavia's joining the three-power pact today, I have the honor, your excellency, in the name of the German administration, herewith to confirm an agreement between the Axis governments and the royal Yugoslav government that the governments of the Axis powers during this war will not permit the marching or transport of troops through Yugoslav territory."

The importance of this reservation as to troops was minimized in German quarters.

It was generally believed that Yugoslavia was exempted from the obligation to give active help to the Axis in the event it is faced by new belligerents. There was authoritative German comment that "we don't want Balkan divisions."

Italians See Setback to U. S.

Among the commitments made by the Yugoslavas in turn, it was understood, were promises to gear their economic system to that of the Axis and to end anti-Axis agitation.

Italian commentators joined the Germans in contending that the United States as well as Britain had been given a setback. They asserted that Yugoslavia's capitulation had restricted "still further the area of open intrigues of our enemies," and had about completed the "expulsion" of Britain from Europe.

"Outside the pact now," said authoritative quarters in Rome, "remains only Greece among the countries of southeastern Europe. Greece will bear the consequences of its policy of subservience to London interests."

No sooner had the Yugoslavs been disposed of than preparations were made to rush Germany's leaders from Vienna back to Berlin to meet Yosuke Matsuoka, the Japanese foreign minister, who is arriving there tomorrow.

Nazis Extend War Zone To New World

By International News Service

Berlin, March 25.—Germany tonight extended her war zone of operations into the very waters of the New World when she announced inclusion of Iceland in the Nazi blockade area and drew a line of damercation stretching to territorial waters of Greenland.

The step was taken, according to Berlin, because the British allegedly are using Iceland as a base for ships trying to smash through Germany's blockade of the British Isles.

(Observers predicted that Germany's announcement may be the forerunner to aerial mining of waters around Iceland as a means if impeding the dispatch of American aid to Britain.

All ships, including American, which enter any port of the expanded zone will be liable to attack, the Germans warned. A bulletin said:

"The warning given to neutral shipping when the total German blockade was proclaimed on August 17, 1940—that any ship entering the German zone of operations in spite of warnings, exposes itself to the danger of destruction, for which Germany assumes no responsibility—now applies to the extended operations zone."

"In consequence of Britain's illegal occupation of Danish Iceland," a communique said, "blockade-breakers bound for England recently have been using Iceland as a base.

"This compels Germany to include Iceland in her zone of operations around England."

The Nazis then set up this boundary for her new war blockade zone:

"Extending from the Belgian coast up the third meridian of east longitude to 62 degrees north latitude; from there to 68 north and 10 west; thence along the sixty-eighth parallel of north latitude as far as the 3-mile zone of Greeland."

The northern line runs north of Iceland and slightly north of the Arctic Circle.

Iceland was occupied by British troops shortly after German troops invaded Denmark.

The island formerly was linked to Denmark only through the monarchy. Each was a separate country but had in King Christian the same ruler.

In two seconds by stop watch a genuine Bayer Aspirin tablet begins to disintegrate. It is ready to begin relief in a short time!

You can see for yourself how quickly Genuine Bayer Aspirin starts to work

See the amazing split second way Bayer Aspirin starts to disintegrate almost the instant it touches moisture, making it available to "take hold" of headache, neuralgia, or the pains of rheumatism and neuritis with almost unbelievable speed. It's no wonder relief from any common pain starts usually in a remarkably short time.

On this point of speed alone genuine Bayer Aspirin has won millions of users. Try it. Then if pain persists, see your doctor. Let him find the cause and treat it.

Costs only 1c a Tablet

Now this same genuine Bayer Aspirin your own doctor probably recommends . . . costs only 1c a tablet. So practically anyone can afford genuine quick-acting Bayer Aspirin. Be sure you ask for it by the full name "Bayer Aspirin" when you buy and never by the name "aspirin" alone.

If you've never used Bayer Aspirin before for headache, neuritis or rheumatic pains, try it once. You, too, will say results are truly remarkable . . . relief comes amazingly fast.

Defense Boom Creating Slums, McNutt Tells Migrant Inquiry

Health and sanitary conditions in British air raid shelters "are not half so bad as those in some American boom towns," the House committee investigating migrant labor was informed yesterday.

Federal Security Administrator McNutt said the comparison of conditions in underground shelters in England with those in rapidly expanding defense industrial centers in this country was given him by Surgeon General Thomas Parran, recently returned from Britain.

McNutt emphatically indorsed pending legislation to provide $150,000,000 for construction of schools, water mains and other facilities for communities facing a heavy influx of defense workers. "This amount is conservative and is urgently needed," he said.

Fears for Civilian Morale

McNutt said he saw "a very serious obstacle to the development of civilian morale essential to a defense program" in the existence of large numbers of families in America "with insufficient resources to meet even their subsistence needs."

He renewed his suggestion that the Social Security Board be empowered to make Federal funds available to the States for "general relief" purposes on the same basis as it now administers aid to the aged.

"It is quite obvious from what's going on in many States," he said, "that there will be no general relief if the Federal Government doesn't get into it. People simply are not being adequately cared for."

"What's happening to them?" asked Representative Curtis (Republican), of Nebraska. "Are they starving?"

"Yes," McNutt said. "There are some pitiful situations in this country."

Urges Rehousing Program

Charles F. Palmer, defense housing coordinator, told the committee that a vast rehousing program should be launched at the end of the present emergency as a means of raising the American standard of living and finding employment for workers released from defense industries.

Whoever wins the war, he predicted, "there will be practically no international trade for a decade, and we will have to turn to a domestic economy. If we will rebuild our country, we will employ the demobilized soldiers and defense workers and raise the tax yielding capacity of our cities."

Pointing east from the new House Office Building, Palmer said, "You can go two blocks over there and see one of the worst slums in the world—worse than anything I have seen in Moscow or Paris or the East End of London. You can't let people just rot away in those places."

Dr. A. F. Hinrichs, acting commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, said the migration of construction workers to sites of cantonments and defense factories where their employment will be relatively brief "is producing some intense misery." Defense workers in the completed factories, he pointed out, "have steady employment at least for the duration of the emergency."

One Smokestack Is Made Safe For Women's Hose

Here's important news for all the girls who lost hundreds of pairs of hose, through runs, during the recent blitzkrieg in downtown Washington.

One smokestack, who was producing sulphuric acid, has been thoroughly cleaned and a test yesterday by the District's smoke inspection division, by the hanging of a stocking over it, failed to produce any runs or holes.

H. Kenneth Kugel, smoke inspector, who tracked down the stack, said: "It may be that the smoke was not responsible for the raveling of the hose, but whereas before the smoke did produce runs, now it doesn't."

The National Bureau of Standards on Saturday disclosed that sulphuric acid, produced as a product of combustion, was responsible for the recent run on the women's hosiery mart.

Kugel said there were several other smokestacks to be tackled soon. Owners of the buildings involved have been "every cooperative," he said.

2 Ex-D. C. Brokers Indicted In $26,700 Stock Theft

Two former Washington brokers were accused by the District grand jury of stealing $26,700 worth of stocks and bonds entrusted to them by elderly customers three years ago.

Accused were Robert B. Spafford and Robert C. Downs. Officials of the Securities and Exchange Commission declared that the men maintained offices here under the name of R. B. Spafford & Co., until June, 1938, when they withdrew their broker's registration.

The indictments alleged that the securities were taken March 31, 1938. The statute of limitations on the offense would have barred prosecution in another week. The SEC said records showed that the securities in question were posted to secure accounts of the accused men in New York and were sold there, when the margin was wiped out.

Alleged to have been victimized, Richard M. Mullett, Postoffice Department draftsman, Capital View, Md., who was said to have entrusted $2,700 to the firm. Six Baltimore people also were alleged to have been victimized.

The charges against those indicted were:

Larceny from the United States—Harry A. Trippiett, 33, colored.

Running a lottery and having numbers slips—Augusta C. Dematatis (alias Gus, the Greek), Clarence L. Ware (alias Cocky), Bernard Clarke, George H. Frazier.

Two Detours Are Announced For Mass. Ave.

Two detours, one on each side of the new Massachusetts Avenue Bridge, affecting traffic in the morning and afternoon rush hours, were announced by Traffic Director Van Duzer yesterday.

Designed to relieve congestion on Massachusetts Avenue during its widening and resurfacing, the detours will have no effect upon eastbound vehicles.

Beginning at 7 a. m. tomorrow westbound motorists along the avenue will be shunted right into Twenty-fourth Street, left into Tracy Place and Belmont Road, to return to Massachusetts Avenue just east of the temporary bridge.

Van Duzer said this detour would be in effect for about a week.

Monday at 7 a. m. all westbound traffic on the west side of the new span will be turned north into Thirtieth Street, left into Normanstone Drive and Fulton Street. This latter detour will be in use at least two months, the traffic director said.

Van Duzer said he did not anticipate any serious tie-ups due to the rerouting because eastbound traffic would be allowed to flow along the avenue.

Parking will be prohibited along all streets of the detour between 7 a. m., it was announced, and temporary stop signs are to be erected at the intersections of Twenty-fourth Street and Tracy Place, Kalorama Road and Tracy Place and Belmont Road and Tracy Place.

Van Duzer also stated that the Park Police had been requested to close Waterside Drive to northbound traffic between 4 and 6 p. m., beginning Monday.

Prevent Blindness By Education, Col. Eanes Urges

"I have been informed that there are old school buildings in the District woefully lacking in proper lighting," Lieut. Col. Richard H. Eanes, of national headquarters, Selective Service System, told the District of Columbia Society for the Prevention of Blindness at its annual meeting yesterday.

Col. Eanes made it clear that he did not have personal knowledge of this condition.

Speaking of eyesight in relation to national defense, Col. Eanes said 14,000 of 500,000 examined have been rejected because of poor vision. Pointing out that a large percentage of blindness is preventable, he urged education of the public on protective measures.

He spoke at a luncheon at the Seventeenth Street Y. W. C. A., where Dr. James N. Greear, jr., was reelected president of the society. Mrs. Walter K. Myers was elected first vice president; Mrs. Edward E. Robbins, second vice president; Mrs. Arthur T. Lyon, recording secretary; Mrs. Milton W. King, corresponding secretary, and W. L. Howenstine, treasurer.

Dr. Spencer to Speak

Dr. R. R. Spencer, assistant chief of the National Cancer Institute and professor of hygiene and public health at the George Washington University, School of Medicine, will speak on "Cancer" tomorrow at 8:15 p. m. at the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School, East-West Highway, Bethesda, Md.

Plan to Raise Farm Prices Wins Approval

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

A proposal designed to raise the prices of five basic farm commodities through Government loans was approved by the Senate Agriculture Committee yesterday.

The measure, sponsored by Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, would boost the price of cotton, rice, wheat and tobacco to 100 per cent of "parity," and of corn to 85 per cent. Senator Bankhead said it would add "about $1,000,000,000" annually to farm income.

Asserting that the bill would cost the Government nothing, Senator Bankhead indicated that the mere promise of Government loans at the higher levels would drive the market prices of the commodities up to those levels. The loan scheme would be closely integrated with the program for restriction of agricultural production.

Based on Purchasing Power

The loans would be calculated to bring the price of the commodity up to "parity," less the amount of soil conservation payments. ("Parity is the price at which purchasing power of farm products would be equivalent to that in 1909-14.)

For example, the cotton grower who limited his production would be entitled to a loan at the "parity" price, 15.87 cents a pound, minus the soil conservation payment of 1.37 cents. The present market price of cotton is about 10 cents, and recent Government loans on this commodity have been even lower.

The Agriculture Committee also reported favorably a bill revising existing law to establish marketing quotas for wheat and corn and to increase penalties for selling excess quantities of these products.

Calling the farmer "the forgotten man" in the present emergency, Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau, indorsed the Bankhead bill with this observation:

"We do not ask for cost-plus prices, nor for time and one-half returns, nor for shorter hours and shorter work weeks, nor for the right to strike—all we ask is prices and income that will enable us to exchange our products on a fair basis for goods and services produced by other groups."

Would Increase Penalties

Senator Bankhead explained yesterday that his bill was intended "to increase the income of farmers without any additional appropriation and without increasing loan stocks."

The bill provides for the voluntary reduction of cotton farmers' quotas by giving producers a half bale of cotton for every bale taken out of production within the allotted acreage, or by giving the farmer a cash payment, taken out of "parity" funds, for reducing his production. It would also greatly increase penalties for selling crops in excess of quotas.

Meanwhile, a Senate appropriations subcommittee continued hearings on the regular 1942 farm bill, which contains $212,000,000 for "parity" payments. A vigorous effort is being made in the committee to raise this sum to $450,000,000.

Representatives Attack and Defend Lasser

Two members of the House yesterday denounced and a third Representative defended the appointment of David Lasser to a WPA post. Lasser, former president of the Workers Alliance of America and American Security Union, both unions of WPA workers, was appointed ten days ago to carry out research on reemployment problems at an annual salary of $4,400.

Representative Taber (Republican), of New York told the House that the appointment of Lasser "as public relations specialist of the WPA is thoroughly disgusting and outrageous." He charged that Lasser was once a columnist for the Daily Worker, Communist daily.

A similar attitude was taken by Representative Ford (Republican), of California, who asked: "Are we going to sit here and see the country more and more Sovietized every day?"

However, Representative Voorhis, Ford's Democratic colleague from California, countered with the assertion that Lasser "isn't, wasn't, and never has been a Communist." He declared that Lasser left the Workers Alliance after disagreement with Communists in the organization.

Lasser himself during hearings before a House committee investigating WPA denied he was a member of the Communist Party. After his split with the Workers Alliance Lasser founded and headed the American Security Union.

A spokesman for the Work Projects Administration said last night that Lasser's task was to investigate the reemployment possibilities of WPA workers in private industry. Lasser was chosen for the job because he was "well qualified," the spokesman said, adding Lasser gave up his union post.

'100 or Over' Club

Formation of an honorary "100 or Over" Club was announced yesterday at the Old Timers' luncheon of the membership committee of the Washington Board of Trade. Membership in the club will be limited to those men who have brought 100 new members into the Board of Trade, it was announced.

Personnel Transfer From Langley To Bolling Begins

Twenty soldiers from the headquarters unit of the General Headquarters of the Army Air Corps arrived yesterday by plane at Bolling Field from Langley Field, Va.

The personnel of the aviation headquarters is being shifted from Langley to the local airport. A total of 52 officers and 225 enlisted men will have been transferred by Saturday.

The air force headquarters has been located at Langley Field since it was organized several years ago.

'Boom Towns' Deplorable, Writers Say

Copyright by New York Times

A group of newspaper and magazine investigators has told a Congressional committee about the conditions they had observed at defense centers in the country where cantonments and industrial plants are being built. Their reports were far from cheerful.

Among the things the committee heard were these:

That it was largely a matter of luck that there had been no serious epidemics during the winter.

That housing generally has been frightful.

That in many defense towns no pretense has been made of enforcing compulsory school attendance.

That moral conditions in many places are of the usual boom town level.

That respectable residents of the defense boom towns are becoming sensitive over the amount of public attention they have received; they fear that outsiders think they all live in rough, tough places where sin runs rampant and liquor flows in the gutters.

"America's Luck Held"

This testimony was heard by the House committee investigating destitute migrants, headed by Representative Tolan, of California. The witnesses included Jonathan Daniels, editor of the Raleigh News and Observer; Samuel Grafton, New York Post columnist; Duncan Aikman, national correspondent for PM, and Pare Lorenz, of McCall's.

Daniels told the committee that the fact that no epidemics had developed was proof that "once again America's luck had held."

"Thousands of men—and women and children, too—were pulled into little towns, some of them without any sewage facilities, most of them without adequate housing, health and feeding facilities not to speak of school and recreational opportunities," he said.

"Undoubtedly the boom towns of this defense spending are like the boom towns of the past. There is the same crowding of the beer joints, the same pressure on facilities of bed and board. There are the same camp followers in them.

"I have been impressed with the strength and ingenuity of the folk; indeed, most of them seemed to me from Maine to Texas to look and seem as I have imagined the pioneers. Not many of them felt sorry for themselves. But a good many of them did keep a sense—sometimes a saving sense—of economic insecurity in the midst of boom jobs and boom wages."

Compulsory Saving Suggested

Grafton said that many New England business men had told him that this was not a "spending boom" like the boom of the World War. There are no evidences of a "silk shirt era," he reported, although some of the young people, now holding jobs for the first time since they left high school, are letting their money slip through their fingers.

Members of the committee wanted to know if some form of compulsory saving should be set up for men drawing big wages on defense jobs. Representative Osmers of New Jersey, for instance, suggested special social security payments by such workers and their employers, and increased Government participation, so that unemployment insurance payments might be kept up for as long as six months after the boom had burst. Some of the journalistic witnesses thought that might be a good idea.

Grafton said that it was necessary to set up some sort of Federal emergency fund to deal with the social problems that will arise with the end of the boom.

"You have to look forward," he continued, "to the day when it will be necessary to send agents into some of these communities just as Red Cross agents were sent to starving European countries after the last war."

Lorenz advocated more careful planning of community services before construction gets under way in rural and semirural defense centers.

Linked to Defense Program

"If the Army can expand 680 per cent and still provide clean water for the troops to drink, and sewerage services, then I don't see why the same facilities cannot be made available to the army of workmen that go into backwoods areas to work on defense construction," he said.

Decent planning, he declared, would speed up the defense program, for it would mean the providing of roads for better transportation and of health safeguards that would obviate delays caused by sickness.

"The greatest social problem arising from defense migration," he continued, "is the public health problem. And yet our greatest defense concentration points have been in the very areas of the South where health provisions are the barest."

Lorenz said he realized that planning was a "dread word" but he thought a little of it would accomplish wonders.

Daniels pointed out that the call for speed had been persistent that proper planning had been impossible in many instances.

"In general," he said, "the responsibility for the conditions which existed in the first push of defense belongs to the whole American people who demanded such a push—and demand it still. Sometimes undoubtedly military officials seemed to act less in preparation of communities than in surprise. I remember one official of a defense-inundated town said to me: 'We didn't have any more idea of this happening than a hog has of Sunday.'"

Communities Worried

In many communities, Daniels said, the authorities were worried so much about what to do with migrant children who appeared voluntarily to attend school that no effort was made to get the truants into the classrooms.

"There has not been time or facilities," he explained, "to take care of children coming into the world, not to speak of the children going into schools. In one military area a count by qualified investigators disclosed that 58 women had arrived who were expecting babies within three months, without plans—or proper place—for their arrival. The health officer in Monterey County, California, said not long ago, 'no woman has had her baby in the street yet but a good many births take place under very undesirable conditions.'"

$219,065,010 Defense Orders Let in Week

By the Associated Press

The Navy's order for 239 small boats boosted defense contracts last week to a total of $219,065,010, the largest amount let in any one week this year.

Navy awards accounted for $134,568,723 of this total and Army contracts, $84,496,268.

The Navy contracts for mine sweepers, subchasers and tugs totaled $100,315,682 and were divided among 52 concerns.

The Navy arranged for construction of an ordnance equipment plane near Centerline, Mich., at a cost not to exceed $20,000,000. The contract for building, equipping and organizing the plant for operation went to the Hudson Motor Car Co., which will receive a fee of $350,000.

The Navy also contracted for expansion of the plant of the Leeland-Gifford Co., Worcester, Mass., to cost an estimated $1,362,617.

The Army ordered a $16,000,000 expansion of the facilities of the Chase Brass & Copper Co. plant at Cleveland. The expanded facilities will be used in making ammunition brass and cartridge cases.

Two other construction projects were initiated with the issuance of letters of intent to the Fisher Body Division of the General Motors Corporation and to the Ford Motor Co. The letters were issued in advance of a formal contract. The Fisher agreement calls for a $6,875,000 expansion to a Memphis, Tenn., plant to make bombing plane parts.

The Army awarded a $7,255,000 contract for the manufacture of aircraft cannon at Poughkeepsie, N. Y. The sum included $4,000,000 for the purchase of machinery and equipment to be used in making the cannon.

Topping the list of Army supply purchases was an order for an undisclosed number of planes from Vultee Aircraft, Inc., Nashville, Tenn., to cost $3,735,890.

The Navy's biggest order, aside from those for boats, was a contract with the Babcock & Wilcox Co. for manufacturing ordnance equipment at its Alliance, Ohio, plant to cost $2,550,000.

Britain Captures Secrets of Luftwaffe's Treasured Bombsight

By International News Service

Great Britain has penetrated one of Germany's most closely guarded secrets — the highly - treasured bombsight which Field Marshal Goering's Luftwaffe is using nightly to spread destruction over English cities, it was learned.

The bombsight, although an intricate product of German instrumental and optical ingenuity, has been found inferior to the latest type of bombsights in the possession of the British and American governments, it was learned.

Admittedly, however, the Luftwaffe's bombsight is the superior of some earlier types.

The sight is mechanically operated, the British learned, automatically releasing a bomber's cargo of explosive missiles when the plane reaches its target.

This fact, together with information gained from German airmen shot down and captured over England, has led the British to suspect that the heavy loss of air personnel inflicted by Spitfires and Hurricanes on the enemy has compelled the Luftwaffe to use comparatively poorly-trained fliers to operate their bombing equipment.

Germany, according to British estimates, has lost nearly 10,000 trained airmen, either killed, wounded or captured, in operations over England since the mass aerial assault began last August.

This estimate is in the ratio of two and a half men per plane brought down. This is considered conservative since, while the Messerschmitt fighters are piloted by one flier, the Heinkels, Dorniers and other bombers have crews of five men, and that the majority of the planes shot down over England have been bombers.

Full details of the secret German bombsight, it was learned, have been made available to American Army and Navy air experts by the British.

Some of the refinements of the sight, especially the optical intricacies, it is understood, may be of use to these two governments. The lenses were made by the famous German optcial instrument company, Zeiss.

The secret came to light when a bombsight, completely intact, fell into British hands by one of the freaks of war. The British had sought for months to obtain a German sight, but the German airmen were under strictest orders, regardless of their own lives, to destroy the sight if they were shot down over enemy territory.

To insure its destruction, the German bombing planes were fitted with an incendiary device so the gas tanks could be exploded by the crew if its engines were put out of action by the Spitfires, and a forced landing was necessitated on British soil.

The resultant fiercely burning fire would destroy the engines, control cabin and bombing turret, bombsight and all other instruments. Bomber after bomber was shot down, but either destroyed by impact, or by fire if the crew got out alive.

Then a Heikel III-K was caught at low altitude by a Spitfire, riddled with bullets, and made a crash landing, intact but for the undercarriage, and the crew badly injured.

In it was found the much-sought "Lofte 7-B" mechanical bombsight.

Liner Is Renamed For Gen. Catlin, Marine Hero

The Navy has renamed the liner George Washington for a Marine Corps commander at Belleau Wood, and two other ships it is acquiring as transports for other Marine leaders of the A. E. F.

The George Washington, German-built luxury liner, famous as a transport in 1917-18, was renamed the Brig. Gen. Albertus W. Catlin, in honor of the commander of the Sixth Marines during many World War battles.

Two smaller transports now being built by the Maritime Commission for the Navy were named the Brig. Gen. Charles A. Doyen and the Maj. Gen. Legan Feland. Both were commanders of the Fifth Marines during the heavy fighting of 1918.

Man Picketing Picket Beaten At Walter Reed

Another labor mystery developed yesterday at Walter Reed Hospital, where an open-shop picket who was picketing a closed-shop picket reported he was assaulted by four unidentified nonpickets.

Lewis Williams, 809 T Street Northwest, a colored picket for the Sam Merando Co., was going about his business of picketing A. F. of L. sign-bearers, he said, when four men jumped from a parked car and knocked him to the ground.

He told police that they tore up his sign which read "A. F. L. Unfair to Merando and this Defense Project," and then left before help arrived. Police said Williams was not injured and did not wish to press charges.

A. F. of L. officials, who are protesting open-shop work by Sam Merando's firm on a $250,000 psychiatric ward, said that if Williams was assaulted it was not by A. F. of L. men and that they do not use such tactics.

C. I. O. officials, some of whose men are working under Merando, offered no solution.

Police said that as the picket was not injured seriously enough for an accident report and had not pressed charges, the case was closed as far as they are concerned.

Williams said he has some definite ideas on who did it. Meanwhile, he is nursing a bruised back.

G. W. Speech Contest Won By Filipino

A Filipino student, preparing for a career in the foreign service of his native land, last night won top honors in an oratorical contest of the Isaac Davis Public Speaking Society of George Washington University.

Joseph Cariaga, senior in George Washington's Foreign Service School, was adjudged the winner in a discussion of the topic, "Is World Peace Attainable."

Speaking with only a trace of accent, Cariaga said not by legislation or disarmament conferences could peace be achieved but only by elevation of standards in international relations.

War and defense figured large in the speeches of the four other youthful orators.

Neal Tomey, second-place winner, declared the "fever for war must be replaced by fervor for peace." He urged complete racial tolerance as means of attaining national unity in this country.

Ira Brown, who placed third, advocated a League of Nations based on the unstinted support of all nations as a means of attaining "true international government."

Other speakers were Edward Butler and Michael McKool. The meeting was held in the hall of government.

Mother Kills Self, Daughter

A coroner's verdict of "homicide and suicide" last night wrote the end to a mother's fear for her child's health.

Mrs. Marguerite Jenkins, 40, and her 10-year-old daughter, Mary Ann, were found dead early yesterday in the gas-filled kitchen of their apartment in the Broadmoor, 3601 Connecticut Avenue Northwest.

Mrs. Jenkins' husband, Elmer, director of the national touring bureau of the American Automobile Association, was out of town on a business trip. A milkman detected the odor of gas shortly before 7 a. m. and the pair was found by a night clerk who entered the apartment.

There were two notes, one addressed to police urging that Mrs. Jenkins' mother, Mrs. Arthur Solvsberg, 4007 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, not be notified and explaining how to reach her husband. The other note was sealed and addressed to Mr. Jenkins.

Both mother and daughter were in nightclothes lying on the kitchen floor. The little girl had apparently been carried asleep from her bed into the kitchen police reported.

Friends yesterday said Mrs. Jenkins had recently been distressed over a foot ailment which had been bothering Mary Ann. She feared, said a family spokesman, that the child would grow into a hopeless cripple.

Jenkins, who has been with A. A. A. for 15 years, was in Charlotte, N. C., Monday night and returned to his office here about 7:30 a. m. yesterday. He attempted several times to communicate with his family and finally received a telephone call telling of the tragedy.

The bodies were taken to Gawler's undertaking establishment.

D. C. Heads Cold To Prices Ban In Liquor Ads

A proposed ban on price advertising of liquor products will be disapproved by the District Commissioners, it was disclosed yesterday.

Today the city heads begin consideration of a set of 22 changes in the liquor code, including the price ban, which were submitted to the Commissioners by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board last year.

Proposed by the Beverage Industry Committee, the ban on prices would apply to handbills, newspapers, but not to bona fide menus in hotels, restaurants and taverns.

The Commissioners already have gone on record favoring legislation to permit standing at bars and are expected to take formal action on this matter today. The proposal to prohibit a person from obtaining a liquor license if the establishment is within 600 feet of a church or school, library or athletic field will not be approved in its present form.

Engineer Commissioner David McCoach, jr., said he is in sympathy with the intent of the proposal but did not think the 600-foot rule could be applied.

One consideration concerns the extended closing time from midnight Saturday to 2 a. m. Sunday. If the closing hour is extended in this case the present opening from midnight Sunday to 2 a. m. Monday would be abolished. At least one of the Commissioners favors this plan.

Maureen O'Sullivan Stars At Greek War Relief Dance

Maureen O'Sullivan, the film star, made a talk in praise of Greek soldiers and signed hundreds of autographs last night when she appeared as guest of honor at a Greek war relief benefit dance in the Mayflower Hotel.

"I am proud to be one to help the cause of Greece," she told a crowd of nearly 1,000 dancers, including diplomatic representatives of Denmark, Poland, Norway, Greece, Turkey and South Africa.

On finishing her talk she was mobbed by autograph hunters who kept her busy for an hour.

The ballroom was dotted with colorful uniforms of Evzones and other native costumes.

Activities included songs and dances by entertainers from the Capitol Theater. Achilles Castonis, Washington president of the National Greek War Relief Association, was master of ceremonies.

The affair was sponsored jointly by all local Greek organization and the Greek War Relief Association.

Miss O'Sullivan came to town earlier in the day, bringing her blond baby on her arm, in defiance of the notion that her public and private lives should be kept separate.

The blue eyes of 21-month-old Michael Damian Farrow, seeing the world for the first time, were no wider than the blue eyes of his mother, seeing Washington for the first time.

Soon after their arrival at Union Station, both mother and child launched into a busy day. In their suite at the Mayflower Hotel, Michael posed for photographers with flash bulbs widening his eyes, until he was finally too excited to eat his usual amount of custard at lunch.

Miss O'Sullivan made a dramatic luncheon appearance, downstairs, in black dress with flaring gloves of purplish-red taffeta and tiny hat of the same color, veiled in black. She attended the luncheon of representatives of Washington Greek societies, on the eve of the ball for benefit of the national Greek relief drive last night.

After lunch, she curled up in a corner of the sofa in her suite, with her veiled hat at a beguiling angle, and discoursed on her theories of bringing up a baby.

"First of all, I treat him like a person. No baby talk," she said firmly. "I don't talk down to him. "When he can't have something that he wants, I tell him why, and he understands," she added.

"He's never been spanked. It's never been necessary. We can persuade him to be good," Miss O'Sullivan said.

"It is rather a problem to bring up a baby and act in the movies, too," she admitted. "When I'm working on a picture, I leave early in the morning and don't get home till it's just about his bedtime.

"If you saw me in 'Maisie Was a Lady' you'd realize what a problem it is to hurry home to spend a little time with the baby. I didn't stay to see the 'rushes' (the scenes filmed the previous day), so I didn't know how terrible I looked. If I had known, I could have had something better done about my make-up. But I was practically mutilated in that picture!

"I was supposed to be ugly in the picture, but there's no use going beyond a certain point," Miss O'Sullivan said, smiling.

(The murmur from the next room was Michael, happily extracting the rubber tires from a tiny toy auto.)

The problem of bringing him up is even more complicated for Miss O'Sullivan is doing it alone, at the moment. Her husband, John Farrow, the writer-director, is now on duty with the royal navy. She and Michael have had one reunion with him in Canada, since he left a year ago.

On plans for Michael's future, Miss O'Sullivan is firm on certain points, one of them being: "No, he isn't going to be in the movies—at least, not as a child actor. If, when he grows up, he wants to, that's his decision."

He still doesn't know he has a famous actress mother. "When he gets old enough to be spoiled by the spotlight, then I won't take him around on trips like this," Miss O'Sullivan said.

Yesterday he and his nurse went for a stroll in the sunshine, while Miss O'Sullivan went for a glimpse of the White House on her way for a call at the Irish Legation. She's as Irish as she looks—with her bright blue eyes and brown hair.

After the Greek benefit ball she planned to stay on for several days. When she was asked if she would autograph tickets to the midnight benefit show at the Capitol Theater Saturday night, she instantly asked: "Why not let me sell tickets beforehand in a booth somewhere, if it would help?" And as quickly as that, plans were being made for her to do so.

Knox Favors More D.C. Boys At Annapolis

Secretary of the Navy Knox yesterday indorsed the Reynolds bill to increase from 5 to 15 the number of midshipmen allowed at the Naval Academy from the District.

Writing to Chairman Walsh, of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, Secretary Knox called attention to the recent growth in population of Washington and pointed out that five States with fewer residents were entitled to 15 appointments.

The States are Arzona, with a population of 499,261; Delaware, with 266,505; Nevada, 110,247; New Mexico, 531,818, and Wyoming, 250,742.

"It apears, therefore, that as a matter of justice to the population of the District of Columbia," Knox wrote, "the legislation is warranted, and the Navy Department recommends the enactment of S. 703.

"Under the present law, which authorizes five appointments of midshipmen from the District of Columbia, two are scheduled to graduate in 1942, two in 1932 and one in 1944. If ten additional midshipmen from the District of Columbia enter in the year 1942, there will be 12 appointments available in 1942, two in 1943, and one in 1944.

"It appears desirable, therefore, in order that appointments may be distributed more evenly during the successive years that the proposed bill should be amended to distribute the additional ten appointments in accordance with the following: Four for 1942, four for 1943, and two for 1944."

Secretary Knox suggested the language of an amendment to make this change and concluded by stating that the Bureau of the Budget had no objection to the legislation.

District's First Ratbite Fever Case Described

The first proved case in the District of Columbia of ratbite fever, caused by a germ which is a cousin of the syphilis spirochete, was revealed and described yesterday by two local doctors.

Coauthors of an article in the current issue of the District Medical Society's monthly "Annals," Dr. Ardzroony Packchanian and Dr. Lewis K. Sweet, said the victim a 7-month old colored girl, made a complete recovery.

Bitten on the thumb and middle finger of the right hand, the infant was brought to Gallinger Hospital seven days later, seriously ill. After five weeks' treatment she was discharged. Sulfanilamide injections were the principal treatment.

Inoculation of laboratory mice with specimens of the infected baby's blood resulted in isolation of the odd form of spirochete which produces ratbite fever.

Dr. Packchanian is a scientist at the National Institute of Health. Dr. Sweet is head of the department of pediatrics at Gallinger Hospital.

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

A LIFE OF THRILLS has recently befallen lucky Earl Lawrence, singing star at the Shoreham. Carmen Miranda was a co-passenger with him on his recent trip to South America, appeared with him in the ship show. Returning north, he journeyed with Stokowski and his orchestra, who gave a concert in the ship's dining room. When the Stokowski band sat down to play, so little room was left that listeners had to stand around the wall. He left Buenos Aires for Montreal, which looks like a record for a "jump" from one singing engagement to another. While in Canada Earl was presented a silver identification disk by Lieut. Col. Hicks Lyme in behalf of the Glengarry Stormont Highlanders, and was also honored by being the only American civilian taken for a ride in a Canadian fighting plane from St. Hubert Field.

Jose and Paquita, whose Mexican dances make one think of technicolor movies, will arrive in La Salle Versailles on March 31. They recently were a prime thrill in the Shoreham Blue Room.

FACES AROUND PLACES. Cosmos Room. Sallie Ellers of the movies giving a typewritten list of request numbers to Carmen Cavallaro. Singers Rosita Rios and Pat Prochnik of the Troika dropping in between shows. . . . . Lounge Riviera. Mrs. Beverly Wadsworth entertaining lighthearted party that included silvery-tressed Miss Gertrude Webb, Benjamin Plunkett of the British Embassy, Audrey Campbell, James Porter and Jimmy Mitchell, jr. . . Madrillon. The large and lovely prewedding luncheon given for Miss Mary A. Troeter by her co-workers in the passport section of the State Department. She's now Mrs. Charles Eccleston. . . . Anchor Room. Airman Ray Brimmer, who's the image of movie star Bill Powell, stopping in to say aloha before taking off for Florida where he'll do ground flight training.

SOMBREROS ARE STAR HEADGEAR in both the Ying Cole Room and Ciro's Famous Village . . . Evelyn Knight of the King Cole is sporting a huge sombrero of bright colored straw that contrasts with Vicente de la Garza's chapeau magnifico of black with gold embroidery. . . . "Mayor" Ciro and pretty Ariel of the Famous Village never consider doing "Rancho Grande" unless they're wearing sombreros worthy of Pancho Villa.

SURE SIGNS OF SPRING. Fred Johansen, owner of the Silver Fox, poring over blueprints of the handsome outdoor terrace that will soon sprout beside the S. F. . . . The Rainbow Room orchestra arguing over golfing prowess. . . . The garden party number the Colleens are doing at Lotus. Their transparent hats and bouffant black-and-white frocks look like a summer style prophecy. . . . "Jivin' Jack" Schafer, of the Casino Royal, exposing his brilliant but almost thatchless dome to the balmy breezes of F Street. . . . Oscar of the Hi-Hat, with a pocketful of seed catalogues and planning a garden that'll be abloom every month in the year.

Recordings by the Dalton Boys will be coming out steadily, but without interrupting their Neptune Room engagement. Since arriving in Washington they've been making records every week in New York. They get the first plane out in the morning, fly back here early in the afternoon. They recently entertained "planemate" Mayor LaGuardia on the trip back.

CONTRASTS IN HITS. The choral singing of "Sylvia" by Jack Coffey's new band at Wardman Park and the Three Smart Girls. It makes the most inveterate chatterboxes stop, look and listen. . . . "Slap Happy Band," dizzy new specialty of Dick Koons' orchestra in the Mayflower Lounge, with "Ha-Cha" Gardner as the chief clapper-slapper. . . . The undiluted melody of Wienowski's "Romance" that delights the music-loving customers of Restaurant "823" when played by the Heintze Brothers and Jane Marlow. . . . The enchaining Pan-American music being done in Mayfair by Paul Kain's group. Between Paul's magic clarinet, Adele Van's velvety voice and Sammy Ferro's frenetic drums, all hearers are in a state of happy confusion. . . . "Blue Sea Shells," played by Don Carper's Four in Cafe Caprice. It's Don's favorite number.

A SHOWMAN'S CHILD is Al Schenk, master of ceremonies at Paul Young's. Both his mother and father were associated with the Jewish Theater and great friends of Paul Muni's parents, also theatrical people. Paul and Al were boyhod playmates.

KAVAKOS' WEEKENDS are like a night spot owner's dream. The place is packed early in the evening and from then on there's a waiting crowd hoping that someone will take a notion to leave. The floor shows are something swell. Last week they included the splendid singer Sidney Boyd, who did numberless encores under the pressure cheers, whistles and applause. Also, of Joe Tinker, jr., son of the famed star of the Chicago Cubs, and such an amazingly clever dancer that the prestige of his name is just so much velvet, and a pair of pretty and smart girl dancers. Bill Kavakos has an equally excellent revue booked to open this Friday.

Jekyll-Hyde of Redd Raffell's orchestra at the Nightingale is Oliver "Sherly" Williams who sings "Margie" sweet style, then does it up a la sizzle on his trombone.

RIVER BEND, one of the most popular countryside spots, is the creation of a railroad rate expert. That was the profession of Proprietor Bob Gilliland before he turned his talents toward night spot operation. His program for River Bend success and good cheer began with chicken dinners cooked by a secret recipe and the satisfying rhythms of George Stein's orchestra. Later he sponsored the Wednesday "Piggy Parties." Friday "Harvest Nights" are his latest innovation.

DICK'S GRILL is a favorite gathering spot for musicians, show people and newspapermen. It's largely because cordial Owner Dick Ashby played in theater orchestras for years, knows Washington like a book. But the shrimps fried in butter and crab gumbo soup are also prime attractions.

HOGATE'S first floor grill and lobby have just been remodeled handsomely, will be on view for the first time today. The grill is done in smoky pine paneling and "deep water green" and is sporting a new bar. The lobby is a symphony in "driftwood gray". Highly modern new air conditioning was a part of the remodeling.

Michel, new gypsy violinist at the Plymouth, is one of the finest. He's made records for Columbia, is a native of Vilna in Poland. Ask him to play his own composition "Turkish Fantasy."

$1,360 Raised For Youth Hurt Helping Police

A "thank you" present of $1,360 will be deposited today to the credit of Jon Francis, 20-year-old baggage clerk, who was seriously wounded last month attempting to stop an armed man who was eluding police.

Inspector James F. Beckett, chairman of a committee named by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, to collect the fund, said the amount had been raised from policemen, citizens and from contributions sent to The Washington Post and the Evening Star.

More than $900 of the amount was raised from men in the various police precincts and from the Policemen's Association, which contributed $100, Beckett stated. Other donations came from New York and Philadelphia and at least one member of Congress, he declared.

Beckett said that if it is needed part of the money will be used to defray hospital expenses of the youth. The rest, he said, will be turned over to Francis and his mother when he is fully recovered.

Francis, an employe at the Greyhound bus terminal, was shot in the chest, February 27, by Murphy Hubbs while the latter was fleeing police. Francis made an effort to capture the crazed gunman at Eleventh and H Streets Northwest, when a policeman in the chase shouted, "Get that man."

Hubbs shot and killed himself a few minutes later while police were closing in.

Francis lives with his mother at Colonial Village, Arlington Va., and earns a small salary. His mother also is employed.

FAVORITE RECIPES OF FAMOUS PEOPLE

JANE PICKENS' One-Dish Pork Chop Meal

6 pork chops
1 tablespoon shortening
2 teaspoons salt
2 tablespoons grated onion
1 tablespoon Lea & Perrins Sauce
1 can tomato soup (condensed)
½ cup water
4 cups cooked noodles

Brown chops in shortening until golden brown, season with half the salt. Combine remaining salt, onion, Lea & Perrins Sauce, tomato soup and water. Place noodles in casserole, add tomato soup mixture. Arrange chops overlapping around inner edge of casserole; cover and bake in moderate oven (350°F.) for 1½ hours. This makes 4 to 6 servings.

Here's a delightful dinner duet...plump pork chops singing harmony with tender noodles, with Lea & Perrins Sauce lending the professional, blue-ribbon chef's touch to the glamorous combination.

For all meat and fish recipes, for an elegant pour-on-at-table garnish for steaks and chops, use Lea & Perrins Sauce, the original Worcestershire. Watch the family sing your praises!

Meet Challenge To Humanity, Pastor Exhorts

The railroad warning of "stop, look and listen!" was used as a spiritual injunction by the Rev. William N. Vincent at yesterday's Southeast Lenten services at the Penn Theater. He is pastor of Eastern Church.

"We dare not blind our eyes to the tremendous spiritual challenges before us today," he told a large noonday congregation. "Blind faith will not lift humanity, for what shall it profit America if she gains the world and loses her democracy?"

"As we face a spiritual blackout," he continued, "I call you to witness that our great need is for men and women who will hear what the Lord says. Against this are voices of dictators and despotic forces demanding that we hear them."

Service Broadcast

The Rev. Ralph Loew, assistant pastor of Reformation Lutheran Church, will speak today at noon. The daily services are being broadcast over WINX.

Speaking at the daily noonday Lenten services of Epiphany Church yesterday, Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo compared conditions today with those of Jesus' time, declaring revolutionary groups then and now to be without sympathy for the teachings of Jesus.

"These contemporary revolutionary groups who claim to be building a new world are insistent upon using hate, force and ruthlessness," he charged, contending that a new world can be built only on good will, love and compassion. He is pastor of St. Nicholas' Collegiate Church, New York City, and former pastor of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church here. He will speak again today at noon.

Dr. Sizoo Speaks Daily

Dr. Sizoo will address the weekly Lenter service of Chevy Chase Protestant Churches tomorrow at 8 p. m. at Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, Chevy Chase Circle. He is speaking daily at noon this week at Epiphany Church, 1317 G Street Northwest.

The Rev. William Norman Vincent will address the weekly Washington Federation of Churches' Lenten services today at 4:45 p. m. at Epiphnay Church. Dr. Simpson B. Daugherty, pastor of Memorial United Brethren Church, will preside.

The congregation of Takoma Lutheran Church, Seventh and Dahlia Streets Northwest, will hold its weekly Lenten service tonight at 8. The Rev. J. Adrian Pfeiffer, pastor, will speak on "Jesus Meets a Hypocrite—a Man Who Lets Church Become a Habit."

2,157 Received February Relief

An increase of 4 per cent in the number of cases receiving relief in the District in February was marked over January, the Social Security Board announced yesterday. An increase of 5 per cent in the amount of relief given in February was revealed.

A total of 2,157 persons received aid and $54,435 was granted in funds, it was said.

Reports from 35 States and the District showed an average decrease of 5 per cent in the amount of obligations incurred for general relief, and a decrease of 3 per cent in the number of cases receiving relief, it was disclosed.

Col. MATTICE

Col. Mattice was a native of White Plains, N. Y. He came to this city at the age of 21. He was commissioned an officer in the Rough Riders and served with that unit throughout the Spanish-American War.

He was active for many years in the Boy Scout organization and held the office of assistant to the Scout executive for the District of Columbia Council.

Col. Mattice lived at 1410 Girard Street Northwest, where he died.

Harold Marsh Elected Bowdoin Alumni Head

Harold N. Marsh, an attorney, was elected president of the Washington Chapter of the Bowdoin (Maine) Alumnia Association last night. Hubert S. Shaw was reelected secretary.

The alumni, meeting at Wesley Hall, Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest, heard talks by C. M. Sills, president of the college, and three alumni who are Senators—Harold H. Burton, of Ohio, and Ralph O. Brewster and Wallace H. White, jr., of Maine.

Lieut. M. S. Holmes' Funeral Services Set for Saturday

Funeral services for Lieut. Merrill S. Holmes, naval submarine commander, who was killed in an automobile accident in Manila, P. I., February 16, will be held at 10:30 a. m. Saturday in the chapel at the United States Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md. Burial will be in the Naval Cemetery in Annapolis.

Lieut. Holmes had lived in Arlington, Va., for two years, while on duty at the Navy Department, before being assigned to submarine duty at the Philippine Islands last June. A native of St. Paul, Minn., he was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1931.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Katherine Linthicum Holmes; two children, Meta Katherine Holmes and Merrill S. Holmes, jr., of Annapolis; a brother, John Holmes, of Los Angeles, Calif., and a sister, Mrs. Charles Andrews, of Milwaukee, Wis.

D. C. Court Hears Hammond Plea To Save Career

Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue of the District Court yesterday heard the appeal of Ogden H. Hammond, jr., for a court order to preserve his career job in the Foreign Service.

Hammond, former vice consul at Vienna and Leipsig, asserted that he was falsely accused in publicly mimicking President Roosevelt and of disloyal relations with a German woman agent. When he refused to quit, he charged, he was placed on "probation" and ordered to Montreal.

Hammond asked the court to compel the State Department to grant him a hearing on the charges. Argued yesterday was his motion to prevent any proceedings against him until the case is settled.

Assistant District Attorney John Laskey presented affidavits of high State Department officials that Hammond was placed on probation because his work was unsatisfactory. Laskey urged that the suit be dismissed. Justice O'Donoghue is expected to rule later in the week.

Funeral Held For Stafford, D. C. Teacher

Funeral services were held yesterday for Alphonso O. Stafford, teacher in colored schools for a half century, who died Saturday at his home, 1600 T Street Northwest.

A native of Alexandria, Mr. Stafford was educated in local public schools, Miner Normal School and Howard, Columbia and Pennsylvania Universities.

He taught in public schools here and in Baltimore and at Hampton Institute for Teachers. He was the author of "Animal Fables From the Dark Continent."

Dr. Stafford was a member of the Elementary School Principals Association of the National Education Society, the Columbia Education Association, the Federation of Parent-Teacher Associations and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Surviving are a son, Alphonso, jr., of this city, and a sister, Mrs. Aurelia Baltimore, of Alexandria.

Funeral Today In Alexandria For R. M. Green

Funeral services for Richard Mayger Green, 81, former vice president of the Citizens National Bank, Alexandria, who died yesterday, will be held today at 11 a. m. in St. Paul's Church, Alexandria, with the Rev. Ernest A. deBordenave, officiating. Burial will be in Ivy Hill Cemetery.

A lifelong resident of Alexandria, Mr. Green had been associated with the Alexandria bank for 44 years, but retired two years ago. He was treasurer of the Ivakota Crittenton League, of the National Florence Crittenton Mission, and was at one time a first lieutenant in the old Alexandria Light Infantry.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Nannie E. Green; a daughter, Ester Holliday Green; a son, Richard M., jr., and two sisters, the Misses Alice J. and M. Belle Green.

The Alexandria Library, of which Miss Alice Green is a staff member, will be closed during the hours of the funeral this morning.

Mrs. Thompson, D. C. Chiropodist For 30 Years, Dies

Mrs. S. A. Thompson, 67, a practicing chiropodist here for 30 years under her professional name of Dr. Pearl E. Hood, died yesterday at a nearby Maryland sanitarium after an illness of two weeks.

A native of Kentucky, she came to Washington at the age of 17. She resided and maintained an office at 706 Eighth Street Northwest. She was a member of Bethany Chapter No. 4, Order of the Eastern Star.

She leaves, besides her husband, two daughters, Mrs. Victoria Myers and Mrs. Helen D. Du Chaine, of Washington; four sisters, Mrs. Clara Tuttle, of Naples, Fla.; Mrs. Margaret Wright, of Richland, Ohio; Mrs. Helen Pulliam, of Washington, and Mrs. Harold Kelly, of Silver Spring, Md., and two brothers, Paul and Winter Moore, of Washington.

Funeral services will be held at 1 p. m. tomorrow at the Chambers Southeast Funeral Home, 517 Eleventh Street Southeast, with burial in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

C. S. Easterling's Funeral Services To Be Held Today

Funeral services for Charles S. Easterling, 82, who died Sunday, will be at Hines funeral home at 10:30 a. m. today. Burial will be private.

Mr. Easterling, a native of Kansas, came to this city in 1892. He served successively as special assistant to the Attorney General, in charge of Indian litigation, and as an attorney with the Board of Tax Appeals. He retired from the latter post in 1928.

He was active in Friends Church here and was a charter member of the old Citizens Forum, being its first president.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Clara Burton Easterling, and two daughters, Mrs. Harold D. Baker, of Washington, and Mrs. Viggo Jorgensen, of Hartford, Conn.

Miss Mary Crans, Teacher Here, Dies in West

Miss Mary Bruyn Crans, 69, a teacher of Spanish at Central High School for 20 years, died Monday in Orange, Calif., from the results of a fracture suffered early in January, it was learned here yesterday.

Miss Crans was born in Ulster County, N. Y., and was graduated from the Univeristy of North Dakota at the age of 18 and later took her D. D. S. degree from the University of Michigan. She was a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

One of the first to volunteer as a teacher in the Philippines, Miss Crans became registrar of the Manila Normal School. She taught at Central High School from 1915 to 1930. Surviving is a sister, Miss Emma Cornelia Crans, of Washington.

Accident Killing Husband Fatal To D. C. Woman

Mrs. Edith Pruitt, 22, 622 F Street Northeast, died yesterday of a head injury and multiple fractures in the Medical College of Virginia Hospital, Richmond, Va., where she was taken Monday after an automobile crash which killed her husband on Route 1 seven miles north of Ashland, Va.

The car left the road on a curve, struck a tree and overturned. Lawrence A. Pruitt, 25, driver of the car, was a junior clerk in the Tipton & Myers Drug Store at Fourteenth and Rhode Island Avenue Northwest.

The Pruitts came to Washington from Asheville, N. C., in 1938.

It is understood that the body of Mr. Pruitt is being held in Richmond for a post mortem examination, while the body of his wife is being sent to her home in Asheville, N. C.

Red Cross Officials Hold Testimonial for Edna May

Miss Edna May, who served as secretary of the 1940 Roll Call of the District Chapter of the American Red Cross, was honored at a luncheon yesterday by the roll call committee at the Raleigh Hotel. She is leaving her position here to be married to John W. Fadley, an executive with the Alcohol Tax Unit in Baltimore.

Speakers called attention to her efficient service in the last roll call when 158,653 members were obtained and $204,705 was raised, with the largest percentage of population enrolled in any city in the United States.

Gen. Frank R. Keefer, chairman of the District Chapter of the Red Cross, and Otto Lund, manager of the chapter, praised her work in many previous roll calls also. Edgar Morris, 1940 roll call chairman, expressed the hope that Miss May would be able to come over from Baltimore to give assistance in the 1941 drive.

Miller Will Direct D. C. Traffic Control

Commissioner Hazen yesterday said the Board of Commissioners today would approve the designation of Inspector Arthur E. Miller as head of all traffic control work in the police department.

Inspector Miller will succeed Inspector William E. Holmes, whose retirement becomes effective April 1. The vacancy in the inspectors rank will not be filled. The Commissioners have decided to abolish the one job, which pays $4,500, and hire two privates instead.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Look Out for an Arrow In That Jinx Third Rib

Loew Bookings Turn Lightly to You Know What; Noel Coward Pays Respects to Old Friends; This, That and the Other About the Theater

"IN THE SPRING," as someone has said, "the young man's fancy—you bet he is." But the fact remains that at this idyllic time of year he continues to turn to thoughts of love. The thing seems to be borne out by the bookings that are announced for immediately ensuing weeks in the Loew theaters in Washington.

BELL

Beginning Thursday, for example, at Loew's Capitol, Wallace Beery will begin playing Cupid, although "The Bad Man" is a rather fat and swarthy love-bird with a six-shooter instead of a bow and arrow. However, he does manage to bring Laraine Day and Ronald Reagan together, as the gentlemanly brigand created on the stage by the late Holbrook Blinn and picturized once or twice since.

Coming soon to the Palace will be "The Ziegfeld Girl," in which there are three love stories, instead of the conventional one. Jimmy Stewart, lately inducted into the armed forces of the United States, romances with Lana Turner; Judy Garland loves Jackie Cooper and Hedy Lamarr is involved in a triangular business with Tony Martin and Philip "Escape" Doran.

Preston Sturges, "the one-man Hollywood," deals lightly and not too politely with the so-called "tender passion" in "The Lady Eve," in which Henry Fonda and Barbara Stanwyck are costarred. That will be coming along to some Loew screen or other before you have grown very much older.

In his characteristically irreverent fashion, Ernst Lubitsch treats of love and marriage in "That Uncertain Feeling," in which Merle Oberon, Melvyn Douglas and Burgess Meredith will be seen in the pivotal roles. That's on the Loew horizon, too. Not too low a horizon.

Alexander Korda's new production of "That Hamilton Woman," with Laurence Olivier and Vivien Leigh costarred, is another springtime assault upon the gentler impulses. This was made years ago, as a silent, with Corinne Griffith (Mrs. George Preston Marshall, wife of God's gift to linen, in private life) and Victor Varconi in the roles of "that Hamilton woman" and Lord Nelson.

Then there is that item known as "That Night in Rio," in which Don Ameche—and where has he been these past many weeks?—romances with both Alice Faye and Carmen Miranda, the lucky this-and-that.

Heigho, fellow, better take some more of those vitamin pills!

While we are still ecstatic and mildly maudlin over Paul Draper's dancing at the National, in joint appearance with his distinguished aunt, Ruth Draper, it would be unbecoming to omit some mention of the slightly bizarre costume Mr. Draper wears in his exhaustingly active numbers. It consists of a white silk shirt, with stock instead of collar, and a zipper-piece "ensemble" of trousers and vest, without coat, jacket, tunic, or whatever you want to call it. When Mr. Draper makes his first entrance the impression is that he has just come in from sprinkling the lawn, tinkering with his car, or something. The rig is an assertive blue in the first act and a modest dubonnet in the second. Whether Mr. Draper was sprinkling any lawn or not, what he proceeds to do is sprinkle the National stage with the most astonishing exhibition of artistic agility anybody ever has seen.

And lest it be forgotten to bestow credit where it is overwhelmingly due, it should be said no later than now that Earl Fox, at the piano for the Draper dances, turns in as impeccable a performance as the extraordinary fellow he accompanies. Mr. Fox is a complete and competent orchestra in himself.

It sometimes pays to be a snooper—impelled by considerate comrades in the common cause, who most unexpectedly tip you off to things of importance. Take last night, for instance. When I was apprised that Noel Coward, one of the preeminent eminents of the theater on both sides of the Atlantic, was in the audience at the National to see his old friends Ruth and Paul Draper in their pluperfect program, this column, with characteristic indifference to the pleasurable pastiming of others, completely disrupted his entra'acte. Mr. Coward, with whom we are wholly in consonance, deems Paul Draper the greatest of the present-day dancers. He unfurls, also, a fine line of adjectives in extollation of Ruth draper—equally deserved. But the point is that the companionable Coward is just back from Australia, is in Washington for a few days on a mission that is nobody's business and will be available for more lengthy future conversations. They will be coming up here. Last night's brief one was a high point of the week—and in the daily activities of the weak.

Personal aside to Geri Dorsey, recently here with Al Trahan; Wallace Acton, of the "Twelfth Night" company, and William Read, presumably father of the "Three Little Maids"—the three Read Sisters—in "The Streets of Paris:" My most cordial thanks for the words you strung together so handsomely in your genial notes.

Another-Personal-Aside-to-the-Weatherman Note

That's better.

WALLACE BEERY

as he will be seen in the title role of "The Bad Man," coming Thursday to the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater. This is the character created on the stage by the late Holbrook Blinn and one of the most amusing in the library of contemporary drama. Mr. Beery is flanked in this camera study by Nydia Westman (left) and Laraine Day (right)

Three New Films, Gene Autry Add Fillip to New Theater Week

"TOBACCO ROAD." The record-breaking play comes to the Palace screen tomorrow morning, adapted, directed and produced by the men who performed similar service for "The Grapes of Wrath," Nunnally Johnson, John Ford and Darryl Zanuck. The screen's Jeeter Lester is Charley Grapewin. Marjorie Rambeau plays Sister Bessie; Gene Tierney is Ellie May; William Tracy plays Dude, and Elizabeth Patterson is Jeeter's wife, Ada. Slim Summerville, Ward Bond and Grant Mitchell are others featured in the story.

Earle

"THE SEA WOLF." Edward G. Robinson, Ida Lupino and John Garfield costar in this adaptation of the novel by Jack London. London's story told of the shanghaied crew of the Ghost and her ruthless captain. Supporting players include Barry Fitzgerald, Gene Lockhard, Alexander Knox and David Bruce. On the stage, three of the famed Powers Models break into song to become known as the "Singing Powers Models" and headline the revue. The Roxyettes return from their vacation with refreshed routines, Joe and Jane McKenna, Maysy and Brack, and a new version of the "Sing-a-Song-With-Mike" routine also are promised. Opens Friday morning.

Capitol

"THE BAD MAN." Wallace Beery joins forces with Lionel Barrymore in this screen transcription of the stage play, with Beery playing Pancho Lopez, the whimsical bandit, Laraine Day, Ronald Reagan, Nydia Westman, Tom Conway, Henry Travers, Chill Wills and Chris-Pin Martin are other players. "Cherry Blossoms" is the stage revue, starring Dancer Paul Haakon. Alan Gale, the Six Honeys, Frank and Jean Hubert, Lynn Allison and the Rhythm Rockets are the other stage performers.

Metropolitan

"VIVACIOUS LADY." Ginger Rogers and James Stewart, Academy Award winners for the best performances of 1940, are the stars of this revival first issued several seasons ago. The story tells of a romance between a lively night club beauty and a serious botany instructor. After their marriage they try to keep the news from his prudish father, president of the university. Charles Coburn, Beulah Bondi, James Ellison, Frances Mercer, Jack Carson, Phyllis Kennedy and Franklin Pangborn top the support. Opens Friday morning.

Uline-Ice-Arena

GENE AUTRY and his horses, Champion and Champion, jr., are the starring attractions in Col. Jim Eskew's Rodeo opening a 10-day engagement tomorrow evening at the Uline Ice Arena, Third and M Streets Northeast. The picture star and radio favorite also promises to sing and play his guitar. The rodeo itself will include all the thrills of a Wild West show, with 125 performers and prize money to winners of broncho-busting, roping, steer-riding and bulldogging contests.

RKO-Keith's

"NICE GIRL?" The Deanna Durbin success, her ninth in succession, continues into a second week on Fifteenth Street, with Franchot Tone as the young man who finally pays some attention to a town's prize wallflower and Robert Benchley playing the youthful singer's screen father.

Columbia

Little

"NIGHT TRAIN." The English melodrama, with the early days of the present war for its settings, has entered its seventh week downtown. Rex Harrison, Margaret Lockwood and Paul von Hernreid are in the cast.

Trans-Lux

"UNCLE SAM—THE NONBELLIGERENT." The "March of Time's" picturization of America's problem in giving aid to Britain is the central short subject at the newsreel house for the incoming week. The film emphasizes conditions existing today in Nazi-dominated Europe.

Gayety

"Tropical Teasers." Hinda Wassau headlines the burlesque parade opening Sunday afternoon. Supporting the star are Jess Diamond and Frank X. Silk, comedians. Ethel Devaux, Ann Hamilton, Elsie Douglas, Gloria Dahl and Cleo Florenze are the featured dancers and display artistes.

Taylor the Newest Star for 'Western'

Studio tradition has it that a star isn't a star until he has done a Western.

If this is true, then Robert Taylor can take his place alongside the seasoned stars of Hollywood. "Billy the Kid" is his first Western.

Clark Gable, who had never ridden a horse before, got his Western initiation over early in his career, in "The Painted Desert." But Wallace Berry makes them often. Some of his most successful films have been Westerns.

Gary Cooper, although he has played many other types, has become indentified more or less with the Western hero. This is fitting, since he is a Montana boy himself. Errol Flynn, usually the sea-faring adventurer, donned chaps and guns for "Virginia City."

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, March 25 (INS). I call this inspired casting: Ann Sheridan as Randy Monaghan, the girl who lived on the wrong side of the tracks, in "Kings Row." What Annie would do with the role of Randy, who eventually married Drake McHugh and turned out to be a heroine after she was looked down on by all the townspeople! Sam Wood, the director of Henry Bellman's best seller, and Hal Wallis, have been casting the picture these last few days and they both see Annie as Randy.

PARSONS

I am happy to announce I am going on the radio again. After being on the air almost seven years, I am delighted that I am putting on previews of new pictures in conjunction with all the studios. Our first program starts March 28, over Columbia, from 7 to 7:30 p. m., P. S. T.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Townsend Netcher is confiding to intimates that Bernice Parks of the original "Meet the People" cast will be the next Mrs. Netcher; Eddie Goulding has bought George Brent's house and it looks like marriage for George and Ann Sheridan; the Paul Levitons, well known in Hollywood movie circles, have said adieu to married life; Gloria Swanson, who could easily pass for 27, at the Mocambo with her old friend, Gene Markey. That reminds me that Gene may be called into active training next month, since he is an officer in the Naval Reserve.

Russell Gleason has the measles and he isn't boasting about it; Mrs. Jack Warner leaves Thursday for Mexico City which seems to be the mecca now for so many of our Hollywood people; Frances Drake, who is prettier than ever, at La Maze with her husband, Cecil Howard; Jerry Colonna and his wife are showing everyone the candid snaps of the month-old adopted Robert John; the Jack Oakies celebrating a wedding anniversary at Ciro's; Brenda Joyce is flying to Kansas City to appear at the Greek Relief Benefit Show there Wednesday night.

Carole Landis is talking through her nose and her eyes are watering for she has such a bad cold.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

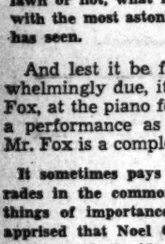
Hollywood, March 25.

"That Hamilton Woman" with Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier, is a thing of beauty so far as Vivien is concerned. She's breath-taking. I'm certain the original of all those famous paintings never had the acting ability of Miss Leigh. She's superb from start to finish—a joy to look at and listen to.



HOPPER

I can't say as much for Olivier's Lord Nelson. Why they should make him ugly and rather sinister, with a high squeaky voice, is a mystery to me. Well, maybe Nelson did have a high squeaky voice, but does anyone remember what he sounded like in the year of 1799? He has one charming love scene with Vivien—New Year's Eve in that same year.

When he takes her in his arms and says, "Now I've kissed you in two centuries," it's a very moving moment. Alexander Korda has produced the whole picture with a prodigal hand. The setings are superb.

Rosemary Lane, whose real name is good old Irish Mullican, wouldn't start a scene on St. Patrick's Day until there was a dash of green on the set. When no one produced the color, she did it herself by breaking a green bough and placing it on the camera. "What is this," Director Sidney Salkow asked, "a movie company or a CCC camp?"

Incidentally, Mrs. Dick Lane, wife of the actor making such a hit in "Time Out for Rhythm," was born on St. Patrick's Day, and has a perfect shamrock birthmark on her arm. Well, if I didn't tell you, Ripley would!

Mrs. Salkow, wife of the director and herself an interior decorator (she did Cesar Romero's home), got back from a trip through Alabama. Her souvenirs were hundreds of azalea plants, and Hubby Sidney has spent every spare hour putting them in the ground. Luther Burbank Salkow, they calls him now.

It was a big day for Gower Gulch when Herb Marshall dropped around to cast his vote for the mayor. If you must know, Gower Gulch is the place where our bearded Western extras hang out. And a year ago a murder was committed there which the passers-by thought was a scene for a picture. And the boys were so flattered to have Marshall lend some class to their election that they're now thinking of calling the place Marshall Mallow!

Monta Bell, who directed the first Norma Shearer and Greta Garbo pictures, is at it again. He's producing "Aloma of the South Seas," and temporarily took over direction in absence, due to illness, of Alfred Santell. So Dottie Lamour and Jon Hall are working for two bosses in one.

Film Table

RKO-Keith's—"Nice Girl?" at 11:15 a. m., 1:20, 3:25, 5:30, 7:35 and 9:40 p. m. "March of Time," at 1, 3:05, 7:15, and 9:20 p. m.

ENDS TODAY CHARLIE CHAPLIN "THE GREAT DICTATOR"

New York, March 25.

MAYOR LaGUARDIA: A legal precedent will soon have to be established in your court system. It concerns the lady you appointed to preside at the Children's Court bench—Mrs. Justine Wise Polier, daughter of Rabbi Wise and author of the forthcoming book, "Everybody's Children, Nobody's Child." Her second child is arriving—and there is no precedent for a jurist's taking a maternity leave. . . . Vincent Astor: Your brother, John Jacob Astor, is slated to become a morale officer in the Army. . . . Pearl Buck: The trip to China made recently by Lauchlin Currie, one of the President's secretaries, involved no expense to this Government. Chiang Kai-shek extended the invitation, and China paid for it. . . . Dr. H. H. Kung gave Currie 4 coolie-loads of presents.

LYONS

GROVER WHALEN: At last it has been made official—America won't participate in the World's Fair in Rome. Commissioner Teddy Hayes, who was to have gone to Rome to prepare the United States exhibits, finally was told that the whole thing's off. . . . Doris Duke: Your cousin, Angier Biddle Duke, who volunteered for the Army and was sent to Camp Petersburg, Va., likes it so much that he's leased a huge farm nearby. . . . Wendell Willkie: Senator Sherman Minton, who represented your home State, Indiana, and was defeated for reelection last year, will be appointed to the Circuit Court bench in Illinois.

DR. HU SHIH: The President soon will appoint a Minister to China to do a job similar to the assignment of W. Averell Harriman in London . . . New York Drama Critics Circle: After the closing of "Five Alarm Waltz," the play which ran two days, Everett Wile, its producer, rushed to the Village Vanguard and requested the the revuers to sing for him, all night long, their special routine panning all the drama critics . . . Jesse Jones: When your former RFC counsel, Tommy Corcoran, gets the job of Assistant Secretary of the Navy his specialization will be aircraft production. He's been conferring with the War Department's supervisor of aircraft production, so that both departments will co-operate in the common goal.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT, Jr.: The Committee of 30,000,000—the youth organization in which you and Willike's son, Philip, enrolled as members—is changing its name to the "League of American Youth for Democracy." . . . The organization is preparing to send flying squadrons of the best orators in the colleges to South America—to speak about democracy before the students in those countries. . . . The league also will sponsor an essay contest for all the men who have been conscripted into the Army. The subject will be, "What the Draft Life Has Taught Me About Democracy." The prize essayist will receive $500.

BEN HECHT: Gene Fowler now is wavering about doing that Hollywood column. He thinks the newspaper business has changed too much since he was in it last—a change evidenced by the fact that you were able to write 36 New York columns in advance, before leaving for the Coast. . . . Alvarez Del Vayo: Correspondents who returned from Madrid last week report that Italy and Germany, who won the war in Spain, now have lost the peace. . . . George Jessel: Your wife, Lois Andrew, celebrated her seventeenth birthday alone in New York and sighed: "Now I'm surely mature."

FIFTH AVENUE ASSOCIATION: Salvator Dali, the surrealist who literally sprang to prominence when he jumped through the window of a Fifth Avenue department store, is in Bowling Green, Va., now, as a guest of Caresse Crosby. Last week Dali decided to paint outdoors, and his hostess had to call for a rescue-squad. For the surrealist artist had placed his easel on top of a piano which he had managed to push into the middle of a lily pond—in an attempt "to enchant the surroundings." A bull, refusing to be enchanted, kept circling the pond waiting for Dali to step from his perch—until the stranded artist's shouts brought help . . . Ann Corio: Eddie Jaffe, your publicist, who describes himself as The World's Ugliest Press Agent, did the publicity work for the International Beauty Convention held last week. On the final day, in appreciation, the exhibitors grabbed and held Jaffe, while he was given a facial, permanent wave and hair-do.

BOOTH TARKINGTON: Irvin Cobb can't join you yet because—despite his decision to exile himself from Hollywood—he is unable to dispose of the house he purchased there. "If there's property to be bought, leave it to father to buy it," Cobb's daughter explained, in New York last weekend. "Nunnally Johnson knows father's habit. Nunnally said, "If Irvin Cobb was a castaway on an island which was the most desolate, pestilent and forbidding one in the whole world, and a rescue ship came to fetch him, Cobb would tell the captain, before boarding the vessel, "Wait just a minute—I've got to make a down payment to the man who owns this property."'"

5 Usherettes Here Fill Jobs Of Youths Called Up by Army

Apex Theater Girls Feel They're Doing Their Bit for Defense

When Helen Shahan, 19-year-old brunette, put on a bright blue brass-buttoned uniform last night and became a theater usherette (said to be the first in Washington recently), she felt she had a chore tied up with national defense.

She and four other usherettes are going on duty at the Apex Theater, 4815 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, because of the turnover of young men called to Selective Service.

Miss Shahan, who will be chief usherette, has sold cosmetics and candies in drug stores, since attending Western High School several years ago. But she has no qualms, she said, about learning the technique of handling crowds.

The five usherettes will form a nucleus for a larger group, with the likelihood that the plan will be extended to the Princess and Atlas Theaters, an offical said. Miss Shahan lives at 1723 P Street Northwest.

Church Drive Workers To Hold Rally Tonight

Workers from 162 churches participating in the Federation of Churches' annual financial drive beginning this Sunday, will stage a dinner rally tonight at 6:30 at First Congregational Church, Tenth and G Streets Northwest. Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, will speak.

March 30 will be celebrated as Federation Sunday. The drive for $25,000 will formally begin on Monday, continuing for two weeks.

K. C. Memorial Mass Scheduled Sunday

The annual Communion memorial mass for deceased members of Knights of Columbus in this jurisdiction will be celebrated at St. Matthew's Cathedral at 8 a. m. Sunday by Msgr. Edward Buckey. The sermon will be preached by the Rev. Wilfrid Parsons, S. J., former editor of America.

Representative James A. Shanley (Democrat), of Connecticut, will speak at the breakfast at the Mayflower Hotel following the mass.

President Asks $150,000 to Guard Books

President Roosevelt yesterday asked Congress to appropriate $150,000 to enable the Library of Congress to "effect precautionary measures for security" of its priceless books and documents.

Verner W. Clapp, administrative assistant to Librarian Archibald MacLeish, said that the library has no specific plan at present for preserving its possessions in the event of war.

The appropriation would be used to select the irreplaceable and most valuable books and documents and to work out a plan for removal and storage.

"We don't want to be in a position similar to that of the librarian who was in Virginia when the British burned the Library of Congress in 1814," he said.

He pointed out that the British Museum spent two years evolving a plan for safeguarding its books and put it into operation a year later when war was declared.

The Library of Congress has 6,000,000 books and millions of manuscripts of varying value.

Among its possessions are the Declaration of Independence and the Gutenberg Bible which was bought in a rare collection that cost the Government $1,500,000.

The Magna Charta also is housed in the Library of Congress at this time, as Britain moved it there for safekeeping following an exhibition at the World's Fair.

Matsuoka Arrives On German Soil

Berlin, March 25 (INS).—Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka arrived on German soil tonight at the Russo-German border station of Malkinia.

Half a Haircut DOLLS UP FIFI

But on your car any halfway job is a botch.

The engine, remember, is all full of poison as long as it's still full of scratchy Winter oil. Today then, drain and refill for Spring . . . But not only that! . . .

If you're going to be more than half fair to yourself and your engine, get it drained, refilled and Oil-Plated besides—all at the one same cost—all in mere minutes, at Your Mileage Merchant's Conoco station.

His Conoco Germ Processed oil—patented—contains a man-made extra "energizer." And this bonds OIL-PLATING to working parts as closely as chrome-plating bonds to body parts. Then OIL-PLATING can't all drain down. As long as you use Germ Processed oil, the OIL-PLATING stays plated up throughout every mile; throughout every hour at the curb, or standing overnight. That's why the coolest dawn finds your OIL-PLATED engine already protected in advance against the worst old starting wear . . . much as if your Germ Processed oil hadn't even quit circulating!

Likewise, when sun and speedometer both swing high, the OIL-PLATING isn't all thinning out and drizzling down. It stays plated up against needless wear. And that's more than half the battle for oil economy. Change to Germ Processed oil that OIL-PLATES. Today!

North Central Area Is Hardest Hit by Measles

The north central area of the city is the hardest hit in the current measles outbreak, Dr. James G. Cumming, health department epidemiologist reported yesterday.

In reporting 34 new cases yesterday, Dr. Cumming said the outbreak is localized in the area bounded by North Capitol Street, Massachusetts Avenue, Spring Road and Connecticut Avenue Northwest. There are very few cases in the other sections of town, he said.

Yesterday's report raised this year's total to 786. Meanwhile Dr. Chester Holmes, assistant school superintendent, reported that the schools were not losing many pupils because of the disease. One student had measles at Eastern High and one teacher, who also had the disease, has recovered.

Baronet's Murder Trial Adjourned Until April 7

Nairobi, Kenya Colony, March 25 (AP).—Hearings on murder charges against Maj. Sir Henry John Delves Broughton in the slaying of the Earl of Erroll were adjourned today until April 7.

The 57-year-old baronet has testified he watched a love affair develop between his bride, Lady Diana Broughton, and the 39-year-old earl, a widower. The Earl of Erroll, hereditary high constable of Scotland, was found shot to death in an automobile last January 24.

Fr. Leonard Walsh Is Reappointed To Palestine Post

The Very Rev. Leonard Walsh, O. F. M., who recently completed six years as commissary of the Holy Land in Washington, has been reappointed for a three-year term by the Most Rev. Minister General of the Franciscans in Rome.

Father Walsh has charge of the sacred shrines and missions of Palestine, where 20 American friars are now stationed with those of other lands. He also is superior of the famous Franciscan Monastery in Brookland, where there are 50 friars.

In 1937, he visited the Holy Land to get first-hand knowledge of the Franciscans' work there. Member of the Holy Name Province of Friars Minor, he was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., in 1897, and entered the Franciscan Order in 1919. He was ordained to the priesthood in 1926.

Death Rides The Tracks

District authorities are faced with a baffling problem in the streetcar collision of Monday night which killed one motorman and injured 15 persons. The car which plowed into another at Seventh Street and Massachusetts Avenue Northwest was bought in 1919 and is of an old type, but it had passed inspection with a clean bill of health on March 10. Accounts of the crash give conflicting impressions of the possible cause. The conductor said he heard a hiss as if the brakes had been applied, but the car kept going. Yet an eyewitness said the brake handle was not turned. Examination of the wreck indicates that none of the three other methods of stopping the car had been attempted. A witness said he saw the motorman's legs sagging as they approached the other car. But the autopsy showed the motorman's vital organs to be in good order, and proved that a crushed skull was the cause of his death. The Public Utilities Commission found the equipment to be in good order, and added that the car was equipped with the usual safety devices of the two-man type. Whatever the reason for the accident—whether there was a failure in equipment, personnel or system—the fact remains that something went wrong, and no effort must be spared to track that something down so that it can't happen again.

Yugoslavia Succumbs

Yesterday, at Vienna, Hitler annexed a volcano, and it may prove no easy matter for him to keep it from erupting. For while he succeeded in forcing the key members of the Yugoslav cabinet into signing a pact which made the triune kingdom a member of the Axis, he must still reckon with the explosive forces which that development may unleash. During recent days, Yugoslav public opinion has made clear its fierce opposition to the action which the government has now taken. The country seethes with revolt, and even if for a while the lid is kept on it, it may sooner or later throw the entire nation into convulsions.

For the time being, however, there can be no minimizing the magnitude of the diplomatic coup which Hitler has scored. Yugoslavia is the largest nation in the Balkans and contains some of the best soldiers to be found in the peninsula. Had the Belgrade government stood firm, had it joined forces with Greece and Turkey, a powerful barrier would have been erected to Germany's drive to the Aegean. But Prince Regent Paul and his closest advisers would not have it that way. They were fascinated and frightened by the massed German armies on Yugoslavia's long-drawn northern and eastern borders. They felt that resistance was out of the question because of the lack of mechanized equipment and planes from which their country suffers. Accordingly they gave way, though not before they had wrested certain concessions, or what look like concessions, out of Hitler.

The prime concession is that Yugoslavia will not immediately have to submit, as did Rumania and Bulgaria before her, to the humiliating experience of having her territory occupied by German troops. In Yugoslavia's case the country would be used as a base of operations against a neighboring land with whom, as it happens, Yugoslavia has been on the friendliest terms. By joining the Axis she will also, at least for the time being, avoid invasion and war. Yet the concessions made by Belgrade to Berlin are real and may prove far-reaching. It is understood, for instance, that Yugoslavia has agreed to permit the transit of German war supplies and wounded across her frontiers. Yugoslavia thus becomes the nonbelligerent ally of the Axis and is tied to Hitler's war chariot. Joachim von Ribbentrop allowed no illusions to persist in Yugoslavia that that country is neutral any longer. "The hitherto neutral Balkans," he said, referring to Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Rumania, "now have come into the camp of the new order in a body."

Yugoslavia, having taken this first fatal step, will now certainly be under constant pressure to move further and faster in the direction that Hitler finds it useful from his point of view for the kingdom to move. Yet, with a hostile public opinion to contend with, the immediate benefits which Hitler may derive from the Yugoslav signature may be outweighed by its long-run disadvantages.

The pact is clearly a blow at Greece and Britain. Those hard-pressed nations can comfort themselves with the thought that Belgrade's resistance to the Axis, even though it finally ended in capitulation, did give the British time to send reinforcements to Greece. And there is also the offsetting fact that on the eve of Yugoslavia's adherence to the Axis on a limited basis, Russia saw fit to renew her pledge of friendship to Turkey. This should considerably ease the Turkish position. It was fear of what Russia might do that inhibited action by Ankara in execution of Turkey's pledges under the Anglo-Turkish alliance. Turkey has now been informed by Moscow that "if Turkey be attacked and be obliged to enter the war for the purpose of defending her territory," she could "rely upon the complete neutrality and understanding of the Soviet Union." This development only partially and tentatively checkmates Hitler's Yugoslav triumph. It indicates, however, that Germany's diplomatic victories have a worm in them.

A Needless Strike

Strikers who walked out of the Bethlehem Steel Co.'s plant at Bethlehem, Pa., on Monday night began picketing with placards calling for an NLRB election. They had not previously asked the NLRB to hold an election and that agency had made no effort on its own initiative to have collective bargaining representatives chosen in the plant by secret ballot. In effect these placards seem to rebuke the NLRB for not calling an election at Bethlehem long ago. Certainly they indicate that one foremost objective of the strike could have been readily attained without stopping work on the immense armament contracts held by this company.

The immediate cause of the strike was an election being held by the Employe Representation Plan to choose representatives for collective bargaining. The NLRB has found the Representation Plan to be a company union. In an order issued in August, 1939, the company was instructed to cease recognizing the E. R. P. as a collective bargaining agency. The company appealed, and the case is still before the United States Court of Appeals here. If the board's order is upheld, the alleged company union will necessarily fold up. The Steel Workers Organizing Committee has made a grave mistake in not waiting for settlement of the dispute by this peaceful means.

Findings of the NLRB indicate that the Bethlehem Steel Co. has resisted genuine collective bargaining. That attitude is contrary to law as well as sound public policy. It should have been abandoned long before the present national emergency arose. Employers who resist genuine collective bargaining jeopardize our national security by fostering industrial unrest and potential warfare. The full influence of public opinion, in addition to official action, should operate to bring them into line with the national policy. But arbitrary conduct on the part of a few employers does not justify workers in striking to obtain rights that, with a little patience, may be established through peaceful means. Congress has enacted numerous statutes for the benefit and protection of labor. The least that can be expected in an emergency is that unions will rely upon this machinery for the settlement of grievances in preference to holding up essential defense production.

The Bethlehem strike suggests that the S. W. O. C. has no faith in the legislation Congress has enacted for the special benefit of labor. It seeks to reap all the advantages of the Labor Regulations Act without giving the law a chance to operate. It expects the Government to uphold all the rights of organized labor while it refuses to cooperate by keeping all its members working for defense in this critical period. This inclination to demand benefits and sidestep responsibilities has gone too far. Congress is already considering ways and means of withdrawing benefits from workers who fail to cooperate in the defense program, and there can be no doubt that legislation for this purpose will be enacted unless unions voluntarily adjust their tactics to the demands of the hour.

One Pays, Other Enjoys

The only thing to do about the District income-tax law is to put the matter up to Congress again, as Representative Hunter proposes to do. The bill must be worded in such a way as to make clear who is to pay. Such an amendment, making a taxpayer of everybody actually in residence here 6 months out of 12, was presented this year, but its teeth were drawn before it reached the House floor. Later the House killed the mild substitute by sending it back to committee.

The need for this recasting is underlined by a decision by the United States Court of Appeals. The court has entered an interpretation which would excuse all but a few of those who live here but claim domicile elsewhere from paying income tax. The statute of 1939 reads: "There is hereby levied . . . upon the taxable income of every individual domiciled in the District of Columbia. . . ." The court bases its decision on its own opinion in the Sweeney (intangible property tax) case, in which it said that "one who comes to the District and remains to render service to the Government which requires his presence here, may retain his domicile in the State from which he comes until the service terminates, unless he gives clear evidence of his intention to forego his State allegiance. . . ." These principles already had been accepted. But in this case the court ruled that a man who came here in 1914, bought a house and lived in it, had not by 1940 altered his allegiance. The far-reaching implications are obvious.

Moreover, the court gives the word "domicile" a new but unsatisfactory clarity. It quotes the statements of Senator Overton and Representatives Nichols and Bates at the time of passage to prove that the word was intended to have exactly the effect this decision gives it. Therefore the District must go to Congress again with the proposition that all who live here must share the tax burden. Congress once more must have a chance to pass a fair income-tax law—or to say by their default that of two persons with comparable means, dwelling side by side and enjoying the same police, fire, health, sanitary, school and street services, one shall pay and the other merely consume.

Minority Role

Representative Joseph W. Martin's dual role as minority leader in the House of Representatives and chairman of the Republican National Committee gives him a heavy burden to carry. Nevertheless the G. O. P. National Committee has shown good judgment in refusing to permit Mr. Martin to resign, for he has proved himself to be a capable party leader and a statesman of considerable stature. Probably more effectively than any other G. O. P. leader in Congress Mr. Martin has outlined a reasonable course of action for Republicans in the present emergency. "We may differ among ourselves," Mr. Martin told the House in supporting the Senate amendments to the lease-lend bill recently, "but there is no division in our loyalty to our country or our determination to protect the security of our people. We are one people, an undaunted people, determined that real Americanism shall not perish. . . ." That note was reiterated in his address to the Republican National Committee on Monday.

Mr. Martin sees no occasion for inactivitiy on the part of the minority party. He seeks national unity for defense and in pursuance of other policies which Congress approves through the democratic process. But he also points to the need for "an intelligent, constructive and courageous opposition." National unity, vital as it is, must not degenerate into the expression of a single standpoint. When the Nation is face to face with gigantic problems, the opposition party has a special obligation to counsel the Administration in a spirit of nonpartisanship and to criticize policies it believes to run counter to the national interest. In the present emergency the minority party has an obligation only less important than that of the majority to meet each new problem with courage and honest thinking. Mr. Martin provides a happy link between Republican legislators and the party organization in fulfilling this responsibility.

Matsuoka In Moscow

When Yosuke Matsuoka, Japan's foreign minister, announced that he was going to Berlin and Rome and would visit Moscow en route, it was widely predicted that the most important aspect of his itinerary might prove to be his conversations with the Russian premier, Viachesleff Molotoff. Events, however, do not appear to be bearing out the prediction. It is no secret that the Tokyo government has for some time been seeking a nonaggression pact with Russia in order to free the island empire of the threat hanging over it from the Siberian north at a time when Japan is contemplating an ambitious thrust to the Malayan south. Such a pact would not only suit Japan's purposes; it would fit the book of Japan's Axis partners. But while Matsuoka was well received in Moscow, being given the rare privilege of an interview with Stalin, there is as yet no indication that Russia and Japan see eye to eye as to the nature and extent of the compensation to be given the Soviet in return for a nonaggression pact. The fact that no concrete diplomatic agreement developed out of the Matsuoka-Molotoff and Matsuoka-Stalin conversations indicates that the two nations are not yet prepared to get together, though there is a possibility that they may ultimately do so. The negotiations between Tokyo and Moscow appear to be still in the sparring stage.

ON CONSIDERING MAN

Has man grown taller than the grass
Through which the winds of evening pass?
Has he the shape of those who dwell
Within the hollow of a shell?
Does water hold him like a hand
Lifted to show a grain of sand,
And does the earth receive him still
With a quiet word for the green hill?

Pertaining To Peace

Practical people agree that there is no basis for European peace, at this date, but a distinction may be drawn between proposals for peace and the discussion of the qualities of the peace which is to come, after the storms of war subside, for it is as tragic during times of war to be unprepared for peace as it is during times of peace to be unprepared for war.

Without subjecting oneself to ridicule for suggesting terms of peace in a world absorbed in war it may, nevertheless, be permissible to refer to certain abstract principles appertaining to peace, when the world seems ready for it.

Preceding the thought which I wish to convey, may I express the apprehension caused me by the reported provision for concurrent jurisdiction, on the part of England and the United States, in the Atlantic bases, which we acquired the right to purchase from the owners of the land by the transfer of our 50 vessels of war to England. If both English law and American law operate within those bases, and the courts and police forces of both nations are given concurrent jurisdiction, antagonism and conflict are bound to arise in the coming years. It will be to repeat a fundamental error of a division of sovereignty. Two sovereigns cannot act in the same field.

It is not necessary to consult the eloquent Vattel, or subsequent authorities on international law. The attributes of sovereignty as defined by Webster's International Dictionary sufficiently illustrate the point.

Sovereignty is "the quality or state of being sovereign; or being a sovereign; the exercise of, or right to exercise, supreme power; dominion; sway; supremacy; independence; a sovereign state."

Vattel, a Swiss philosopher and expounder of international law, published his illuminating discussion of the attributes of sovereignty nearly 300 years ago, since which time many international errors have been committed by nonobservance of the doctrines which he expounded. May I recite two instances?

It should be manifest now that the League of Nations was fundamentally unsound in attempting to set up a supergovernment over sovereign nations, and that it was unsound to sever German sovereignty over German territory, by cutting off East Prussia by the Polish Corridor. Neither Europe at large or Poland obtained any benefits by that artificial arrangement comparable to the hazards which the arrangement invited.

Self-preservation is no less the first law of nature as applied to nations than it is when applied to individuals.

America's Destiny In The Future

The assertion of C. A. F. in his letter to The Post of March 11, that those of us who advocate federal union with Great Britain "have a completely erroneous conception of the trend of world history" and our part in it, is in turn most absurdly incorrect.

Federalists realize that cooperation is the price of civilization, and when man does not meet the debt, savagery in all its horror descends on him and those he loves. Man in his climb to a fuller knowledge has used cooperation to build families, tribes, city states, kingdoms and, finally, great empires. Now it seems necessary that he at last must recognize the need for law, order and cooperation between these great political units of his own creation, or else see them bring about his own destruction.

C. A. F. talks further of a rough balance of power between great inland centers of civilization which, through the miracles of science, would become totally independent of all other nations.

Surely such a philosophy was not conceived through any great knowledge and understanding of historic trends. By his own admission, C. A. F. has recognized the spread of the industrial way of life. Does it not follow that as this industrial way of life expands, so must the dependency of one nation upon another increase?

Science works many marvels but it has not the power of God in that it can create something from nothing. Each new product it produces means raw materials must be imported from all corners of the earth, and as that product becomes one of the main bases of our civilization, the need of those imports becomes not only desirable but imperative.

"Federal union" assures those raw materials in peace. It is not a league, feeble and failing, nor is it a bloc or alliance, for it 4,000 years of recorded history have taught us anything, it has taught us that conquest, leagues, balance of power, isolationism and self-dependence, diplomacy, fear of huge armament programs always fail. They may work for a time, but in the end history proves it only an interim between great conflicts filled with preparations for war.

There is nothing untried or untested about this idea of "union now." It is not un-American, but rather all-American, for our forefathers founded this Nation on this principle. From 13 disunited, warring States they built a Nation strong and united, which 150 years later was to assume the position of the most powerful Nation on earth. Can we not as did our fathers assure our own destiny by bequeathing to a central world government the powers of:

1. Union citizenship
2. Union defense force
3. Union money
4. Union free trade area, and
5. Union postal and communications system?

Let America discard this policy of isolationism forever, for the chief menace to freedom, now, as in days gone by, lies, not in the strength of our enemies, but in the divisions among free men themselves. Divisions born not of the long-sighted, humanitarian policy of the unionist and federalist but of the short-sighted, selfish policy of the nationalistic isolationist.

Let the America of this generation look with a far-seeing eye into the future and into the past and, inspired by what she sees, let her step to the ranks of the immortals and authorize a call for a congress of the free peoples of the world. This constitutional convention would draft a constitution for a democratic world government of, by and for the people.

Once ratified by the proper authorities, the new union will be established to prevent war, bring prosperity and insure our liberties. America's destiny will have been fulfilled and the United States of the World will stand supreme among man's gifts to posterity.

Day Of Prayer

In The Post of March 20 there came to my attention a letter from "Christian," in which he or she has suggested the setting aside of Sunday, March 30, as a National Day of Prayer. May I offer sincere congratulations on the fine thoughts contained in that letter?

There is a movement on foot however, to observe Good Friday, April 11, as a day of special prayer and meditation. More than 100 civic, fraternal, religious and business groups have joined in a campaign, by which business houses are asked for an observance of Good Friday by a cessation of work between the hours from 12 to 3, so that Christian employes may repair to their respective churches.

The season of the year in which the world pays obeisance to the supreme sacrifice of our Lord, Jesus Christ, again claims the attention of all Christians and it is well to give pause in our action and thought to Him who gave His all for the redemption of the souls of men. The trials, sacrifices and immemorial sufferings of our Savior bring to mind a realization of the great blessing of comfort and immortal benefits which this sacred day may bring us through faith, hope and prayer.

It is comforting to know that many business firms and offices have already signified their desire to cooperate with this central committee by allowing Christian employes "time off" that they might take advantage of these sacred three hours for prayer and observance of ceremonies in connection with this occasion. Our committee urges all Washingtonians to lend their wholehearted moral support to observance of this day, through meditation and prayer in holy remembrance of the crucifixion of Our Lord, Jesus Christ, and reflect upon the greatest message of love mortals have ever known: "For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish but have everlasting life."

Of Treason

In Section 3 of Article III of our United States Constitution there is defined the term treason. "Treason against the United States shall consist only in levying war against them, or, in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort."

What aid and comfort is given to the dictators by the illegal way of many strikes! The rank and file of labor may not be blamed. But the leaders who ignore the prescribed processes of law ought to be brought to account. In 1784 Jefferson wrote, "Treason, when real, merits the highest punishment." And further he said, "All suspected spies should be jailed."

The odium of a foreign agent in the mind of Washington, is exhibited in the case of Maj. Andre, who was allowed to be hanged instead of being shot. U. R. PERRINE.

For Charge At Gallery

I am wondering if the American people would approve of the idea that, for the duration of the war, a charge of 10 cents each be made for the new National (Mellon) Gallery—children free—the money to be given to the American Red Cross.

It seems to me, all would give that gladly. The sum collected would be large, in view of the recent number of people counted there, and the tourist season not yet started. CARRY C. POSPAY.

Benito Goes Home

None of the other prisoners knew why Benito was in jail. New arrivals always asked about him because he was a soldier and it was strange that he should be confined to a municipal jail instead of a military prison.

"He has been here always," the newcomers were told, "and he never talks to anyone."

Perhaps even Benito had forgotten the reason for his arrest. It was trivial—merely a drunken brawl, but Benito was a victim of red tape. There had been a dispute between civil and military officials as to his disposition and, pending its solution, Benito remained, like a misplaced file, in the Casa Municipal.

Mexicans have a gift for accepting realities for precisely what they are and acting accordingly. And so the jail was simply a jail, and no nonsense about it. It was a room 30 feet square. There were four adobe walls and a stone floor, and a narrow, heavily barred window. There were no beds, not even pallets, no chairs, no running water. The jail, reduced to absolute essentials, had a frank functional appeal which was completely unappreciated by its inmates.

Benito made himself at home. He had his own corner, which was never disturbed by other prisoners—a corner selected carefully to be as remote as possible. Here he kept a variety of trash inherited from departing cellmates. He had large strips of cardboard which he spread on the floor to make a bed, several terra cotta jugs arranged in a row and graduated neatly as to size, and any number of empty match boxes with portraits on their covers of American movie stars and Mexican bull fighters. The walls converging upon his corner were decorated with pictures from El Universal and La Prensa. He affixed these with otoli, a native gruel made from cornmeal, unpalatable but an excellent paste.

Benito was a fussy housekeeper. He was always sweeping out his corner and arranging his strips of cardboard and his jugs. The floor was impregnated with fine dust, which seemed to increase with sweeping, and this gave Benito a lot of trouble. When at leisure he picked lice from the seams of his uniform and from the folds of his spiral puttees, where they congregated in multitudes.

Benito kept aloof from the other prisoners and discouraged visits to his corner. After roll call in the morning he went at once to his housekeeping. All the others, except those awaiting sentence, were marched out to work on the roads, but Benito was left in his cell because he was in uniform and because he was regarded less as a prisoner than as a piece of unfinished official business, held in abeyance.

No food was provided for the prisoners. It was brought to them by their families. If a man had no relatives, it was unfortunate, but by no logical process could his lack be construed an obligation of the government to feed him. Benito had no friends, no relatives, but, all the same, he fared very well. The other inmates generously invited Benito to share their food and he condescended to pick the choicest morsels before his hosts could grab them. What he could not eat he stored in his jugs. He never worried about thefts, not because of any abstract belief in honor among thieves, but because thefts were impossible to conceal in such cramped quarters, and any man caught by the other prisoners would soon regret his indiscretion.

Time passed pleasantly for Benito, the days merging imperceptibly. He became fat, lazy and very smug. But one morning, after roll call, the guard ordered him out of line and marched him downstairs, with a rifle in the small of his back, into a room where an officer sat behind a large desk.

"Take off your cap," said the guard. When Benito hesitated the guard obligingly knocked it off for him.

The officer picked up a sheet of paper and read rapidly from it. Benito did not listen. He was impatient to return to his corner and tidy it. The officer finished reading and said, "You are at liberty."

Benito said nothing. The officer repeated, "You are at liberty. Free! Get out." Still Benito made no move. He merely stared stupidly at the officer who shrugged his shoulders and said to the guard: "Throw him out." The guard grabbed Benito by the belt and tossed him into the street.

Benito was bewildered. He stood on the narrow sidewalk, very much in the way of porters and messengers, who jostled him rudely. He stepped off the curb and was nearly run down by a truck. Then he walked slowly away from the Casa Municipal and at random through the streets. He kept walking all day, in approximate circles, which returned him periodically to the plaza in front of the Casa Municipal. There he rested on a bench and gazed at the building which had lodged him for so long.

Night fell and a cold wind blew down from the mountains. Benito was hungry now and stared forlornly at the street vendors with their stacks of sizzling tostas and enchilladas. The vendors taunted him. They found his begging-dog attitude very amusing.

Again Benito went to the plaza and looked long at the Casa. Then suddenly he marched into it and presented himself to the officer. He explained what he wanted. The official did not understand. Benito repeated his request haltingly but with the insistence of a man standing upon his legal rights. At last the official laughed and said to the guard: "All right. Let him in."

The other prisoners were glad to see Benito but he brushed past them and went at once to his corner. Apparently it was undisturbed, but he was not satisfied until he had inspected minutely the cardboards, the jugs and the match boxes. Then he sat down and, with the air of a man who returns at last to work after vexatious delays, began picking lice from his puttees.

Capital Parade

By Joseph Alsop and Robert Kintner

The President's Vacation Guests

THE NEW DEALERS are tossing their hats in the air over the President's choice of guests for his vacation cruise. Since defense and foreign policy became the President's only preoccupations, most of the youthful lawyers and economists who compose the New Deal rank and file have felt sadly left out. But with their chief remaining leaders, Attorney General Robert H. Jackson and Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, aboard the President's holiday ship, they hope for better things to come.

ALSOP

Thus far, Jackson and Ickes have had almost as little to do with defense and foreign policy as the less conspicuous and more youthful New Dealers. Jackson has thrice played a part, resisting too great "encroachments by businessmen when the original defense commission was established, when the OPM was formed from the defense commission, and when the OPM'S legal division was organized. Ickes' only regular contact with defense and foreign policy has been at Cabinet meetings—always fairly meaningless gatherings. Neither man has made any secret of his distaste for the predominance of new influences in the Administration.

THE HOPEFUL New Dealers believe that Jackson and Ickes were invited to join the President on his holiday for two main purposes. First, relations between Ickes and Harry L. Hopkins have been extremely cool since the days of the great row between WPA and PWA, and reached the freezing point when Ickes accused Hopkins of botching the Chicago convention. While not unfriendly, relations between Jackson and Hopkins have never been intimate. Hopkins, now the President's personal assistant in most problems arising out of the war, is also aboard. It is thought that by throwing his henchmen together in the enforced intimacy of a long sea voyage, the President planned to transform them into a happy band of brothers.

Second, besides such essentially international problems as the shipping emergency, of which neither Jackson nor Ickes can know much, decisions are necessary on a great number of problems with larger domestic implications, such as the labor situation. About these both Jackson and Ickes have very strong opinions indeed. It is thought that it is also the President's purpose both to consult Jackson and Ickes on problems of this type while on his cruise, and to arrange for more regular advice from them after his return to the White House. This is the real reason for the New Dealers' jubilation. They feel that when their leaders are regular White House advisers again, their own return to importance will not be long delayed.

To the impartial observer, the New Dealers' sentiments are significant chiefly as indications of the real state of affairs in the Administration. The trend that began last July, when the New Dealers were practically excluded from the defense effort and William S. Knudsen led the businessmen's march on Washington, has now reached full maturity. The result would never have been predicted at the start. For it is not Knudsen and the numerous industrialists, corporation executives and business lawyers around him who now have the real policy-forming task. Partly owing to the opposition of men like Jackson and Ickes, the businessmen of the OPM have little voice except in the practical questions of defense production, and even here must consult Knudsen's co-director, Sidney Hillman, and his subordinates. Instead, the big job of policy-formation is now in the hands of a brand new group, composed of moderates and middle of the roaders.

THE NEW GROUP is no cabal or junta, lacks even the loose organization enjoyed by the New Dealers in the days when Thomas G. Corcoran was their liaison man, and contains men of widely differing characters, abilities and beliefs. Yet it is well enough defined to be roughly enumerated. It includes the members of the new War Cabinet committee, Secretary of State Cordell Hull, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox and the committee secretary, Harry Hopkins; a number of influential new men in key Government posts, such as Undersecretary of War Robert Patterson, Undersecretary of the Navy James Forrestal, Assistant Secretary of State Dean G. Acheson and Patterson's two War Department allies, John J. McCloy and Robert Lovett; several recruits from among the New Dealers, such as Benjamin V. Cohen, the Treasury General Counsel Edward Foley, and his assistant, Oscar Cox; and one or two private Presidential cronies, such as former Ambassador William C. Bullitt.

The common denominators of this group are three in number. First, their only continuing concern is with successful prosecution of the war effort. Their comparative single-mindedness is their chief strength. Second, the businessmen among them do not share the eating suspicion of all Government men common among Knudsen's industrialists, while the Government men—even the New Deal recruits—do not regard all businessmen as damnable ex officio. And third, they are all bitterly impatient of the delays and confusions that have afflicted American policy to date, and determined to see the job done quickly and forcefully in the future.

KINTNER

Although only a number of like-minded men who generally work easily together, the new group is an extremely important phenomenon. As it broadly represents the average of informed American opinion, and contains much more than the average of intilligence and ability, it should also be a confidence-producing phenomenon. And as Harry L. Hopkins has shown every evidence of being one of the like-minded men since his return from Britain, it is not likely to be overset by any palace revolution, however much a revolution may be desired and hoped for.

Call To Congress

THE APPOINTMENT of any superboard of mediators, conciliators or free-style handshakers for the purpose of checking outrageous acts by labor unions is no more than a political stall and cannot cure this dangerous situation. The cure is law, and the devices adopted so far will only emphasize the lack of specific laws to forbid and punish actions which admittedly are a menace to the national safety and which, for more than a year now, have been exposed as an arrogant violation of the rights of American citizens.

PEGLER

The United States Congress has no right to wait for President Roosevelt to propose legislation through one of his official dog-robbers. Congress has its own duties and responsibilities in this perilous problem, and even though the President should strongly indicate an aversion to specific legislation in this field, Congress still has an obligation to override him and, if necessary, to override his veto. The President is not Congress, and he has notions about the correct way of dealing with professional unioneers which certainly condone and tolerate serious abuses. Therefore he will not take the initiative.

I know this is supposed to be a time for compromise and unity, but there is never a time when it is either wise or honest to compromise with wrong. The unions are in the wrong, and laws must be passed to repudiate some of the twisted reasoning by which the Federal Supreme Court and the Supreme Court of California have practically absolved unioneers from the penalties that rest on other men for certain offenses.

AS MATTERS STAND, by a combination of laws and decisions the labor union, which is only a private organization of individuals, claims, and by public default enjoys, the right to blockade not only munition factories but private works, on the representation of some uncounted and uncertified number of men that they are aggrieved workers. It has been necessary to obtain the gracious permission of individual unioneers to send officers of the Army into plants to take out and deliver to the soldiers certain tools of war necessary for their training. These agents of these private groups did not grant this permission as a matter of national right. They gave it as a special favor, although actually they gave it because they knew that if they didn't, public opinion would smash their power by the same violent means that unioneers have used to keep free, willing American workmen away from patriotic works.

No, these offenses are not matters for compromise or negotiation. The public and the individual workman, as well as the law-abiding American citizen who operates an industry, have rights which must be recognized in plain words by the lawmaking body. The unions have no right to blockade any plant by violence, and rather than placate them in their wrongdoing or meet them in the streets with their own weapons, the national Government owes it to the people to establish positive restrictions on the conduct of unions.

Lately I have been warned that it is unwise to insist too strongly on the reform of unions and the adoption of laws compelling them to respect the rights of others. I am warned by union publications that they can boycott all publications which print revelations of crookedness in union administration and articles disputing the right of unions to riot, persecute and conspire against the national safety. The answer is that if these private organizations are able to get away with that, then our newspapers will have defaulted the duty of a free press and sold out to an anti-American force for the price of some circulation and advertsing revenue.

CONGRESS also is being tempted to sell out. The duty of initiating and driving through restrictive and regulatory legislation does not rest on any particular man in either House. Therefore each individual may shirk the dangerous and difficult duty of getting this task done and no individual can be singled out for punishment. This is a case which calls for personal and political force and courage.

It is idle to preach compromise with outrage. You don't reason with wrong, but punish it or surrender your Government and your liberties. And I will not listen to the contention that the crookedness of certain unions of the A. F. of L. has been overemphasized. They reek of corruption and William Green will not dare deny that he has indorsed and supported vicious crooks. Don't ask me to placate the A. F. of L.

Plight Of The Parties

By Ernest K. Lindley

Troubles For Mr. Martin And Mr. Flynn

A WHOLESOME SIGN of the times is the relative inactivity of the national headquarters of both major parties. Even the meeting of the Republican National Committee this week was a third-rate story, most of the first-string Washington correspondents being busy with more important matters. And the Jackson Day dinners of the Democrats have received less advance publicity than at any time since they were converted into a money-raising mechanism by the late Forbes Morgan.

LINDLEY

The unproclaimed truce between the two party headquarters began with the debate on the lend-lease plan. The President silenced Democratic National headquarters, lest a partisan note creep into an issue on which he earnestly sought the maximum of national solidarity. The strong stand beside the President taken by Wendell Willkie and a few others silenced Republican headquarters, even though a great majority of the Republican bloc in Congress were opposed to the lend-lease bill.

Now that the major decision has been made, all but a handful of Republicans have fallen in behind the appropriation to make it effective. And the irreconcilables are matched by an equal number of isolationist Democrats.

AT THE MOMENT, not another issue is in view which seems likely to lead to a drawn battle on party lines. Even criticism of the progress of the national defense program becomes difficult for the Republicans, since nearly all the key positions of civilian responsibility for defense—in the War and Navy Departments and OPM alike—are occupied by Republicans.

The policy of nonpartisonship and promotion of national unity is reflected also in the first of a revised series of weekly columns from Charles Michelson, Democratic publicity chief. Writing with a sweetness for which his typewriter seldom has been distinguished, Mr. Michelson avoids the subject of Republicans altogether. Instead he warns editors to beware of sensational stories about the war and national defense. He hungers to get in a couple of back-handed slaps at the press, but they are offset with praise for the manner in which most correspondents and newspapers are doing their job. Never since he took his present job in 1929 has Mr. Michelson's partisanship been at so low a temperature.

This is all very fine, but it does not relieve the worries of the man charged with keeping together party organizations. As Republican National Chairman Joseph W. Martin, jr., told his committee this week, party organizations are necessary to the operation of the American system of government. As a party, the Republicans were on dangerous ground during the lend-lease debate. A successor to Martin could not be picked at this time, probably, without splitting the party wide open. But their national headquarters is in relatively good shape, simply because they are well-financed.

The Democrats, on the other hand, have a deficit of some $900,000. The contributions incident to the Jackson Day dinners probably will leave them still in the red, without considering funds to keep them going during the rest of the year. And, as one practical Democrat laments: "All the defense contracts are going to Republicans."

The pay roll of Democratic National headquarters will be severely cut soon after the Jackson Day dinners. As long as the President keeps on the muffler, there will be little to be done by the staff that remains.

ON THE PATRONAGE side, also, National Chairman Edward J. Flynn is up against difficulties. The expanding agencies are the defense agencies. From these he is barred—without protest, since he believes it would be bad politics to permit party patronage to enter into them, on the side of either personnel or contracts.

Flynn's further difficulty is that for two or three years before the 1940 election, his predecessor, James A. Farley, was usually ignored by the White House. Jobs were filled chiefly on the recommendation of the White House clique headed by Tommy Corcoran, or by department heads acting independently.

The influence of the Corcoran clique has waned: Corcoran has been unable so far to get a top-notch job even for himself. Unlike Farley in recent years, Flynn stands well at the White House and is able to get cooperation in the Administration. But the jobs are seldom there to be filled—except in the defense field.

Flynn, in consequence, is watching chiefly the smaller Federal posts out in the States. Many of these are clearing through the Democratic State organizations and him.

Flynn recently returned from a trip to California, Texas and Arizona. During the next few months he expects to visit 12 or 15 more States, and by the end of the year at least 30 or 40. But keeping party enthusiasm alive is hard work when money and jobs are lacking. Or when, as in Joe Martin's case, a party is not sure in which direction it is going.

Montpellier Is 'Blackest Spot' On Free France's Hunger Map

Near-famine conditions in the wine-growing district of Herault, southern France, are described in the following dispatch by the United Press manager in Vichy who has made a personal investigation of food conditions in the unoccupied areas of the stricken French republic.

By Ralph Heinzen

United Press Staff Writer

Montpellier, Southern France, March 25.—This is a city of hunger, according to French officials the "blackest spot of free France's hunger map."

Officials told me of conditions in the Department of Herault, of which Montpellier is the administrative center, before I flew last week from Vichy to Toulouse. Today, after touring the region, I can confirm in part their assertions.

The people of Herault unquestionably are hungry. In my observation they are not yet starving, but I would hesitate to say that that none of them will be during the critical period now at hand.

Montpellier is a city of substitute bread and sometimes of no bread at all. People to whom I talked said they had gone six successive days with not a single slice. The day I reached the city there was a limited ration—a soggy composition of mixed substitutes for wheat flour.

The trouble with Herault, all agreed, is the fact that years ago it became a single crop region. All available land was devoted to the cultivation of wine grapes. Now there is no market for wine and the usual sources of food imports are cut off.

There appears to be a realization that the agricultural situation, not the political regime, is at fault. There certainly are no visible effects of the intense undercover activity of Communist agitators who have been attempting to exploit misery and hunger. They poured into Herault from all sides when they learned that the wheat supply had run out and that the peasants were hungry.

But today the Socialist peasants of Herault give thanks to the authoritarian Vichy regime for their daily bread. Communism has not yet taken a hold and there certainly was no rioting during six breadless days.

France's youngest prefect, Olivier de Sardan, who was the private secretary of Pierre Laval until last autumn, today told me he has the food situation in hand and that as long as the rest of Mediterranean France can eat, Herault will not starve. A week ago de Sardan went to Vichy, told his story to Vice Premier Admiral Darlan and brought back an assurance that as long as France has wheat Herault will be fed.

There is a time limit, however, on that guarantee against starvation. Herault is presently getting its wheat and some meat from the rich Garonne Valley to the west. But before leaving Toulouse at the start of my tour I was told by authorities in charge of dividing surpluses that at the present rate of consumption, there would not be enough food to last through May, and that to reach early June it would be necessary to cut immediately in half all rations of bread and meat.

By no means, there authorities said, could the stocks be stretched to the end of July, when the next harvest will be ready. Here, as in Toulouse, I was told that unless America succeeds in convincing Britain to lift the blockade sufficiently to allow Free France to feed herself from the granaries of Argentine, Canada and the United States, there will be widespread starvation.

In January and February the whole of Herault received only 2,000 tons of fodder. As a result cattle daily died of starvation and the peasants slaughtered the animals they could no longer feed. It takes five years to grow a good work animal.

The American Red Cross last week shipped an important consignment of condensed and powdered milk, vitamins and medicines into Herault from Marseille. This was part of the S. S. Cold Harbor's cargo, and another important shipment is promised from the S. S. Exmouth as soon as she arrives.

Distribution of the mercy cargo from America started last week and every child under 14 will receive a daily ration of 1½ pints of milk and enough vitamins to reduce the risks of epidemic which threatens this zone of malnutrition and most unhappy province of the whole hunger belt.

The Once Over

Lines On Duty

("It is not enough for us merely to trim the wick and polish the glass in the lamp of victory."—President Roosevelt).

With the lamp on the floor
'Neath a volley of bricks,
Let no man offer help
As a trimmer of wicks.

With the light almost out
And the oil low, alas!
Would you bellow "One side!
Lemme polish the glass!"?

With the torch on the wane.
As rough hands at it snatch,
Would you leap to the aid
With a cry, "Here's a match!"?

With the oil getting low in the darkness of night,
Do you offer to read
From a treatise on light?

When a swimmer yells "Help!"
With his chances quite slim,
Would you toss him a book
On "The Right Way to Swim"?

If he slips 'neath a wave
And there isn't much hope,
Would you cry, "Your address!—
I will mail you a rope!"?

When a building's ablaze
And you hear a low cry,
Would you chirp,"I'll look in—
To the water supply"?

When a man's on the roof
With his shirttail ablaze.
Do you shout, "I will help—
In a couple of days!"?

If a hurricane comes
To a man up a tree
Do you say, "if you need Any help send for me"?

When a man's on a raft
As the sharks near him swish,
Do you think it's enough
To denounce all such fish?

To be brief, in a war
Such as this frightful one,
Are you just one who says
"Something OUGHT to be done!"?

Another Victim

Yugoslavia Surrenders

YESTERDAY in Vienna Yugoslavia signed her own death warrant. In return, Hitler has agreed to postpone the execution. He could well afford to be generous. For he has received from the trembling hands of Prince Paul and the latter's associates the essential concessions he wanted from them.

NOVER

The Regent, Premier Cvetkovitch and Foreign Minister Cincar-Markovitch will no doubt argue that they made the best of a bad situation. They will point out that Yugoslavia is isolated; that she is all but surrounded by Axis territory; that along her eastern borders in Rumania and Bulgaria powerful German army has been assembled, and that there is nothing to prevent Hitler from using that army against Yugoslavia.

They will add that, despite the extremely difficult position in which their country found itself when Hitler began to put pressure on it to join the Axis, Yugoslavia avoided doing what Rumania and Bulgaria had done. Her territory is not to be occupied by German troops. Her army is not to be demobilized. Nor are German troops to be given the right of using Yugoslavia as a corridor for an attack on Greece.

IT IS TRUE that, on the surface, the German-Yugoslav pact is limited in the obligations it imposes on the Balkan kingdom and restricted in the rights it grants the Reich. But the distinction between Yugoslav's adherence to the Axis and the adherence of Rumania and Bulgaria is a distinction without an essential difference.

A movement of German troops into Yugoslavia at this time would have caused the guns to go off by themselves. During these last weeks the Yugoslav people have made it clear beyond a doubt that they loathed and detested what their rulers were planning to do in their name. They were ready to follow the example of Greece and fight rather than submit voluntarily to the destruction of their independence. As it happens, the last thing that Hitler wants in the Balkans is a war of any magnitude. And while Yugoslavia is seriously short of modern mechanized equipment, she has some of the best fighting men in Europe.

For the time being it is enough for Hitler that the Belgrade government has agreed, even if in limited degree, to subordinate Yugoslavia's sovereignty to the Axis, to take a step which divides the nation in a manner that may ultimately paralyze her present capacity to resist occupation, to drive a wedge between Yugoslavia and her friend and neighbor, Greece. Hitler can, for the moment, be content with the diplomatic victory he has won. If necessary, Yugoslavia's capitulation can be made use of in a military way later on. In that connection, the most important clause in the treaty is not the one giving Germany the right to send war supplies and wounded across Yugoslavia but the one which commits the Belgrade government to suppress anti-Axis elements in the nation. Literally applied that means war by the Yugoslav government against the Yugoslav people. And if Belgrade proves loath to carry out that pledge Hitler would have excuse enough to declare the Vienna pact violated and therefore freed of the restriction regarding the dispatch of German troops through that country.

THE GERMAN-YUGOSLAV pact is bad news for the Greeks and their British allies even though they may be grateful to the Yugoslav people for having forced their government to delay action on that pact and thus made possible the dispatch of British reinforcements to Greece. But some comfort can be gleaned in London and Athens over the restatement by Russia of her friendship for Turkey.

This time Russia did not wait until Hitler had presented the world with an accomplished fact before manifesting her displeasure. The pledge to Turkey not to attack her if Turkey is attacked by another power but to remain fully and comprehensively neutral was given on the eve of the Vienna meeting. This action suggests that the Red Bear is beginning, at long last, to stir out of his lethargy. But too much significance should not be read into the Kremlin's move.

A stronger Russian stand taken earlier might have spared Yugoslavia the necessity and the humiliation of capitulating to Hitler. It might even have made possible the creation of a Balkan coalition consisting of Yugoslavia, Greece and Turkey and capable of serving as a real barrier to a German drive to the south. No such stand was taken.

Russia kept her mysterious counsel until almost the very last. And when she did move it was wholly in a defensive manner. There is no offer of Russian aid to Turkey if the latter nation is made the victim of aggression. There is not even a guarantee that Russia will live up to the pledges embodied in the Russo-Turkish communique should Turkey agree to aid Great Britain and Greece.

The presumption is that the Ankara government, now that it has been freed of the fear of a Russian stab in the back, will be able to act more boldly as Britain's ally. Whether that presumption is valid or not remains to be seen. About all that can be said of the latest Russian maneuver is that it suggests that the German-Russian honeymoon that began after the marriage of convenience in August, 1939, is about over. But it is much too early to mention the word divorce. Russia's notice to Germany that there are limits to German expansion is elliptical rather than forthright, suggestive rather than plain spoken. It will not bring about any change in Hitler's immediate plans. It is doubtful if an attack on Turkey was his objective at this time, anyway. There will be time enough to take on that country when and if the Greco-Italian war has forcibly been brought to an end and German legions are on the Aegean. Then Turkey would find herself in the position in which Yugoslavia found herself these last weeks. Perhaps she will profit by the latter's experience before it is too late.

U. S. Food Stamp Counterfeit Ring Reported Smashed

New York, March 25 (AP).—The arrest of four Newark, N. J., men in a New York printing shop and the "smashing of a conspiracy to counterfeit $1,000,000 worth of 25-cent Government food stamps" was announced today by James J. Maloney, supervising agent of the Secret Service.

Maloney said the arrests and seizure were made after a night-and-day pursuit for more than two weeks.

The material seized included 24 perfect food stamp negatives, he said, adding that the gang planned to sell the counterfeit stamps to grocers at a price of $1 worth of counterfeit stamps for 30 cents.

"This seizure, the first of its kind, and the arrest of the gang definitely prevented a serious fraud," Maloney said. "There are no counterfeit food stamps in circulation today."

Queen of Blossoms, Still a'Bud, Tours Sleeping Realm

By George Thorpe
Post Staff Writer

Nancy Alden Strong, Queen of the Washington Cherry Blossom Festival of 1941, toured her realm yesterday, ignoring 40-degree weather to give an able presentment of "Beauty in Springtime."

The hazel-eyed, 17-year-old debutante, took off her fur coat to pose for photographers against the background of some blossomless cherry trees and the chilly Potomac River.

When her coat was back on and her teeth had stopped chattering Miss Strong smilingly said she was sure the blossoms would bloom and the festival would be a success "even if it does snow before nightfall."

Miss Strong is happy at being selected queen. It's a great honor she feels and said modestly that she didn't know what had led the festival-planners to select her.

She denied suggestions that her 5 feet 9 inches and 123 pounds of youthful beauty had anything to do with it and remarked that she hoped she could fulfill her duties to the satisfaction of the festival planners.

Miss Strong has had previous experience with civic festivals in cold weather. So she uttered no word of complaint as photographers posed her this way and that and northwest winds whipped her light sports jacket.
the princesses in the court of

Last fall she was one of honor of Queen Marcy Morgan of the President's Cup Regatta. Yesterday she said reminded her of the chill of the night when the queen and her court sailed across the Potomac in a very decorative but very cold ceremony.

Wrapping her coat around her more tightly she revealed this information under questioning:

She is now a student at a costume designing school here but doesn't necessarily intend to make a career out of it. She likes dancing and singing and dramatics and those newfangled tops of open cars that move up and down when a button is pressed.

She said she has no particular plans for next year like making a trip around the world "which would be a little silly with the world the way it is."

She is not in love or engaged. She thinks Washington is a nice place and she hopes that everybody has a good time during the festival, which is to be April 5 and 6, according to present plans.

Nancy, daughter of Lieut. Col. Alden G. Strong and Mrs. Strong, lives at 2301 Connecticut Avenue Northwest.

Zoo's Who . . .No. 32

And said, "Well, how's about a ditty?

Odd Jobs

Roy Jennier Fears No Reptile, Feeds Snakes

Roy H. Jennier, a former circus man, has what he calls "just a routine job" feeding reptiles at the Zoo.

There are, he admits, a few occupational hazards in tickling an 8-foot giant lizard under the chin while he tries to make a meal of the feeder's leg, or pacifying the 16-foot python before feeding time, or getting in the same cage with a poisonous rattler.

And occasionally some unscrupulous alligators start a free-for-all and must be separated while they are snapping at everything, including the keeper.

Then, too, snakes sometimes slip out of their cages as they are being cleaned and are inclined to bite anyone who tries to put them back.

Of course, Jennier often goes on field trips to Africa, Cuba and South America with Dr. Mann and there is some excitement when deadly reptiles escape on shipboard and must be captured.

But on the whole, he insists, the job is pretty routine—just feeding the snakes one night a week, the lizards twice a week on Mondays and Thursdays, and the smaller reptiles daily, and avoiding poisonous fangs when cleaning cages every morning.

Jennier has been bitten several times since he joined the Zoo staff in 1929, "but never fatally," he says.

One of his closest escapes happened on New Year's Day, when he and a helper were feeding the 8-foot Komoda dragon. The dragon, who was hungry, charged the two men. At the last moment, however, he changed his mind.

Feeding the larger snakes consists normally of putting freshly killed chickens and rodents on the end of a pole, letting the snake go through the motions of killing them again and then watching the meat disappear.

Occasionally the reptiles have to be fed by force. That is what Jennier calls a "kinda ticklish job," in which the jaws are held open and food shoveled in.

Some of the smaller lizards give trouble when they try to be friendly, he says. They crawl over the feeder's feet and rub against his legs, making it hard "to feed the critters."

Jennier has been handling animals and reptiles ever since he joined a Western circus as a boy. During the World War he joined the Army and trained recruits at Fort Meade. Later he saw an ad for a zoo helper, answered it and received notice to come here when he was with another circus in the Midwest.

He is married and takes his wife with him on his vacation field trips to Mexico and Cuba—she helps him catch smaller animals but still hasn't grown fond of snakes. And he likes animals so much that he has a pet guinea pig, known as "The Jeep."

The Gentler Sex

I.

Pity not the women of England,
For surely they are free;
Liberated at last from all the petty social strivings
Of bridge sets, luncheon groups, and clubs and factions;
Emancipated from the rush for small preferments,
Right "contacts," highflown friends and vain applause,
And all intangible pinions of the soul.

II.

Count not unblest the women of England,
For now they know no servitude
To the mad race to keep up in the season's fashions,
To beat each shifting sun with styles at least two weeks ahead,
To put up "front," to camouflage the bare and lowly,
To ride the merry-go-round in brilliant trappings,
Proud conquerors, perched on wooden steeds.

III.

Feel not too sorry for the women of England,
For they are not the slaves of things;
Rare rugs, and beauteous vases, new electrical devices
Cannot excite their envy, for the ruthless bomb
Spares not the cherished treasures; and to cavernous shelters
One can take only riches stored within the spirit,
Just courage and hope and faith—to freely share.

IV.

Condole not too much with the women of England,
For now they must have eyes that see
Life in its stark perspective, and with the gods
They surely laugh at all the fiercely battled Feminine warrings over trifles, and at all the unimportant.
Putterings that fill the days of those whose vision
Has orbit not beyond the "mine" and "me."

V.

Pity not the women of England,
For they have seen beyond the curtain;
To them death is no longer a strange, terrifying ogre,
To be put off, shrunk from, falteringly held at bay,
But rather a familiar and majestic presence,
That comes daily among them, placing in their hearts
The peace that knows no further fear.

Waistcoat Effect In Door Prize Suit

A certain cure for spring fever is this hat and suit ensemble, which is to be the door prize at the fashion show presented by Bonwit Teller at the Brazilian Embassy tomorrow afternoon for the benefit of the American Red Cross. The suit is of black Gallagher-mesh, a non-crushable wool so-called after the name of its designer—Louis Barnes Gallagher. The jacket is bound in black taffeta and has a waistcoat effect in front. The rounded petals are repeated in the back of the jacket. Straw and taffeta make the perky little sailor, which is designed by Jeanne Tete.

Business Girls Should Learn How to Relax

By Ida Jean Kain

THERE'S a bromide to the effect that if women could only put their feet upon desks they would make much better executives. It has nothing to do with inhibitions. It's simply that the position is restful and helps one to relax. Relaxed muscles relax the nerves.

Tension is the most tiring factor in business, and, since it looks as though the business girl will have to continue to keep her feet on the ground, the solution is to take relaxing exercises. These relaxers are like no other calisthenics, and are guaranteed to take the kinks out of your nerves.

Aim Is to Stretch

The aim in each exercise is to stretch, then fold up rhythmically. First, stretch to full extension, going up on the toes with arms high overhead. Then let your body sag and go completely limp, bending the knees and letting the trunk dangle.

Now for a side stretch: Stand erect, with arms high overhead. Pull slim through the middle, then bend sideward—way over. From that position just let go. Let the waist slump, the arms hang down limply. It's a delightfully queer sensation not to be making the slightest effort. When you are completely relaxed, stretch, bend, and flop to the opposite side. Repeat several times.

If you pound a typewriter, your shoulders are apt to be a tension center. You can relax the shoulders with this exercise: Stand up and swing one arm straight out in front of the body, the other straight out in back. Swing the arms simultaneously in a loose-jointed rhythm, and you'll find it gives your entire body a lift.

Now shrug the soulders up and down. Move them forward and back, just moving the shoulder girdle and letting the arm hang. Then clasp the hands back of the head and try to touch elbows together in front. Finish by circling the elbows with hands still clasped back of head.

For Waistline Bulges

To take the bulges off your waistline as well as the kinks out of your spine, do this stretcher: Sit on the floor with the legs straight and wide apart, arms upstretched. Using the waist as a hinge, sway the trunk down and around in a circle. You should eventually be able to bend so easily that you can touch fingers of right hand to right foot while stretching arms up, then circle around and touch left hand to left foot. After that flop for a few minutes.

Wind it up with this relaxer: Stand up and hop three times, first on one foot, then on the other. Then stop and shake your entire body loosely, and hop some more.

If you are very tense, follow the exercise rule for the too thin girl and shake arms and legs loosely at the completion of each exercise, and when you have finished the set, lie down, completely covered, for 15 minutes of relaxation.

Factories See No Big Shortage Of Aluminum Pots and Pans

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

THERE'S a real tempest in the teapot—the aluminum pot you understand. Mrs. Roosevelt's remarks about curtailing purchases of aluminum pots and pans because of its importance in the defense program have focussed the news spotlight on this subject of household interest.

The first point the aluminum industry makes in answer to this admonition is that the use of aluminum for household cooking utensils amounts to only about 4 per cent of the aluminum production in the United States while there's increased production of aluminum itself as defense demands mount and are given first consideration. There is some shortage of aluminum for household use in prospect, however, despite an increased output of aluminum ingot. But nothing to get hysterical about as yet, say leaders in the industry. Most of the important manufacturers have reasonable stocks on hands and so have leading retailers. Big stocking-up orders, from the stores anticipating a shortage, are not encouraged by the manufacturers for the good reason that they are having a busy enough time filling regular orders. The mail-order houses are reported to be the only firms that have done much serious "stocking up" in advance.

If home makers will regard the present situation as temporary, hence buy according to reasonable need, a serious shortage of stocks is not anticipated. Manufacturers feared at first that Mrs. Roosevelt's remarks would either cause women to flock to the stores and buy all the aluminum pots available now—or else they'd take her advice too seriously and buy none at all. Either reaction would have worked a hardship on both manufacturer and dealer. At this writing, reports from the pot and pan front are that there's been no reaction at all to the First Lady's words of caution.

The idea of substituting plastics and other materials for cooking utensils has met with a lukewarm response among those who've been through the mill of experimenting with all types of pots and pans. The consensus of opinion is that none of these will really replace aluminum in our affections. Cast iron, enamel ware and glass are suggested as the types that we'll turn to for replacements, for such materials as copper, stainless steel and zinc are also due for attention in the defense program and so won't be too widely available for domestic use.

Eat Vitamins To Aid Beauty

ON VITAMINS, say diet authorities, may depend our national well-being in the defense emergency.

Eggs and green leafy vegetables such as spniach are high in Vitamin A. Their role is to keep linings of digestive system and lungs healthy—and incidentally build up your resistance to colds. The B1 in foods such as milk and peanut butter puts an edge on your appetite, keeps nerves and pep in tip-top form.

The C in oranges and strawberries makes for supple young bodies. D is the sunshine vitamin you'll find in fatty fish, cod-liver oil. And the G in kidney and steak helps to give you that rosy outlook.

How not to lose vitamins in cooking and storing foods? You'll find the answers in our 40-page booklet, "Vitamins for Health and Beauty." Tells what each vitamin does, how much you need, what foods have it. Has vitamin-high menus; facts on minerals.

Send 15c in coins for our booklet "VITAMINS FOR HEALTH AND BEAUTY," to the New York office of The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West 19th Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Mary Haworth's Mail

On Being Transferred From Small-Town Office To Nearby City, Young Man Forgets the Girl He Left Behind; She Wastes With Worry

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Early in November a young man (aged 23; I am 20) came from a nearby city to my home town to work. Almost immediately, we started dating. Soon after that, I knew I was very much in love with him. When he realized this fact, he told me of a girl in the city (whom I shall call Ellen), with whom he had been going steadily for for almost a year prior to his transfer here. He said he did not know his exact feeling for her, but had thought he was in love with her. Naturally I was upset by this information, but as I cared too much for him to give him up, I continued seeing him as before.

About a month ago, he was transferred back to the city quite suddenly. I was very much upset about it and he appeared to be, too. We had a date the night before he left, and he came back to see me the following night. He telephoned three times the following week and and came to see me on the week-end. That night he said he had seen Ellen again and had definitely decided he was not in love with her and would not see her again. He said I was always in his thoughts, that I was the most wonderful person he had ever known, etc. "During the entire time we were going together, we had always talked as though we would some day get married,—and on this particular night, the idea seemed more strongly emphasized than ever before.

However, he didn't say (and never has said) that he loves me. Although a number of times when he has been with me he has started to say something and then checked himself,—explaining he was "not going to say what he had been about to say, until he was perfectly sure." I later learned he had started to say he loved me.

But to get back to the story: During the second week after his transfer back to the city, he telephoned me twice—the second time to break a date because he had to work. He said he would call me later, but he hasn't done so, and that was three weeks ago. About two weeks ago I became desperate and called him. He seemed very glad to hear from me, but offered no excuse for not having called me. Again, he said he would telephone me later, and again he failed to keep the promise.

When we first started going together, he asked me not to date anyone else and until a week ago, I complied,—as I had no desire for other men's company. I have sat at home, night after night, waiting for him to call, and as a result have become nervous, rundown and have lost about 10 pounds. About a week ago, I could stand it no longer and wrote him a very formal note, asking him to return my picture and letters, saying I would return his to him. I have had no reply to that letter.

He always seemed so gentlemanly and considerate that I cannot understand such behavior. My friends and relatives have told me repeatedly that I am a fool even to think of him. They say he was merely "handing me a line," but I cannot believe it. When he went back to the city, I told him I intended to get a position there, too, if possible. He seemed glad to hear this and encouraged me to do so, as he has no car and otherwise couldn't see me often. After his neglect, however, I have no ambition or desire to get a position there, or even to hold the job I have.

I do not wish our friendship to end, Miss Haworth, as I am still very much in love with him. What, if anything, do you think I should do? I would very much like to forget him, but I have found it utterly impossible. Your advice will be appreciated. Sincerly. DESPERATE.

Make No Investment In Slippery Character

DEAR DESPERATE: Look at your problem in the cold light of print, as it here stands presented—and I am sure you must see that the young man is giving you what is known as "the run-around." It appears that he doesn't love you and never has; that his feeling for you has never amounted to more than infatuation, at most—and that he cannily recognized its meretricious quality all along, but was too selfish to give you the benefit of a bluntly truthful statement. In other words, he encouraged you to think what you wanted to believe; because, by indirectly deluding you, he was able to claim more of your time and (no doubt) a greater degree of intimacy than you would have allowed,—had it been clearly understood that his interest was transient and trifling, rather than wholehearted, honorable and potentially permanent.

The fact that, coincident with his transfer to another environment, his enthusiasm for your society automatically waned, to the extent that he can't be bothered keeping up even a pretense of friendship, — this shows that your chief hold on his attention was your easy availability. When you are with him, you exercise a certain physical appeal for him,—but now that the temptation of propinquity is removed, I imagine he is a little ashamed of and sorry for the careless duplicity of his florid address; and, far from planning to continue the flirtation, seriously hopes you will follow his example of indifference and forget the whole thing.

One might say that your wistful pursuit of him—your woebegone telephone call; your sulky request for the return of your photograph and letters—had been a mistake, in that it represented futile sacrifice of dignity. However, it is a gesture the average girl would have made in similar circumstances—and should even add up to profit for you, since his callous failure to respond surely must give you a belated realization of the slippery character you are dealing with. In the face of that realization, it would seem illogical and self-betraying in the extreme, to continue being "very much in love" with him, and to go on wanly spending yourself in pitifully wasted efforts to regain his negligent notice.

It appears h is the kind of man who, like the legendary sailor, "has a girl in every port." Ellen, for instance, was his "best girl" in one locality,—a girl whom he beaued devotedly for almost a year, until he was transferred to your locality where, "almost immediately," he established a lien on your affections. And now that he has been transferred to yet another environment, it is reasonable to think he has already (again, "almost immediately!") found himself still a third girl, who is as interested in helping him forget you as you were interested in persuading him to forget Ellen!

Bearing in mind his easy disloyalty to her, does it seem likely he would be any more faithful to you? I think not. My advice to you is to close your mind against thought of him, and to get busy immediately "going places and doing things" with the young people in your community,—thus sensibly helping yourself to do what you must do (what he wants and intends you to do): namely, forget him. M. H.

Opera Comique Star Is Washington Visitor

By Hope Ridings Miller

ONE LOVELY AND LIVELY young lady, who is determined not to let the war change her plans entirely, is Mlle. Colette d'Arville, star of The Opera Comique. Coming over to this country in November on a concert tour, she arranged to return to her homeland in June, and she is still counting on following her original schedule.

She said so yesterday in her suite at the Shoreham Hotel, where she is staying during her Washington visit. The latter, incidentally, is to be all too brief, for she will be off to Virginia tomorrow to spend the remainder of her vacation.

Petite and pretty, with dark eyes and black hair, she speaks English much better than the average foreigner. There's a good reason. She has made a number of trips to this country and has sung with symphony orchestras before American audiences many times.

"Just a vacation," is her description of her current visit to Washington—the first she has made in three years. "But I love it here," she went on, "and I'm looking forward to seeing some of the new points of interest . . . particularly the new art gallery."

She has no special views about the war. None she cares to express, at any rate. But clothes? Ah, that's different. For the first time in her career, her wardrobe now has a strong American accent. At the time she left Paris, shops there were in a state of upheaval, and dressmakers were moving out. So she waited until she got to New York to buy most of the clothes for her American tour.

The idea turned out to be—well, not bad. She found New York designers were turning out some lovely dresses and hats. "But they're still modifications of the Paris styles," she added.

Modification or not, however, the costume she had on yesterday was most becoming. It featured a snappy little black skullcap of braided straw, trimmed at the side with red roses, and a trimly tailored black suit, set off with a simple white blouse.

There was one more question before the brief interview drew to a close. Was there a chance that, if the war abroad continued, she might arrange to stay on in this country through the summer?

"No, no," she said, with a firm shake of her head. "Whatever happens, I must get back to Paree . . . . in June."

Envoy's Daughter Visiting Here

Speaking of attractive visitors reminds me—Mlle. Emel Tek, daughter of the Turkish Ambassador to Japan, has arrived here from Tokyo and will be a guest of the Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Ertegun for several months.

A year ago, when she and her parents stopped off in Washington briefly before going to Japan, I met her at a luncheon at the 1925 F Street Club, and she told me then she hoped to get back to Washington "for a real visit" some day. I remember I found her a most engaging person then and had quite a long chat with her. So when I saw her the other afternoon at a party, I felt as if I were meeting an old friend.

On her first trip to Washington, she had come from Warsaw, where her father served as his country's envoy. Before that, he was Turkish Ambassador at London. She's pretty and chic, and she speaks flawless English. I've an idea she'll have quite a whirl during her Washington stay.

Noted Britisher Coming to Capital

And now for news of another interesting person, whose Capital visit has not yet begun. She is Prof. Winifred Cullis, of London; she arrived in this country only a few days ago, and she is scheduled to arrive in Washington Monday. Her long list of honors reads like ac ouple of pages from "Who's Who," and I won't be surprised if she turns out to be one of the most distinguished Britishers to visit here this year.

A widely known author and lecturer, she is also professor of physiology at the University of London. And that gives you a mere hint about her activities. I'll tell you more about them later. Meanwhile, plans are well under way for a round of parties in honor of Prof. Cullis. The first will take place Monday afternoon when Miss Craig McGeachy, of the British Embassy, gives a large reception at the Sulgrave Club. Luncheon at the White House, and another with Lady Halifax will also be included on Prof. Cullis' Capital calendar. She will be here through next Thursday.

CAPITAL SKETCHBOOK: Mr. and Mrs. George Moffett (he's chief of mining and mineral products for the OPM) have moved into the Georgetown home of Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse. The latter have moved out to Wolf Trap Farm for the season, but they've been spending most of their time in New York lately. Back at the farm for a few days, Mrs. Shouse had a few friends out to luncheon there yesterday. She'll be heading for New York again tonight. One of her chief interests now is the April meeting of the Institute of Professional Relations, in which she and Mrs. Chase Going Woodhouse have long been interested.

McNutts to Visit The Davies Villa At Palm Beach

Federal Security Administrator and Mrs. Paul V. McNutt will leave on Sunday for Palm Beach, where they will visit Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Davies at their villa, Mar-a-lago, for a week.

Leaving here on April 9, Miss Louise McNutt will join her parents in Miami Beach, where they will go after their sojourn in Palm Beach. Miss McNutt, who is a student at George Washington University, will spend her spring vacation in Florida. The McNutts plan to be in the South about two weeks.

On Friday Miss McNutt will entertain at a luncheon in honor of Miss Ann Wickard, daughter of the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Claude Wickard, who returns to Purdue University on Sunday. Tomorrow Miss Patricia Grady will entertain at a luncheon for Miss Wickard.

Countess to Be Feted

Mrs. Thomas Richard Cowell will be hostess at a large dinner at the 1925 F Street Club this evening in honor of Countess Janusz Ilinska, of New York, who is here arranging the fashion show at the Brazilian Embassy tomorrow afternoon.

Capital Whirl

By Sally Swift

WASHINGTON, IN LENT, very appropriately centers its social activities around the numerous benefits that are being planned for the early weeks of spring. Several dinners are on the calendar for next Sunday night, with the hostesses to take their guests on to the Willard Hotel afterwards to see the colored movie which will be shown for the benefit of Greek war relief. Among the hostesses that night will be Mrs. Eliot Wadsworth, Mrs. Walter Lippmann and Mrs. Truxtun Beale.

The movie will be shown by the known lecturer and conductor of the Odyssey Cruises, Byron MacDonald, who is giving his services for the cause of Greece. His audience will see the Dalmatian coast and the "Isles of Greece" through the eyes of one whose name, Byron, must have been a prediction of his love for Greece.

But lecturers and hostesses are not the only ones in Washington who are working for the Greek cause. The Greek colony of Washington, mostly owners of small shops and people of modest means, raised about $30,000 out of their own pockets before they even asked for help from their American friends.

The other day Mrs. Beale's butler, helping the good work, walked across Jackson Place from Decatur House to the corner near the White House, where old Steve keeps his little peanut stand. Steve, it will be remembered, is the naturalized Greek who was much in the news a few years ago when he was permitted, through the intercession of Mrs. Roosevelt, to retain his vantage point on the White House corner. Mrs. Beale is chairman of the Greek War Relief and her butler was bearing a poster advertising Greek Week, March 25 to 30, which he asked Steve to display on his stand. "Sure, I will," said Steve," and I will give this week's earnings to Greek relief, too."

DESPITE BOMBS, Americans who are assigned to London jobs are only too eager to go over and see for themselves just what is going on and what they can do to help in the crisis. Newly assigned to London from the State Department is Dorsey Fisher, who will be Second Secretary at the U. S. Embassy there. Mr. Fisher expects to cross on the Clipper at the end of April and is enthusiastic about the trip and his new post. He has taken up the favorite pre-clipper sport of weighing. It quickly becomes a mania, with addicts rushing to the scales to weigh clothing, favorite possessions and themselves, with emphasis on rejections because of weight. Prospective travelers have even been known to reject themselves and start dieting.

By one of those lapses which, I hope, are more easily pardoned than explained, I left out the important word "British" in speaking of the American Committee for British Catholic Relief the other day. The committee has been formed with a view to supplying the spiritual as well as physical needs of bombed civilians in England by means of mobile Catholic chapels which will also be used as canteens. Active workers on the London committee for this work are the two sisters of the late Lord Lothian. They are Lady Margaret Kerr and Lady Minna Butler-Thwing, and among their coworkers are Lady Howard of Penrith, so well known in Washington when her late husband was British Ambassador here, and the authors, Hilaire Belloc and Christopher Dawson.

News comes from Moscow that Llewellyn Thompson has arrived safely and has taken up his work at the U. S. Embassy. Mr. Thompson made many friends in Washington when he was on duty at the State Department here last year.

Mrs. Waggaman Pulver is spending a few days as guest of Admiral and Mrs. George T. Pettengill at the Navy Yard.

Mrs. Noyes Lewis has gone to Palm Beach for a second vacation. This time she is accompanied by her son, "Bin," who is on holiday from St. Alban's School.

Mrs. Forrestal Will Entertain Navy Sponsors

Mrs. James V. Forrestal, wife of the Undersecretary of the Navy, will return sometime this week from a stay at Hobe Sound, Fla., where she visited Mrs. Phillip Barry.

Mrs. Forrestal will be hostess at a tea on Sunday in honor of members of the Society of Sponsors of the United States Navy. The society, which is made up of women who have christened Navy vessels, meets here annually in the spring and this year will convene on Saturday. Mrs. Roosevelt will entertain them at the White House on Monday and the sponsors will hold their annual luncheon on Tuesday in the Chinese Room of the Mayflower.

Washington women who belong to the society include Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, Mrs. Emory S. Land, Mrs. Clarence A. Aspinwall, Mrs. David F. Sellers, Miss Virginia Hunt, Mrs. Henry Williams, Mrs. Robert Lister MacNeil, Mrs. Jennings Bailey, Mrs. Ivan E. Bass, Mrs. Katherine Dunlop, Mrs. Albert P. Niblack and Mrs. William S. Pye.

The sponsors will attend the annual patriotic service to be held at the Washington Cathedral on Sunday at 4 before Mrs. Forrestal's tea. The music will be rendered by the choir of midshipmen from the United States Naval Academy. Superintendent of the Academy and Mrs. Russell Willson will be present.

J. L. Houghtelings Give Party for W. S. Brewsters

Mr. and Mrs. J. Lawrence Houghteling gathered in a few friends—about 20 in all—yesterday afternoon for cocktails in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Brewster, who will return to their home in Chicago shortly.

Mr. and Mrs. Brewster—he is a trustee of the Art Institute in Chicago—came to Washington last week for the opening of the National Gallery of Art. They have a famous collection of modern French paintings. During their stay here the Brewsters, who are stopping at the Anchorage, have been widely feted: Last Wednesday evening they were honor guests at a large dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Prentiss Coonley. The Brewsters returned to Washington yesterday from a short visit to Williamsburg, Va.

Home from Vassar for her spring vacation is Miss Margaret Houghteling. Expected sometime today is James L. Houghteling, jr., who is a student at Yale University.

Gen. Frank Aiken To Be Tea Guest

Mrs. Robert Brennan, wife of the Irish Minister, will entertain at a tea on Friday afternoon in honor of the Irish Minister for Coordination of Defense, Gen. Frank Aiken.

Gen. Aiken is in Washington to try to get supplies—wheat, it's reported, as well as arms—for his country. He is staying at the Wardman Park.

Ensign Morrison, Bride on Trip; Wed in Honolulu

Ensign and Mrs. Charles H. Morrison, jr., are on their honeymoon, following their marriage in Honolulu on March 14, in St. Clement's Church, with the Rev. E. Tanner Browne officiating.

The bride is the former Miss Barbara Wentworth, daughter of Capt. Ralph S. Wentworth, of the United States Navy, and Mrs. Wentworth. Ensign Morrison is the son of Capt. Charles H. Morrison, United States Navy, and Mrs. Morrison, of this city.

The bride wore an embroidered organza frock made with a sweetheart neckline, bishop sleeves and full skirt. Her fingertip-length veil was held with orange blossoms. Mrs. R. A. Moore was matron of honor. Ensign John E. Mansville served as best man. A reception followed at the Pleasanton Hotel in Honolulu.

Greek Aid Group Gives Luncheon

The Greek Relief Fund luncheon held at the Mayflower Hotel yesterday afternoon was marked by the presence of Dsitrict officials and prominent local Greek citizens. Guest of honor at the luncheon was Maureen O'Sullivan, Hollywood actress, who came to Washington to assist in the drive. Miss O'Sullivan was also guest of honor at a combined Washington Greek Societies dance held last night at the Mayflower Hotel.

About the Town

—with Dudley Harmon

THE ICE CLUB of Washington, active membership in which ranges from grandmothers to 4-year-olds, will have a gala closing session next Monday evening. The carnival will take place at Riverside Stadium and members may bring guests, so a big crowd is expected.

DUDLEY HARMON

On Sunday mornings through the winter, when all ages meet for skating, visitors may see everyone from a child who can hardly stand on his skates to dignified, Sir Hugh Dowding of the British Air Force. Sir Hugh was a member of the Royal Skating Club in London and in his leisure moments here dances around the rink with various partners.

• • • •

ONE OF the sights of the club is the Seven Farrellys—no, not an acrobatic team, but the five children of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Farrelly and their parents, all skating around at once. Mr. Farrelly is in Washington on defense business. Other family combinations frequently seen at Sunday sessions are Mrs. A. A. Berle and a little daughter, and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, wife of the Norwegian Minister, with young Marjorie. Frederick Eaton of OPM and Mrs. Eaton are among the new members of the club.

SEVERAL of the children have done wonders with their dancing, and to see some youngster waltzing with Creighton Peet, who is over 6 feet tall, is quite a spectacle. Mrs. Peet has been getting down to the rink every morning at 7:30 lately to practice for her role in the carnival. As part of their program that night members will do a Spanish tango number in costume. The James Clement Dunn Trophy will be presented to the best skater of the club. Mrs. Arthur Clephane has won it the last two years—and the Richard Sanger Medal will be given by Mr. Sanger to the two members who have shown the most improvement.

Members will take their tests in figureskating on Friday. Several officials of the National Association will come from Philadelphia to judge and later Mr. and Mrs. John Borton will entertain at a buffet supper for them. Last spring, when the club had been going only a year, every member who tried in the figures test was flunked. Despite many cracked knees and broken bones, however, the Ice Club is here to stay.

MRS. Carter Glass is overcome with embarrassment, all because of a picture. The other day a publicity agent asked her to pose for a picture spread for the antiques committee of the Piccadilly Arcade. "Just grab that silver fruit basket on your table and we'll use it in posing," said the agent. When the picture appeared, the captions said that the object would be donated for sale at the Arcade. Since Mrs. Glass recevied the basket only a few months ago as a wedding present, she is hoping the donor hasn't seen the newspaper.

• • • •

YOUNG Peter Dewey, who drove an ambulance in France, says that the picture which remains uppermost in his mind is not bombs, blood, or fleeing refugees. Instead, it is Paul Reynaud, running hatless down the street of Bordeaux just before resigning as Premier. "It is as though you saw the President of the United States dashing madly down Pennsylvania Avenue with neither an overcoat nor any attendants," he explains.

• • • •

AT A dinner she and Maj. Leonard gave the other night, Mrs. Leonard had arranged a very unusual centerpiece made entirely of pieces of coral in a bronze bowl. Enormous conch shells were placed at either end of the table. Mrs. Leonard explained that she is using that centerpiece over and over again to make everyone "coral conscious." She has ordered a shipment of it for the garden sale May 7 to raise funds for the upkeep of the gardens of the National Cathedral.

Junior League Gives Luncheon

Defense, which has made Washington a boom town, has also swelled the membership rolls of the local Junior League. So many new transfers have come from other cities that the league entertains at a "get acquainted" luncheon for the newcomers each month.

Yesterday another in the series of luncheons was held for Mrs. Leslie Clifford, of Utica, N. Y., and Mrs. John A. Rice and Mrs. Roderick Sears, of Philadelphia. Mrs. Robert W. Wilson presented them to the other guests and Mrs. Montgomery Blair, jr., president of the league, presided.

Among those present were Mrs. W. Thacher Winslow, Miss Elizabeth Sladen, Mrs. William C. Meloy, Mrs. Stuart Gayness, Mrs. Frank Elmore, jr., Mrs. Erskine Hamilton, Miss Nan Ferguson, Miss Anne Holloway, Miss Elizabeth Beal, Miss Catherine DuBois, Mrs. Kenneth Holland, Miss Anne Sterrett, Miss Juliet Dulany, Mrs. Herbert Fales, Mrs. Frank Goodwin, Miss Bamble McKenna, Mrs. Murray Borden, jr., Mrs. Sherwood Smith, Mrs. Roger Robb, Mrs. Milo Hamilton, Miss Jacqueline Meredith, Mrs. John Bennett and Mrs. W. Campbell Armstrong.

Visits Capital

Espils Fete Argentine Educator

The Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Espil entertained at a luncheon yesterday in honor of Dr. Enrique Martinez de Paz, dean of the University of Cordoba, in Argentina, and Senora de Paz.

The couple are in Washington on the first stage of a tour of several American universities, in line with the State Department's good neighbor program. They will go today to Charlottesville, Va., to visit the University of Virginia, and will later go to the University of Chicago for a look around.

Dr. and Senora de Paz, who, incidentally, left ten children behind in South America, have been widely entertained during their stay here. The professor is interested in American constitutional law, particularly its influence on Argentine law. So yesterday he paid a call on Justice Stanley Reed, of the Supreme Court, following the luncheon.

On April 7 a "whole boatload" of South American notables will arrive in New York prior to a good-will program sponsored by the Cultural Relations Division of the State Department. They will include a young Argentine historian, a Colombian educator, and a sculptor and an architect from Uruguay.

Last night Dr. de Paz delivered a lecture at the Pan American Union.

Mrs. Bromwell Entertains at Large Tea Here

Mrs. Charles Bromwell, who recently returned here from Europe, where she made her home for many years, entertained at a large tea yesterday afternoon in the Madison Room of the Wardman Park Hotel.

Stopping with Mrs. Bromwell are her daughter, Lady Bailey, and granddaughter, Miss Patricia Bailey, who is on spring vacation from her studies at Foxcroft School in Middleburg.

Mrs. Bromwell, who has lived in many parts of the world, is renewing old acquaintances here. She was once owner of the Sixteenth Street home of Mrs. Peter Augustus Jay, which is now leased by Mrs. Walter Denegre.

Miss Clark Fetes Visiting Count

Miss Edith Clark entertained at a family dinner party last night at her home in Georgetown for Count Jehan de Noue, who is visiting her. The count was among the thousands evacuated from the Dunkerque beach. He is lecturing in this country and will go to Philadelphia tomorrow to make a speech.

Miss Clark, who owns the house in London where Charles Dickens lived, returned to this country after the war broke out and settled in a charming old house on N Street.

Rockefeller Addresses Women's Press Club

By Jessie Ash Arndt

The Post Club Editor

The granting of priorities on products essential to the Latin American republics and "immediate and unparalled production of ships" are imperative if our good neighbor policy is to accomplish the soldarity and defense of the Western Hemisphere, Nelson A. Rockefeller, declared yesterday.

Mr. Rockefeller, coordinator of cultural and intellectual relations between the Latin-American republics, addressed the Women's National Press Club at its weekly luncheon at the Willard Hotel.

"There is no use talking about better relations—they all go for nothing—if we don't solve the basic economic problems," he said.

A great and grave responsibility rests on the United States for the economic life and livelihood of the hemisphere, Mr. Rockefeller declared. Unless drastic steps are taken by our Government, it may not be possible to make available to them the products which are vitally important to them, he said. These include iron and steel equipment, for which they are completely dependent on the United States, he pointed out.

Should the Latin American Republics not be able to get materials from this country, causing a further tightening of their belts, economic suffering would be followed by unrest, offering a fertile field for totalitarian propaganda, said Mr. Rockefeller. If working from within, the totalitarian powers get control of even one country, it will give them a leverage in South America and it "may cost us many men and machines to regain what we have lost," he added.

Mr. Rockefeller called attention to the fact that totalitarian conquests in Europe have been going on in one country after another through the penetration of ideas and economic pressure. A strong government and economic independence is necessary to resist such pressure, he said, recalling the Nazi boast that Greece could have been brought to her knees in two weeks if Italy had not been so stupid as to take military action.

"Let's not fool ourselves that it can't happen here—on this hemisphere," he said.

He urged the vital importance not only of granting priorities on essential goods but also of stepping up the ship building program so as to insure ships for the trade. Only 119 boats are now in service for all the Hemisphere, he said. Of these, 54 belong to the United States, 22 to Norway (British-controlled) and the rest are chartered. The British, with continued loss of tonnage, are likely at any time to use the Norwegian boats for convoys; the chartered ships will go anywhere that is most profitable and the United States boats are likely to be required to serve the Army and Navy as the defense program progresses, he said. Therefore, overnight, the commercial shipping could be curtailed.

To forestall such a possibility, he called for an "unparalleled production of ships." Answering a question as to South America's ability to build them, he indicated the willingness, but need for our steel plate and engines in order to do so.

Mrs. J. Fred Essary, president of the club, presided. At the table with the honor guest were Dr. Laurence Duggan, political adviser to the State Department; Mrs. Duggan, Dr. Irene A. Wright, of the State Department; Mrs. John Taber, wife of Representative Taber, of New York, and president of the Congressional Club; Mrs. Elizabeth Von Hess, the noted speech teacher; the Right Rev. Msgr. Michael J. Raedy, general secretary of the National Catholic Welfare Conference; William F. Montavon, just appointed to the Advisory Policy Committee of Mr. Rockefeller's office, and Senor Carlos Siri, of the National Catholic Welfare Council news service.

Woman's Club Of Chevy Chase Tours Gallery

The first group to make a conducted tour of the National Gallery of Art was a party of 150 members of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase which started its trip through the gallery at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Some of the women went early and had luncheon at the cafeteria. They were joined by the others later and formed an enthusiastic group of visitors. Mrs. Benjamin Hugh Bennett, chairman of the art section of the club, and Mrs. Miles C. Trowbridge, vice chairman and also art chairman of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, headed the delegation. Those included in it were members of the art appreciation, interior decoration and metal craft and jewelry-making groups within the section.

LAST SATURDAY, before the Easter Card Shop for Britain Relief had opened at 1018 Connecticut Avenue, a friend of Britain brought a handful of old gold for the "yolk" of the large egg that decorates the window. She had read in this column about the plan to fill the egg with odds and ends of old gold to swell the relief fund.

While Miss Harriet Winslow was looking over the room, making final preparations to open the shop on Monday, the quiet little woman entered with her contribution. She and her mother had sorted out old keepsakes and decided to give them to the relief cause. Among them were a gold dollar, dated 1854, and a gold quarter of the same year, octagonal shaped and about the size of one's little finger nail. These, Miss Winslow believes, may have some value for collectors and bring more than "their weight in gold."

The gifts also included the mother's wedding ring and a watch fob and key that had belonged to the woman's grandfather. Articles such as these will be appraised as they are brought in so that any value they may have aside from that of old gold will be realized, Miss Winslow says.

PEN WOMEN'S NEWS—Interesting things happened down in Miami at the midadministration meeting of the National League of American Pen Women.

Ava Hamilton Singer, intrepid explorer, who has been in Washington for the winter and recently showed pictures of her African explorations before the National Geographic Society, received a message during the Pen Women's Celebrity Breakfast, summoning her to Hollywood. She has been asked to discuss arrangements for releasing 40,000 feet of colored film and 20,000 feet of black and white, to present her story in feature form.

Mrs. Grace Dupree Ridings, Texas State president of the league, and mother of Hope Ridings Miller, Society Editor of The Post, sent to the Duchess of Windsor a poem she had recently written, "The Duchess Recalls the Past." While attending the Miami convention, she received an acklowledgement of it from the duchess' secretary, and an expression of appreciation for the tribute.

City Club Women Rehearse Program

Dress rehearsal was held last night for the musical fantasy, "Romanza," to be presented tonight at the Women's City Club at 8:15 by members of the Junior Guild.

"Romanza" is the idyll of a French powderbox told in poetical form to music arranged and played by Mrs. William R. Fuchs. Miss Agnes Turner will play the role of Marlyn, a debutante. The part of Christine, her mother, will be taken by Miss Thelma Schmitt; Lucille, a French maid, by Miss Amy Porterfield; Ninette, a court dancer, by Miss Marjorie Ault, from Miss Marjorie Webster's School, and Francious, a court musician, by Miss Loretta Kresourg. The play is being directed and staged by Miss Marjorie Marshall and Mrs. Frank Bowling.

Navy Society, To Fete Knoxes At Dinner

Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox and Mrs. Knox will be guests of honor at the annual luncheon to be held at the Hotel Mayflower by the Society of Sponsors of the United States Navy next Tuesday. The Society is composed of women who have sponsored fighting ships for the Navy. Their annual meeting will take place Monday and Tuesday in the Mayflower's Pan American room.

The board of trustees will hold preliminary meeting Saturday at 11 a. m. at the Mayflower and Sunday the group will attend a special patriotic service at the Washington Cathedral, where music will be furnished by a choir from the Naval Academy at Annapolis. At the conclusion of the service, Mrs. James V. Forrestal, wife of the Undersecretary of the Navy, will entertain the members at tea at her home, 2840 Woodland Drive.

Mrs. Russell C. Langdon, president of the society, will be in charge when the business meetings are held Monday and Tuesdays mornings. New officers will be elected at the Tuesday session. Chairman of the annual luncheon is Mrs. Emory S. Land, with Mrs. MacNeil of Bara in charge of menu and seating arrangements.

Among prominent guests at the luncheon will be Admiral and Mrs. Ross T. McIntire, Mrs. Forrestal, Admiral and Mrs. Alexander H. Van Keuren, Admiral and Mrs. Ivan E. Bass, Mrs. Walter B. Woodson, Admiral and Mrs. George T. Pettengill, Admiral and Mrs. Harold G. Bowen, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur T. Sutcliffe of New York, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Bennett of Mountain Lakes, N. J.; Mrs. Claud A. Swanson, Mrs. Henry Williams, Admiral and Mrs. Land and Mrs. Nathan Goff, sr., of Clarksburg, W. Va.

3 Will Speak To W. C. T. U.

The annual banquet of the District Woman's Christian Temperance Union will be held this evening at 6:30 at the Roosevelt Hotel, with Senator Edwin C. Johnson, of Colorado; Representative Margaret C. Smith, of Maine, and Miss Elizabeth A. Smart, legislative representative of the National W. C. T. U., as speakers. Mrs. Earle Wilfley, president, will preside.

The invocation will be pronounced by Dr. Fred S. Buschmeyer, pastor of the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, and a program of music will be presented by Miss Maxwell Galloway, Mrs. Vesta Pollock Lynn, Mrs. Paul Keim and Mrs. C. G. Randell. Others participating will be the various junior groups of the organization, the White Ribbon Recruits, led by Mrs. Bertie Farmer; Loyal Temperance Legion, Mrs. Ival B. Stout, secretary; Youth's Temperance Council, Mrs. Richard Meadows, secretary, and the medal contestants, Mrs. William Watt, director. A special pictorial feature will be presented by Central Iota Sigma, a group of business and professional women, Miss Clara Blystone, president.

'Awful Feeling of Urgency' Keeps Noel Coward Busy With War Work

Times Are Terrible, Grim and Wonderful To Actor-Playwright

By Robert DeVore
Post Staff Writer

There is nothing to stop Noel Coward from going away for six weeks and writing four plays and a couple of novels, he said.

Nothing except the times, that is.

For Coward the times are, indeed, grim. Grim and terrible and wonderful, just as they are for all Englishmen. For him there is no escape from war, no more than there is for any Englishman.

That's the Noel Coward of "Cavalcade" speaking, and, believe you me, the sweep of British Empire is just as meaningful for him as it ever was for Rudyard Kipling.

There was, also, another Coward yesterday. The Coward with the gay touch.

It came out when he arrived from the Australian Legation to nail up a sign at the Picadilly Arcade, 1423 F Street Northwest. Present were Mrs. Truxtun Beale, Mrs. Patricia Hill and others who are running the Arcade for the purpose of selling from April 3 to 5 items for the Royal Air Force Benevolent Fund.

Waiting, also, were three newspaper photographers.

"Life in the Raw"

"First, Coward laid his black Homburg on a table, then picked up his hat to find the brim covered with sawdust. That, he observed, "is life in the raw."

Then he started to work on the sign for the photographers, making a second observation:

"This is rather silly. I ought to have a nail."

The deficiency was remedied and Coward was posed, at once, on his knees, hammer poised for the blow.

"This," he said, "is a most impracticable position. It's very uncomfortable and, besides, it is ruining my trousers."

Another pose was devised, this one more original than the first. To achieve it, Coward had to stand in back of the sign and hammer away with his head hanging down and his face to the cameras.

"Phony Realism"

"I can't help thinking that anyone who should see me hammering upside down would think I was very silly . . . What you want is a picture of a photograph hammering."

"Now," said a photographer, "let's have an action shot."

"Fine," said Coward. "I always go for phony realism."

This one called for Coward to rest his foot on a platform and assume an attitude of lunging at the sign.

"I've now got myself into a sort of Russian ballet pose which I intend to keep."

He was asked to pose with Mrs. Archibald MacLeish, wife of the Librarian of Congress, nailing up a kind of emblem. The idea was to so arrange Coward, Mrs. MacLeish and the emblem so that all three could be reproduced in a two-column cut.

"Should I be fastening this to Mrs. MacLeish's brow?"

Noel Coward is in Washington "between jobs." He has finished up in Australia, is awaiting a new assignment and is "damn anxious to get back to England."

He went to Australia with a mission to "talk about the British war effort from the government side." He talked, but he also sang.

He toured the entire Australian continent in seven weeks, singing all his own songs at benefit entertainments for the Australian Red Cross and in army camps. He gave three and four concerts a night and was a "terrific success," grossing £10,000.

Spent Month in New ealand

He gave a farewell matinee and grossed £2,000 in one lump. Then he spent a month in New Zealand, following the same procedure.

"I have no voice so it's easy for me to sing. I practically shoved the microphone up my nostrils."

On the way to America, Coward rested on a coral island. He arranged his return on the clipper with a stopover at Canton Island, where "you live all day long in your bathing trunks." Tropical storms, which forced cancellation of flights, lengthened the time of his recovery from two weeks to five.

In some quarters of the British and American publics a man is considered to be doing his bit only when he has a rifle on his shoulder. Coward's intelligence tells him he does best for England by using his talents.

He considers the best of all his writings his Australian radio speeches. It would be possible, he said, for him to go away in the Adirondacks and write a novel, yet it wouldn't be possible, because:

"I would have an awful feeling of urgency, that I ought to be doing something else."

And if the war transforms the world, he'll get along. He said:

"The barter system will be perfectly all right with me . . . a play for a plate of brussels sprouts."

Attorney's Trial Again Put Over, Until April 8

Trial of M. Edward Buckley, jr., 33, an attorney who is charged with driving while drunk, was put over in Police Court yesterday until April 8, at the request of the defendant.

Buckley informed Judge D. Neilson that he was engaged in a trial in District Court; that he had retained Leo A. Rover, former District Attorney, as his counsel, and that the latter would require time to prepare a defense.

Charged as a result of a collision at Thirteenth and V Streets Northwest, last July, Buckley pleaded guilty to an accusation of driving on the wrong side of the street, January 13, and was fined $25. The lesser charge was substituted for the drunk-driving count when the latter was nolle prossed.

The new charge was lodged February 25 and the case has been continued successively since then.

When Holiday Is Not Holiday

Montgomery County celebrated Maryland Day yesterday with business as usual. All county offices were in full operation and the board of county commissioners held a meeting. The only observance of the legal holiday was by the county banks and parochial schools. The county public schools went on as usual.

Making It Official

A fire in the attic of a house at 5738 Georgia Avenue Northwest yesterday got immediate response.

No. 22 Engine Company is next door to the house. Firemen saw smoke curling out of the attic window. They turned in an alarm, then put out the flames.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Blanketing in Order Promised

There should be no doubt now about President Roosevelt's intention to issue an executive order bringing the jobs of more than 125,000 Federal workers under Civil Service. In effect, the President promised to issue the order in a letter to Eleanor Nelson, secretary-treasurer of the United Federal Workers of America, in which he said in part: "Plans are now being made to implement the general provisions of that act (the Ramspeck Act) by issuing an executive order to extend the competitive Civil Service to thousands of positions that are now exempted from the merit system."

The President went on to say that "adequate provisions must necessarily be made to permit such further exemptions under Schedules A and B as may be found necessary to meet the operating needs of Federal departments and agencies." This statement is taken to mean that top jobs will be continued in the exempted class. Schedules A and B cover exempted positions.

The President's letter should arouse the Justice Department to action. A copy of the proposed executive order was sent to the department a month ago. Justice was supposed merely to pass on the legality of the order. But the order has been stymied in the department since, and a fight has started over whether lawyers should be brought under merit.

There seems to be some unwarranted concern over whether Federal Loan Agency will be brought under civil service. The truth is, everyone concerned believes it should be. The agency itself has recommended to the Civil Service Commission that FHA, HOLC, and RFC be brought under civil service. It suggested that a large number of RFC officials be exempted. War and Navy are among the departments that have failed to recommend status for their employes. In his letter to Miss Nelson, the President also promised to extend the Classification Act to the field when such action is "administratively feasible."

New Defense Agency

General Accounting Office has lost more than 300 employes during the last three months. Most of them quit GAO for better jobs in defense agencies. Others have transferred to field jobs near their homes. GAO has been designated a defense agency, which means that it now has authority to stop transfers of its employes to other defense agencies. And officials plan to do just that. GAO employes can transfer now only on the office's approval.

Conrad Wirth, National Parks official, is working on a plan to establish camps in national parks for conscientious objectors to military training. The camps would be similar to CCC camps. Some of the objectors feel so strongly on the subject that they have offered to pay their expenses at the proposed camps . . . The OPM personnel office writes each new appointee to offer advice on housing, transportation, schools, and physicians in Washington. Mrs. Pauline B. Chambers is in charge of the service . . . Staggered hours will mean a stretch-out by civil service officials. The officials have been ordered to be on duty at all hours that other departments work.

Half a dozen persons who have been ousted from the Federal service on charges of un-American activities have appealed their cases to the Board of Appeals and Review of the Civil Service Commission. To date, the board has upheld the Government in each case decided. Two are now pending. The board is following the commission's policy of resolving doubts of a person's character in favor of the Government.

Physical requirements for jobs in defense agencies have been eased somewhat, but Treasury has informed the Civil Service Commission it will maintain normal physical standards in its units designated as defense . . . Public Health will give physical exams to persons certified for clerical jobs in the inspector's office of the Post Office Department . . . War's Quartermaster Corps has given its nine zone offices blanket authority to hire persons under $2,600 . . . Charles Bland, chairman of the Civil Service Commission of Canada, is here studying procedures of the United States commission.

Epicures Mix Food, Adjectives While Chef Eats Frankfurter

A TOAST TO THE LADIES—Mrs. Jacques Haeringer, wife of the vice president of the Epicurean Club, and Claude F. Jarrin, president, drink a toast at the first feast set for ladies by the Epicurean Club last night at the Willard Hotel

Women drew on their supply of effusive adjectives last night to keep pace with the succulent dishes which paraded in course after course at the dinner of the Epicurean Club at the Willard Hotel.

The club, devoted to "the promotion of the art of fine eating," permits women guests to sample the type of food which is served at the famed stag dinners of Les Amis d'Escoffier.

Starting with melon and strawberries, the monumental meal last night reached a high point of lyrical exclamations from the feminine guests, when the filet of sole appeared with a lobster sauce, specialty of Otto C. Merz, chef in charge of the dinner.

"M-m-m-m, it's delicious!" murmured Mrs. John Schmutzer, 630 Quebec Place Northwest. She then pondered over words with which to describe its indescribable flavor to her husband, a restaurant owner, unable to attend last night's dinner because of illness.

Chef Eats Frankfurter

Backstage, Merz explained that preparation of the sauce had extended over no less than two days. "Seven hours for cooking . . . then draining . . . then recooking . . ." he explained.

"The masterpiece of the meal?" Merz repeated the question, and tilted his white-capped head. He then made a gesture indicating the futility of trying to single out a masterpiece. After spending the evening turning out masterpieces, he confessed that he was going to make his own meal off of a frankfurter, afterwards.

Jacques E. Haeringer, first vice president of the club and chairman of the dinner committee, opened the party with a little speech giving a foretaste of the meal: "When one chef cooks for another, it is always good."

Claude F. Jarrin, president, called attention to the motto from Epicurus, hoisted over the orchestra stand: "I am an old man and have had a great many troubles, most of which never happened."

$6.50 per Person

At the rate of $6.50 each, 187 persons feasted off of this menu, served with a variety of wines: Supreme de melons et fraises au kirsch (melon and strawberries), petite marmite royal (soup); celeri, olives, amandes salees (celery, olives and almonds); filet de sole aux huitres et crevettes rose, sauce homard (filet of sole, with oysters and shrimp, and lobster sauce); pomme de terre, hollandaise (potatoes); poitrine de poulet de grains au jambon de Virginie (breast of capon with Virginia ham); broccolis polonaise (broccoli); croquette de riz (rice croquettes); salade Epicurean aux fines herbes (Epicurean salad); biscuits Willard; peches Melba sur socle illuminee, gateau Moka (peach melba with cake); cafe noir (black coffee), and menthe.

Snails were served at the hot buffet which accompanied cocktails before the meal.

The club, composed of executives of the hotel, restaurant and catering industries, feasted for nearly two hours until 11 o'clock and then finished off the evening with dancing.

Postlude

Agriculture Choir Joins Orchestra

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Government Employes Services Committee (D. C. National Defense Council) presents the Department of Agriculture Orchestra and Symphonic Choir (augmented by Newcomb-Bethesda Community Singers) on Tuesday night in Federal Auditorium. Conductor: Walter Bauer. Soloists: Glen Carow, piano; Marie Favre, soprano; Carol Reentz, alto; David Manley, tenor; Robert Campbell, barytone. Program: Prelude to "Die Meistersinger" (Wagner), Rondo Brillante in E flat, Op. 29 (Mendelssohn), Secular Cantata, "Song of Man" (Richard Kountz), Symphonic Ode, "The Christ of the Andes" (Henry Clough Leighter).

Capacious Federal Auditorium was filled last evening for a concert by the Department of Agriculture Orchestra and Symphonic Choir sponsored by the National Defense Council. The climax of the program was the performance of Henry Clough Leighter's symphonic ode, "The Christ of the Andes," an appropriate choice in these troubled days. The text refers to the colossal statue of Christ on an Andean pass between Chile and Argentina commemorating the treaty of perpetual peace between those nations, and its burden is the invocation of "the gift of peace upon the earth."

BROWN

Walter Bauer's selection of the major work was also fortunate in that it fell upon a composer who was born in this city and has attained a respected position among American writers of music. The ode is impressively scored both for orchestra and the voices, and the part-writing for the chorus is skillful.

The concert began with Wagner's overture to "Die Meistersinger" and proceeded from that familiar ground to a comparatively strange composition of Mendelssohn's, the rondo or caprice in E flat major for piano and orchestra. This work, composed in 1834 and dedicated to one of the fashionable pianists of that time, Ignaz Moscheles, has fallen into desuetude. It has the composer's characteristic traits of brilliance and sweetness, and demands technical proficiency in the soloist. Glen Carow gave it a commendable reading.

Chorus and orchestra collaborated in Richard Kountz' secular cantata, "Song of Man," a setting of an idealistic poem by Gilbert Purcell. Dr. Bauer's regular symphonic choir was augmented for the occasion by the Newcomb-Bethesda Community Singers. Soloists in "The Christ of the Andes" were Carol Reents and Robert Campbell, and in "Song of Man," the solo parts were sung by Marie Favre and David Manley.

Coroner's Jury Clears 2 Drivers In Traffic Deaths

D. C. traffic deaths this year .. 21
Same date last year 16
Total last year 79

Two motorists were exonerated by a coroner's jury yesterday in connection with fatal traffic accidents.

Both the deaths of Catherine Madison, 10, colored, of 78 Defrees Street Northwest, killed Saturday in front of her home, and George W. Carrick, 69, of 1519 Park Road Northwest, who died last week of injuries suffered March 18, were called accidental by the jury.

Thomas F. Burke, 25, of Seat Pleasant, Md., driver of the car which struck the Madison girl, and Miss Ethel S. Hayden, 17, of 3100 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, who was involved in the Carrick accident, were cleared of responsibility.

Trolley Crash Probers Find No Defects

Streetcar at Fault Is Badly Wrecked, However; 3 Inquiries Being Conducted

Investigators for three agencies admitted last night that they did not know what caused the crash of two trolley cars at 12:04 a. m. yesterday at Seventh Street and Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, killing 1 person and injuring 15. These included officials of the Police Department, Public Utilities Commission and the Capital Transit Co.

An autopsy on the body of Lloyd H. Frazier, 32-year-old motorman who died in the collision, showed that he died of a crushed skull, Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said. Frazier apparently was in excellent physical condition, and there were no indications he was taken ill prior to the accident, the autopsy report said.

Frazier's car, traveling east on Massachusetts Avenue, had run through a red light and struck another trolley operating north on Seventh Street, police said. Fifteen of 40 passengers on both cars were injured. All are recovering, according to hospital reports.

Date of a coroner's inquest into the crash has not been set.

No Defects Revealed

Examination of the death car yesterday by P. U. C. and transit company inspectors revealed it apparently was in proper mechanical shape, A. W. Crossley, executive secretary of the Utilities Commission, announced.

He explained, however, that the front end was so badly damaged that it was impossible to tell if anything had gone wrong with air pressure controls or rods connecting with rear trucks, prior to the crash.

Lieut. William Liverman, chief of the police accident prevention unit, said his inquiry had developed evidence showing that none of four possible methods of stopping the car had been used.

He said the streetcar was equipped with air brakes "of the best trolley type except those used on the new streamliners." Testimony of witnesses and examination of the wrecked car, Liverman declared, indicated that the air brake had not been set, that no effort was made to use the revolving hand brake, that the car was not placed in reverse (the usual method of stopping in an emergency) and that a special emergency brake which locks the wheels had not been operated.

"Guess We'll Never Know"

"We have one important question to answer," said Liverman. "Why didn't Frazier's car stop?. But I guess we'll never know," he added.

The car operated by Frazier was headed for Benning and the other, a one-man trolley, operated by Curtis L. Van Dornes, 38, of Alexandria, Va., was going to Alaska and Georgia Avenues Northwest.

The P. U. C. investigation yesterday was conducted by F. A. Sager, chief engineer, and A. B. Miles, principal inspector. A statement issued following their inquiry read in part:

"An examination of car No. 808, which was the car on the Benning run, indicated that the brakes, brake cylinders, brake rigging, air compressor and controllers were all in proper operating condition. This car is a two-man car built by the J. G. Brill Co. in 1919.

"It was equipped with the usual safety devices for a two-man car of its type, but did not include the so-called "dead man" control used on all one-man cars."

Struck Broadside

The "dead-man" control was described as a device which the motorman must constantly keep in a firm grip to have the car in motion. Automatic brakes are applied the moment his grip is relaxed.

The northbound car, which was struck broadside, the commission reported, was so badly damaged that a mechanical examination was not possible.

Robert Dougan, spokesman for the Capital Transit Co., said the car operated by Frazier had been completely overhauled "several times" since its purchase in 1919. On March 10, he declared, the car passed a rigid mechanical inspection. The Westinghouse air brakes were installed in 1934, he reported, and had been inspected every 3,000 miles since.

Although John Cone, 30, of Arlington, Va., a Capital Transit Co. employe who was riding directly behind Frazier on the death car, reported he noticed the motorman's legs "sag and buckle" just before the accident, a theory he had become ill was discounted following the autopsy.

Cone, one of the two passengers more seriously hurt, is in Emergency Hospital with a possible fractured leg.

The other, Miss Patricia Allison, 30, of 309 Whittier Street Northwest, suffered chest injuries, severe lacerations and shock. She is recovering.

Growing Hospital Needs Discussed

Washington's growing need for more hospital facilities was discussed last night at a meeting of representatives of all private hospitals in the District with members of the executive board of the Health Security Administration.

A long-range hospital expansion program for the District, taking stock of the city's rapid growth, was considered. The meeting was held at the offices of the HSA, at 1823 L Street Northwest. The administrator, Ross Garrett, will issue a statement on the subject today.

Man, 60, Kills Self By Taking Poison

A man identified as Max Falk, 60, address undetermined, was found unconscious in a park at Sixth and I Streets Northwest yesterday. He died a few hours later in Casualty Hospital.

Police said an empty bottle which had contained carbolic acid was lying at Falk's side. The coroner issued a certificate of suicide.

Curtailment Of Services By GHA Shown

Illness of William E. Leahy, chief defense counsel, brought about a half-holiday in the doctors' trial yesterday, Justice James M. Proctor ordering a noon adjournment after the jury had heard a new sort of attack against Group Health Association.

During 1937 and 1938, by-laws of the association were amended at frequent intervals, resulting in curtailment of services to subscribers while increasing the cost to them, it was shown by Seth W. Richardson, of defense counsel.

Refraining from comments or interpretation, the attorney read the GHA by-laws as adopted on March 22, 1937, and then, article by article, disclosed each succeeding restrictive amendment.

Purpose of the reading was to substantiate the defendant doctors' contention that their opposition to the health cooperative stemmed from its promises to give a great deal of medical care for little money. Also, to show that G. H. A., by limiting its corporate responsibility and disclaiming insurance services, thus gave credence to the doctors' charges that it was illegally engaged in the practice of medicine and insurance.

Defendants in the antitrust trial, which starts its eighth week in District Court this morning, are the American Medical Association, District Medical Society and 18 physicians—4 A. M. A. officials, 13 Washington practitioners and 1 Washingtonian who formerly was director of the association's bureau of legal medicine and legislation.

Stricken with the grippe, Leahy was abed yesterday in his home.

The following is an example of the "tightening up" which Group Health Association, for whose alleged restraint the doctors were indicted, underwent in 1937-38, as detailed by Richardson:

As originally adopted, section 3 of article 10 read simply: "In all hospital cases, the corporation will pay for semiprivate room, except in the case of infectious of contagious disease, in which case a maximum of $5 per day will be paid."

Two weeks later it was amended to put subscribers on notice that they would have to pay separately for all medicines, drugs, surgical appliances, eyeglasses, artificial limbs or eyes, radium and deep X-ray treatments, dental work, oxygen, blood transfusions, etc.

In May, 1938, the section was further amended to curtail hospitalization privileges. Four months later it was changed again to require confinement cases to bear $25 of the hospital bill.

On several occasions, it was shown by Richardson, section 4 was altered to make it clear that medical service would be provided only to the extent of the cooperative's resources.

Hampshire Heights Citizens Give Display of Varied Hobbies

How many Washingtonians spent their spare time was demonstrated last night when everything from a penny collection to hand-made inlaid woodworks were exhibited at a hobby show presented by the Hampshire Heights Citizens Association at the Barnaby School.

First prize went to Harry G. Zaritsky, 25 Crittenden Street Northeast, for his exhibit of photographs. Miss Jeanne Henderer, of Takoma Park, Md., won second prize with her collection of dolls from many lands. Third prize was taken by Monte Zucker, 4601 Eighth Street Northwest, for his collection of autographs and pictures.

Six-foot models of racing yachts towered over collections of coins and stamps in the show held in the auditorium of the school. Spring was present in the form of a window box of flowers and a miniature birdhouse.

Judges were Orren Davy, chairman; H. W. McGinness, Howard Stackhouse, Harry J. Miller, Harry Kriemelmeyer, and Mrs. Arthur W. Reid.

At its business meeting, the association proposed steps for Washington's fire protection in case of bombings. With consolidation of the fire department, the citizens agreed, fire houses vacated by companies should be retained for use during an emergency, underground water tanks and reservoirs should be established for use in case mains are destroyed and auxiliary personnel and equipment should be obtained.

In another resolution, a revision of morning parking restrictions was urged because of the recently-inaugurated stagger system under which Government employes report to work.

The association suggested that 8 to 9:30 a. m. parking restrictions be extended to clear the arterial streets of parked cars at an earlier hour.

Trinidad

Extension of the street car "skip-stop" system was advocated last night by the Trinidad Citizens Association as a move to relieve traffice congestion and speed transportation.

The association, meeting at Wheatley School, Montello Avenue and Neal Street Northeast, declared street car stops at every other corner instead of every block had proven advantageous in Northeast Washington and should be inaugurated throughout the city.

Also urged was landscaping of the Gude tract, near Mount Olivet Cemetery, for use as a playground.

The Columbia Typographical Union was asked to build its new temple in the Northeast, where it would be near the Government Printing Office and other large printing offices.

The association reiterated its demand for "complete resurfacing" with tile walls of the H Street underpass, which runs beneath the railroad tracks leading to Union Station.

Plans for a three-hour business holiday on Good Friday were approved. A number of other resolutions calling for street and alley improvements were adopted.

Cathedral-Cleveland

Representative Jennings Randolph's proposal of a trial blackout for the District was urged last night by the Cathedral Heights-Cleveland Park Citizens Association at its regular meeting held at St. Alban's Parish Hall, Massachusetts and Wisconsin Avenues Northwest.

More off-street parking facilities in addition to on-street parking were requested in the downtown area. It was requested that a full-time oculist be attached to the public schools system and that old school buildings in the District have their lighting facilities improved.

The association joined numerous other citizens groups in requesting passage of the Overton amendment.

Jury Gets Records Of Dog License Shortage

Assistant District Attorney William S. Tarver yesterday gave the District grand jury records of an alleged $10,000 shortage in dog license funds here. Three clerks were dismissed some weeks ago after the shortage was indicated by an audit. The grand jury completes its term of office next Monday.

Overton Plan Wins Favor Of Officials

Commissioners, Others Indorse Formula at Hearing Of House Unit

The Overton-Hunter fiscal formula for fixing the Federal payment to the District was unanimously indorsed and the Dirksen plan for evaluating United States property was criticized yesterday at a House subcommittee hearing on the two bills.

The Commissioners and other District officials expressed a pronounced preference for the land-ratio formula adopted by the Senate Monday.

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, author of the substitute plan, was absent but will be given an opportunity Friday morning to explain his proposal.

Chairman Hunter, of the House subcommittee on fiscal affairs, suggested an amendment to the Overton bill stipulating that it should continue for a ten-year period after which it might be altered or renewed.

Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech said he saw no objection to the amendment.

Tax Assessor Edward A. Dent expressed the opinion that a three-man Treasury board, as proposed by Dirksen, could not assess all United States property within the District before January 1, next.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen called the Overton-Hunter formula "the fairest ever submitted," and Commissioners David McCoach and John Russell Young joined in the indorsement.

Young also emphasized that the District is in dire need of additional revenue at once because of the rapid growth in population.

Asked by Hunter whether the Federal payment under the Overton plan would be adequate for the District's needs, McCoach said it would, provided that the District could obtain advances or loans to pay for urgent capital improvements during the period of expansion.

Representative Randolph, chairman of the full committee, expressed the hope that members of Congress will assume an "unselfish attitude" and provide whatever money the District needs to serve defense worker residents at this time.

Civic spokesmen who testified briefly in support of the Overton-Hunter formula are:

A. J. Driscoll, of the Mid-City Citizans Association L. A. Carruthers, of the Federation of Citizens Association; Mrs. Margaret Hopkins Worrell, of the Columbia Heights Citizens Association; H. L. Colman, of the Northwest Citizens Council; Evan Tucker, of the Northeast Washington Citizens Association, and Mrs. Sarah V. Montgomery, of the Washington Peace Mobilization.

Nats Batter Brewers, 12 to 2, for Fifth in Row

Archie Hits 3-Run Homer To End Slump

500-Ft. Wallop Tops 7-Run Rally in 9th; Masterson Does Well; Bloodworth Stars

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Ocala, Fla., March 25.—The Nats put the slug on the Milwaukee Brewers in the ninth inning this afternoon and it's a five-game winning streak that they now own. The final score was 12 to 2 and Washington runs Nos. 10, 11 and 12 were the product of First Baseman George Archie's booming bat. Archie hit a home run with two on base to climax a seven-run inning by the Nats.

Up until that ninth, however, the Nats were finding it easier and quicker to score runs than to make hits. Despite their 5-2 lead, they were being outhit by the Brewers and they owned only four hits going into the ninth. They were getting their runs by every method except driving them across the plate. Ten walks by the Milwaukee pitchers and a pair of Milwaukee errors didn't hurt the Nats any.

The notable items of the ball game as far as Manager Bucky Harris is concerned were (1) The pitching of Walter Masterson and (2) that home run by Archie.

Masterson worked the first five innings for Washington, allowed only four hits and gave up only one run, which was a cheap affair that spawned from a misjudged throw to second by Buddy Lewis. The tall right hander was showing definite signs of acquring control. He did not walk a batter in the first four innings, and when he did walk a pair in the fifth, he was missing the plate only by inches.

When Archie decided to snap out of his batting slump that was threatening his tenure with the Nats, he didn't trifle. His home run contribution with two on base was a wicked line drive into dead center field that rocketed against the fence nearly 500 feet distant. Two were on base at the time.

In contrast to the clever pitching job of Walter Masterson, young Sam Cunningham turned in a sour sort of performance. He gave up four hits, and was in deep trouble in all of the last three innings.

Bloodworth Star

Jimmy Bloodworth made two of the Nats' nine hits and otherwise had a large afternoon. He was the victim of the game's fanciest catch when his 400-foot drive toward the left field fence was grabbed on the run by Outfielder Stencil, and he turned in the game's defensive feature in the eighth when Cunningham was in trouble with two on base. Bloodworth scampered far to his left for a one-hand stop of Sidlo's fierce smash and threw the batter out.

The Brewers presented a pretty horrible pitching trio against the Nats—Lefty Handers, Dave Koslo and Paul Sullivan and Righthander Ralph Hendrix, Koslo and Sullivan couldn't get the ball over the plate and Hendrix got it somewhere near the plate to his great grief. He pitched only one inning, the ninth, and it was he who gave up those seven runs.

The Nats would prefer that no questions be asked concerning the three run lead they took in the third inning. A pair of walks and George Case's single filled the bases, and with two out, three runs came pouring across the plate on a miserable muff of Travis' short fly to Centerfielder Charley English.

Runs Without Hits

Until the ninth, the Nats didn't own an earned run, and one of their four hits to that point was a very cheap affair. They picked up two more gift runs in the seventh when three walks filled the bases. On Cramer's grounder to second base, Al Evans sprinted across the plate a split second before the throw home, and the second run of the inning scored when Sullivan committed a wild pitch.

Masterson should not have been scored on. With two out in the fifth he pitched a single to Just and then filled the bases on walks. Galle hit his next pitch to Buddy Lewis who, instead of making an easy throw to first base made a tardy throw to second and the run scored.

Cunningham got out of trouble in the seventh after putting two on base, but in the eighth he pitched a double to Stroud and a single to Stencil to give the Brewers a run, and he was saved from further damage by Bloodworth's fancy play on a ground ball. In the ninth he walked three batters and pitched a single to Just, but he escaped damage when a run was cut off at the plate by Case's excellent throw to Evans.

Hal Dewey, Burns Star as Entire Club Has Field Day on Ice At Riverside Rink

By Jack Munhall

The Washington Eagles continued last night to make a shambles of the so-called United States Amateur Hockey Association championship series by burying the Atlantic City Sea Gulls under a 9-2 score at Riverside Stadium.

Tallying three times in each period, Red MacKenzie's boys tied the season Eastern Amateur League scoring record against the team that established it against them two months ago.

Before 2,141 paying fans, the Eagles won their second game in as many starts in the five-team, round-robin series and now have a deathlock on the meaningless national amateur title.

8 Players Score

The match was a field day for the Eagles and their individual scoring records. No less than eight Washington players made a goal, and Hal Dewey, continuing his late-season splurge, put in a pair. Norm Burns, with a goal and two assists, took a commanding lead in his race with Heck Pozzo for the league scoring title as Pozzo was held to one assist.

Walt Scherer, recently acquired Eagles' defense man, registered the first goal of his league career in the third period, with the assist of Gordon Pranschke, and it drew a heavy round of aplause. For he shot it directly through "Hated Harry" Dick, the Gulls' rough defense man with whom he had been roughing it up only moments before.

Sideboards Groan

The sideboards groaned under the weight of vicious body checking, and there was a well-beaten path to the penalty box during the first period as the Eagles got away to another fast start. Washington held a 3-1 lead at the end of the first 20 minutes.

Both teams labored several times under the disadvantage of penalties which gave the other numerical superiority, and in all five players served short sentences for minor fouls.

Spectacular were the first two Washington goals. Jack MacBeth made No. 1 by catching a pass from Frank Mailley in midair and guiding the puck into the nets with his stick in the same motion. Then scarcely two minutes later along came old Len Burrage to cooly dribble through the entire Seagull team to score unassisted on a skillful a solo dash as you'd care to see.

Atlantic City interrupted the Washington rally at 15:44 when "Dunk" Galbraith followed up a missed shot of his own and knocked the disk through Goalie Colvin. Colvin really should have had an assist, for the puck rebounded from his pads directly to Gailbraith, but the assist went to Pozzo.

The Eagles compensated for the Seagull point with another at 17:10. This time it was Dewey on the scoring end on a double pass from Jim McCurry and Courteau. Hal

Rangers Drop From Stanley Cup Play-offs

By the United Press

Detroit, March 25.—The Detroit Red Wings tonight eliminated the defending champion New York Rangers from the Stanley Cup play-offs with a 3-2 victory before 8,942 fans at Olympia Stadium.

In the third and deciding game of the Series B playoffs Detroit scored two goals in the first period, one of which was on a skittering puck from the stick of Jack Stewart that caromed off Goalie Dave Kerr's skate into the nets and the other in the last session when Phil Watson, Rangers forward, was in the penalty box.

Neil Colville, great scoring star of the New Yorkers sent home the puck with only 9 seconds remaining but it was too late to catch the fast-flying Red Wings. They threw up a rugged defense centered around Rookie Goalie Johnny Mowers who used so many legs to block the nets that the Rangers were shaking their heads.

Maple Leafs Win In Series, 7 to 2

By the Associated Press

Toronto, March 25.—Sylvanus Apps, Toronto's star center, returned to action tonight after a month on the bench and led the Maple Leafs to a 7-to-2 triumph over the Boston Bruins in the third game of their Stanley Cup hockey playoff series.

The victory gave the Maple Leafs a two-to-one lead in the best-of-seven games between the National League champions and the second-place Toronto club. The fourth game will be played here Thursday.

Apps, who had been unable to play during the last three weeks of the regular season or in the first two playoff games because of a knee injury, scored three Toronto goals and assisted Nick Metz on another tally.

Down, 2-1, after five minutes of the second period, the Leafs went on a scoring rampage to score three goals before that period ended and three more in the final frame.

Parkview Aces Win

Parkview Aces won the second and crucial game in a three-game series with Merrick Boys Club cagers yesterday, 14-13, as Joe Jinks led scoring with 7 points.

Dodgers Snap Yanks' Streak at Seven, 2-1

Murphy Falters in 11th and Flock Puts Across Winning Run; Cards Nose Out Indians, 3-1

By the Associated Press

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 25.—The Brooklyn Dodgers ended the New York Yankees' seven-game string of exhibition victories today by winning an 11-inning mound battle, 2 to 1. It was the Yanks' last game in Florida. They break camp here Thursday and play their next exhibition at Montgomery, Ala., Friday.

Lee Grissom and Kirby Higbee held the American Leaguers to seven hits while Hank Borowy and Johnny Murphy granted eight. Murphy tired in the eleventh and yielded the deciding run when Pete Reiser doubled and, after Joe Medwick flied out, scored on Cookie Lavagetto's single.

Medwick made the first Brooklyn run in the second, hitting a single and stealing second and then coming home on Lavagetto's single and Dolph Camilli's fly. The Yanks tied it up in the seventh when Joe DiMaggio doubled, took third on Higbe's wild pitch and scored after two were out on Buddy Rosar's hopper over second.

Fort Myers, Fla., March 25.—The St. Louis Cardinals banged out only three base blows today but they were enough for a 3 to 1 triumph over the hft-hungry Cleveland Indians.

The Indians took a 1-0 lead off Pitcher Murry Dickson in the second inning and it looked as if the tribe might walk off with another low-scoring victory. But two St. Louis hits bracketed with some inept Cleveland fielding gave the Cardinals three tallies in the eighth.

Al Smith hurled three hitless innings for the Indians and Nate Andrews, second tribe moundsman, was touched for only one blow.

Blues Beat Bosox

Sarasota, Fla., March 25 (AP).—Boston's Red Sox wound up their Sarasota training season today by dropping a 6-4 decision to the Kansas City farm club of the New York Yankees.

Mike Ryba started for the Sox and pitched six scoreless innings, allowing only two men to get on base and holding the Blues to a pair of singles. Oscar Judd, who took up the burden in the seventh, was less fortunate and three run clusters in the seventh and eighth provided more

Miss Bundy Wins in U. S. Net Tourney

By the United Press

Chestnut Hill, Mass., March 25.—Three of the top-seeded players swept to the semifinals of the National Women's Indoor Tennis Championships today by winning their quarter-final matches at the Longwood courts.

The only ranked player failing to qualify was Mrs. Helen Pedersen Ribhany, seeded No. 3, who was forced to default to Katherine Hubbell, of Dedham, because of a grippe attack.

Pauline Betz, of Los Angeles, regarded a likely successor to Alice Marble, gained the semifinal round by defeating Virginia Ellis, of Brookline, 6—2, 6—4. Miss Betz was top seeded.

Miss Bundy Wins

Second-seeded Dorothy May Bundy, of Santa Monica, Calif., defeated Mrs. Philip Theopold, of Dedham, 6—4, 6—1, and fourth seeded Katherine Winthrop, of Manchester, defeated Mrs. George Cabot, of Brookline, 7—5, 9—7.

In the semifinals tomorrow Miss Winthrop meets Miss Bundy and Miss Betz plays Miss Hubbell.

Qualifying for the semifinal double matches were the top seeded team of Miss Betz and Miss Bundy, the second seeded team of Mrs. Hazel Wightman and Miss Winthrop, Mrs. Theopold and Miss Ellis and Miss Hubbell and Miss Dorothy Wightman.

Abrams Joins Navy Group As Instructor

By the Associated Press

New York, March 25.—Lieut. Comdr. Gene Tunney, former world heavyweight champion, brought eight top-ranking boxers and five other athletes to the Naval Recruiting Station today to be enlisted as athletic instructors.

At the same time Tunney revealed that he recently had been transferred from the Bureau of Aeronautics to the Bureau of Navigation and that he will have the task of supervising athletics programs in the entire United States Navy.

Tunney's roundup of boxers brought in two middleweight title contenders, Georgie Abrams, of Washington, and Steve Belloise, of New York; Al Nettlow, Detroit welterweight; Frank Poreda, of Jersey City, and Patsy Perroni, of Cleveland, veteran heavyweights; Tommy Tucker, of New York, and Jimmy Webb, of St. Louis, light-heavyweights, and Cal Cagni, of Cresskill, N. J., middleweight.

Others in Group

Others in the group were Robert Johnson, Hamden, Conn., former Ohio State swimming star, and Russell Duncan, Yale graduate, who have been serving as swimming instructors at Yale; Eugene Keefe, of Yonkers, Alfred College graduate, who received a physical education degree from Columbia; Hilary Renz, of New York, former Holy Cross football player, and Dean Hill, former Princeton footballer.

All will enlist in the Naval Reserve Service for four years and will be called as soon as they pass the necessary examinations. The boxers will rank as boatswain's mates and the other instructors as chief boatswain's mates. The boxers will be assigned in pairs to the naval air training stations at Pensacola, Jacksonville and Miami, Fla., and Corpus Christi, Tex., where Tunney has had charge of athletics for the past several months.

The former champion said he believed boxing was particularly valuable in conditioning flyers because the reaction of a flyer coming out of a steep dive is similar to that of a boxer who has been struck on the jaw. Boxing will enable them to build up resistance and thus regain their faculties quickly.

Athletics Practice

First workouts for the Georgetown Athletics' colored baseball team will be held today and Friday at Francis Junior High. All players are requested to report promptly at 8:30 p. m.

Yankees Await Rookie Ruling

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 25 (U.P.).—Ed Barrow, president of the New York Yankees, tonight awaited Commissioner Landis' answer to his request for permission to drop some rookie players before the Yanks break camp and move North Thursday.

Landis' ruling is that all rookies who would have been eligible for the draft last October must be kept until April 1. As a result, a few rceruits will travel with the Yanks in a series of exhibition games that takes them through three States. On April 1, when the team will be in Dallas, Tex., the unwanted players will have to be sent back to the Yanks' farm clubs.

Mungo Gets 'Silent Treatment' From Dodgers but Observes Vow

Firebrand Pitcher Rounds Into Shape For Montreal Farm

By the Associated Press

Macon, Ga., March 25.—Van Lingle Mungo is getting the old "silent treatment" from General Manager Larry MacPhail, but if the Brooklyn Dodgers' fireball hurler is sizzling under the collar about it he's keeping it to himself.

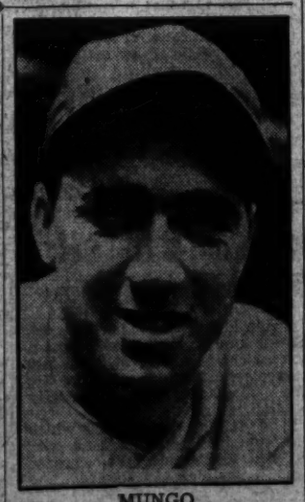
As far as MacPhail is concerned, Van Lingle is still in the well-known dog house. Mungo was fined and banished from the Dodgers' Havana training camp on charges of drinking and ordered to report to their Montreal farm club here.

MacPhail, here for a two-day check on his Montreal and Durham farm hands, indicated interest in how the big right-hander has shaped up since rejoining Macon. But he had nothing to say regarding the chances of Mungo rejoining Brooklyn and, especially, nothing to say of Mungo personally.

Nothing to Say

"No," said MacPhail, in an interview with Albert Gelders, Macon Telegraph sports editor, "I haven't anything to say to Van about that matter. You may say the situation remains status quo."

There has ben speculation that the Dodgers might pick up Mungo on the team's northward swing next month. MacPhail, however, declined to venture a suggestion the big hurler would return to the good graces even then.



MUNGO

For his part, Van Lingle continued to observe his vow that he would behave himself and keep quiet about the whole thing.

Trained down to pitching weight, Mungo tossed four innings of shut-out ball in practice last Saturday. He is scheduled to start for Montreal next Sunday when the Royals open an exhibition series against the Piedmont League's Durham Bulls.

$1,500,000 Only Block to N.J. Track

Trenton, N. J., March 25 (AP).—The New Jersey Racing Commission granted a provisional permit today to the New Jersey Jockey Club to run horse races with pari-mutuel betting at the Sea View Country Club near Absecon.

The permit was granted on condition the group show it had $1,500,000 cash on hand within 60 days.

A race meet from September 6 to October 18 was authorized.

Bennett E. Tousley, Atlantic City hotel man and a member of the board of directors of the club, was a prime mover for the permit.

Kiss for the 'Most Valuable'

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., March 25.—The sad side of spring training, as inexorable as sundown, will present itself this week. In 16 major league camps, dozens of kids and perhaps some fellows who are no longer kids will be taken aside and told that they have failed. They aren't going North with the club.

POVICH

We don't know how it's done in many of the other big league camps, but we can tell you that it's a gentle procedure with the Washington Club—this breaking of the news to the lads who couldn't make it. Manager Bucky Harris willingly steps out of the picture at this time. It's a messy sort of business that he prefers not to handle. He is one big league manager who gets a break in that respect. He has Clark Griffith to front for him.

The 71-year-old owner of the Nats has released 1,000 ball players in his time. For the past 40 years he has been manager or owner of some big league ball club and he knows how to let the blow fall tenderly; how to tell a boy in a round-about, paternal way that this sort of thing is no disgrace. He doesn't want to hurt anybody and he prefers to trust himself rather than Harris with the job.

We've seen him spend the afternoon with a disappointed rookie he has just ordered shipped to the minors. The lad, whose face fell when he first heard the news, feels a heap better for his talk with Griffith. The old gentleman knows how to brace them. He tells them of a hundred instances of ball players who were fired out of big league camps only to come back as big stars. He names names and fascinates them with their own possibilities and leaves them bright-eyed and determined to come back to the big leagues.

To the group of a dozen that Griffith will release this week, he'll tell them, one by one, the story of, no doubt, Al Evans. He'll tell them how Evans first came to a Washington training camp four years ago, probably the greenest rookie ever to be given a Nats' uniform. He couldn't hit, he didn't know where to stand in the catcher's box, and he didn't know even how to wear his uniform. And, he'll say, "Look at Evans now. That shows it can be done. Three years in the minors and he's ready. That's what minor league experience did for him. And that's what it will do for you. You've got that same chance. You'll learn more about baseball, and you'll come back to us a pretty good ball player, ready to earn a big league salary. I know you can do it. All I want you to do is try. How much determination have you got?"

That's when they buck up, and want to show they can take it. As we were saying, we don't know about how it's done in other big league camps, but with the Nats it's a nice, heart-to-heart procedure. There's nothing gruff about it. For the lads who take it hard, Griffith feels genuinely sorry. He couldn't be hard-boiled with 'em anyway. The old gentleman doesn't know how.

In big Jim Dean, Griffith has another ready example for the lads who are inclined to take their dismissals hard. To any among the group who will be released this week, he can point out Dean's case. The big right-hander came into the Nats' camp last spring after having won more games than Sid Hudson when they were pitching in the same Class D league in 1939. Hudson was kept by the Nats, Dean was released to Charlotte. At the time, Dean was very unhappy. He reckoned he should be given the same chance as Hudson.

But Griffith sent him back to Charlotte with a pep talk, and the promise to bring him back to the Nats' camp again. If Dean had any doubts at the time, they have vanished because here he is in the Nats' camp and now rated as perhaps the best young pitching prospect on the club. The experience he gained at Charlotte may have made him.

Jimmy Bloodworth was in and out of Washington camps for three years before he finally earned a big league uniform for keeps. Griffith will mention that to the lads who may be down-hearted. And Jimmy Vernon was sent back to the minors three times, but he has bounced back in the Nats camp this spring as the man who will probably play first base for the club this year.

Among the dozen who will learn from Griffith this week that they are not deemed good enough for the Nats, there will be lads who, of course, will never come back to the Washington camp or any big league camp, for that matter. They simply don't have it. But from Griffith will get the same kind treatment, the same pep talk. He wants to break no boy's heart. That is never done in the Nats' camp.

Little Potatoes on Wheels:

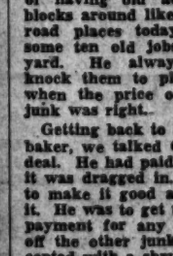
Washington, D. C.,
Dear Boss,

The Little Potatoes were growing up . . . on the way to becoming Idaho Potatoes. School closed for summer vacation and we figured we were getting too old for making wagons or kites and looked around for some action. I don't know who was first to get the idea, but we decided to go in the auto business. Several of the boys had helped their pops grind valves and remove carbon and they were rated experts.



HAIGHT

In the rear of the neighborhood junk shop, where we had sold old newspapers and bottles for years, was a 1910 Studebaker.

Kid Rust was getting in his licks and rigor mortis had set in on the four flat, pincher tires.

Old Moe, who owned the junk shop, was popular with the Little Potatoes, although the grown-ups said his place was "an eye sore." Old Moe could kick a boy with plenty of follow through as could be testified by several youngsters who "found" iron gratings in the rear of the shop, dragged them around front and tried to resell them.

Although he did not keep books, Old Moe seemed to know every item he had around that junk shop, and there was everything from inch pipe nipple to a section of railroad track. His business hadn't reached the stage of having old autos piled for blocks around like some of those road places today, but he had some ten old jobs in the backyard. He always planned to knock them to pieces some day when the price of that kind of junk was right.

Getting back to that old Studebaker, we talked Old Moe into a deal. He had paid $8 for it when it was dragged in. We promised to make it good as new and sell it. He was to get the first $8 plus payment for any parts we used off the other junk cars. He accepted with a shrug of his shoulders and a "What can I lose?"

We went to work. You would have thought we were getting $3 an hour. We took down the engine. We opened the rear end. We shined up the brass and found a rubber horn. We removed the wheels. We found the parts badly worn. These were replaced with parts from other cars.

Old Moe was right on the job checking on us. We never did figure how he knew what parts we had used, but he did and we couldn't argue with him.

One day the engine, rear end and wheel jobs were completed. The car had lost it's identity through the operation. If memory serves, it had a Cadillac second gear, Ford brakes, two Maxwell pistons and some Stanley Steamer parts that had been filed into serving the purpose.

I'll never forget the day, the engine started. For two afternoons of cranking got only three chugs out of the motor. Saturday morning we gave her a recheck and finally, after a lusty turn of the crank, the motor chugged uncertainly while we stood around puffing in unison. We rooted it right into action this time. She finally purred, or made a noise that sounded as sweet to us.

We had intended to paint the car and sew up the top, but there was no time for that now. We wanted to ride.

Old Moe, apparently as enthused as any of us, donated four old tires. We patched and we pumped and finally we had the car off the ground, as least for

Gene Sarazen to Play in British War Relief Match April 10

Chevy Chase Match Also Draws Wherle

Four-Ball Champion And Former Western Amateur King Add Names to Stellar List

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Gene Sarazen, who just two weeks ago added to his countless major golf triumphs over the past two decades by winning the International Four Ball Championship with Ben Hogan, will be here for the British War Relief benefit match on April 10.

L. B. Icely, president of the Wilson Sporting Goods Co., who contacted Gene on the match, wired the local committeemen yesterday that Sarazen would be delighted to attend and would be at Chevy Chase April 9, the day before the match for a practice round.

One of the country's outstanding amateur stars, Wilford Wehrie, of Racine, Wis., was also added to the list of sure starters yesterday. Wehrie was Sam Snead's winning partner in the St. Augustine $5,000 pro-amateur championship. He is also a former Western Amateur champion and ranks with Dick Chapman and Bud Ward as the three best simon-pures of today.

Icely's wire included a note that Johnny Farrell, still one of the most colorful golf professional many years after his Open championship victory, may also be one of the stars to attend.

Lawson Little May Appear

In addition to Sarazen, the foursome lined up by Spalding's includes the tee shot and putting green artists, Jimmy Thomson and Horton Smith, respectively; George Dawson, semifinalist in the National Amateur last year, and Congressional's Wiffy Cox.

National Open Champion Lawson Little, who was not sure he could make it when contacted last week in Pinehurst, is on the possible list as is Walter Hagen.

In any event with big time professionals Sarazen, Thomson and Smith already definite starters in addition to amateurs Dawson and Wehrle, plus the local talent and at least three or four more top professionals the one-day event is assured of playing to one of the classiest fields ever assembled here.

Snead, Guldahl Out

Meanwhile tickets are being distributed among the various Scottish clans, prominent society women and embassy officials and the various country clubs.

Robert Stead, jr., golf committee chairman of the host Chevy Chase Club, has been assured that at least three more prominent pros will be added to the list while Allan Burton, George Faulds and Russ Hollebaugh, members of the committee, are all busy with final details.

The wire of Sarazen's acceptance included news that Sammy Snead and Ralph Guldahl would not be able to participate, due to previous appointments.

Chevy Chase Pro Bob Barnett will leave his winter position at Indian Creek, Fla., by plane April 8 in order to be on hand for the match.

Six Sandlot Leagues Now In NABF

This vicinity's entry in the National Amateur Baseball Federation was boosted to six leagues last night when the Commercial League, after a meeting, was organized and indicated its desire to seek the local federation crown and the national title in the Youngstown, Ohio, tournament in September.

Operated by Vic Gauzza, veteran of the Washington sandlots, the Commercial League will enter play with six strong teams ready to furnish competition. They will probably be Miller Furniture, Hot Shoppes, Yellow Cab and Perry's Restaurant and two others. Candidates for the berths should apply to Gauzza immediately.

A get-together to iron out all details before the season starts has been arranged by Gauzza for next Monday at the Atlas Sports Shop, 927 D Street Northwest, at 8 p. m.

The five other leagues in the District of Columbia chapter of the federation will be the Washington Post-Industrial League, the Times-Herald Government, the Times-Herald Militia, the Departmental and the United States Government.

Schoolboy Golfers Open Play April 4

The annual battle for the public and private school golf championships will begin April 4 with 14 six-man teams participating for the Dawes Cup and Metropolitan League trophies, respectively.

The schedule begins with two matches on the opening date and continues through May 20. The individual championship will follow for The Washington Post trophy, qualifying at Kenwood, May 23, first and second rounds of match play May 24 at Manor and the semi-finals and finals at Congressional May 25.

The same schools will compete in the public school section, won by Woodrow Wilson last year, but St. Alban's replaces Rockville in the private and surburban play, won last year by Georgetown Prep.

Earle Skinker, a member of the winning Wilson team last year and individual champion will play for the dark horse Devitt sextet this season. Georgetown Prep will have another strong club while Roosevelt has the best club on paper in the Dawes Cup competition.

District Golf Association President Dr. Paul Stewart secured the private courses and announced the schedule. Frank Emmet, schoolboy golf's original booster, and R. G. Vanderlip, of Coolidge High, drew up the matches.

73 St. John's Players Begin Spring Football Practice

Coach Augusterfer Not Optimistic About Next Season; Backfield Should Be Strong

It's been a hard, cold winter for athletic representatives of St. John's High, what with a basketball team that could win only 9 out of 30 games, so there was considerable relief in all quarters yesterday as spring football drills started in the shadow of the Lincoln Memorial.

A motley crowd of 73 youthful candidates, ranging in size from huge to diminutive and in experience from none to three years, turned out for the workout. The simplest calisthenics and a bitter wind marked proceedings, presided over by Coach Gene Augusterfer.

And after the last frigid youngster had been loaded into the homebound bus, the consensus of opinion among Coach "Gus" and his assistants was that the grid outlook for 1941 is not quite black. That is, if enough linemen can be mustered from a group of untested hopefuls.

Last year's backfield, including Buddy Spiess, Harold Krug, Billy Brogan, Tom Chisari, and Steve Burns, is back intact. The ends, too, will provide no headaches with Paddy McCarthy and Bob Collins in uniform. But right now the middle of the Johnnie line is as doubtful as next week's map of Europe. "Punchy" Willson, Bob Davis and Joe Hanson are the only huskies returning who boast any experience, and theirs isn't exactly lengthy.

Two weeks of spring drill will be held before the layoff for summer vacation. Shortly before school starts again the real practice session will be staged at Colonial Beach, and all efforts from then on will be bent toward "beating Gonzaga" in the Catholic school feature of Washington.

Milo Steinborn Booked for Mat Match

Milo Steinborn, the reformed Memphis blacksmith, who has been amazing Turner's Arena wrestling fans with his tremendous strength, will return tomorrow night for a 30-minute brawl with Tommy Marvin, the Oklahoma Indian, otherwise known as Chief White Feather.

They will grapple in supporting of the headliner between Mildred Burke, the recognized world's feminine champion, and Patsy Miller, the Nevada cowgirl.

In what is a sort of a cofeature, Joe Cox, the Kansas Krasher, will tackle Lou Plummer, the Baltimore villain. This will be a return battle between these behemoths.

Fred (Legs) Grobmier, who has been winning his matches with monotonous regularity, will face Joe DeValteau, French refugee, while in the semiwindup Pierre DeGlane, French Canadian star, will engage Warren (Flash) Bockwinkle.

'Ripper' Gets Himself Signed In Majors Again

"RIP" COLLINS

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, March 25.—Strange indeed are the quirks of a baseball player's ego.

Take the case of James (The Ripper) Collins.

Two years ago the Chicago Cubs sold Rip "down the river" to Los Angeles. That hurt his pride but not his pocketbook. If Collins wasn't the highest-paid minor league player someone else was drawing more than $1,100 a month, and salaries like that are high for two or three major league clubs.

Rip decided he'd blast his way back up. In 1939 he hit Pacific Coast League pitching for a .334 average, led the circuit in home runs with 26 and in runs batted in with 128. Still, the majors didn't want him. Last season he batted .325 and drove in 111 runs.

Until yesterday Rip seemed destined to go on powdering minor league pitching, and at a cut in salary. Los Angeles offered him $800 a month, Rip became his own agent and persuaded Frankie Frisch of the Pittsburgh Pirates to buy him for $5,000.

The Pirates have a capable first baseman in Elbie Fletcher, but he has a trick knee. Collins' eloquence convinced Owner Bill Benswanger that $5,000 was a small price to pay for insurance on Fletcher's services. Collins may never play first base for the Pirates, and while his salary terms were not disclosed it isn't likely he'll be getting $1,100 a month.

If the Ripper finishes the 1941 season in the majors he'll be a ten-year man, and then he can make a deal for his services. He thinks that if the Pirates don't want him somebody else will.

Conn Lists 3 Louis' Weaknesses, Confident of Winning Title

Challenger Says Champion Knocks Down Very Easily

By the Associated Press

Chicago, March 25.—Pity poor old Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis. Billy Conn says he:

(1) Blinks his eyes at a left feint.
(2) Marks up very easy.
(3) Knocks down very easy.

Of course, Conn's appraisal of the world heavyweight titleholder may be slightly prejudiced. Billy has a date next June with Louis, after which, this good looking, 23-year-old light-heavyweight will tell you very convincingly, Mr. Louis will be just another ex-champion. But to get back to Louis' weaknesses—

"I'm going to box him," said Billy, who arrived today to open training for his April 4 match at the stadium with Gunnar Barlund. "I'll feint with my left, for every time I've seen Joe, a left feint makes him step back and blink his eyes before he can get set again.

"If I can hit him I think I can knock him out. Anyway, he marks up easy. Didn't he get a bad eye from that Abe Simon? And the guys who hit him—Galento and Braddock—showed he knocks down pretty easy. Trouble is, most of the guys he's fought were scared stiff. They thought just because it was Louis who hit them, they had to go down. If that guy Simon could get to the thirteenth round, I'm a cinch."

Conn, who weighed in at 181 for his last match, isn't worrying about all those cracks that he is "too small for Louis." Nor is this boyish-looking battler concerned at all over the fact he'll be spotting Barlund a 20-pound weight advantage.

Conn's manager, Johnny Ray, has shown a little more concern and is insisting the April 4 bout be for 15 rounds intead of the 10-round limit sought by the veteran Finn. This point will be settled tomorrow.

Meanwhile, Billy says he's more worried over something happening to Louis before he can teach him a lesson next June. After about a half-hour visit with this reserved young man, one heads for the closest dictionary to find that while Webster has a word for it, he spelled it whong.

It should have been "Connfidence."

Bob Althaus Tops Bethesda Pin League

The Bethesda - Chevy Chase Church League at Henry Hiser's Bethesda drives was sparked by Bob Althaus, Christ Lutheran, with 146 and 377 top counts which, with Don Campbell's 358, helped their team to high counts of 543 and 1,563. The league leading Mt. Zion Baptist boys lost all three to Chevy Chase Methodist and now are tied for first place with Bethesda Presbyterian, who took the odd game from Bethesda First Baptist.

Russ Hopkins, Amoco, had high game of 144 in the Diamond Cab League at Brookland Recreation while Bill Gwinn, Hotels, took the set after a 355 pinfall. Northeast won high team game with 557 while 1,622 pins took set honors for Shoreham. The Restaurant team leads the league.

The Georgetown Commercial League at Ed Schlegel's drives was led by Jim Cavanaugh, Old Home Cafe, who rolled 157 for high game which featured five strikes, with both marks and pinfall identical with last week's performance. High-average man Sam Benson took set honors with his 395 and boosted his Hillows quintet to team highs of 601 and 1,757. Benson's mark jumped to 122.16 with his last night's effort. Hillows took all three from C. B. Long to go out in front over Thompson Welding by three games and now has 56 won and 22 lost.

Rosemary Stull, National Ale team and official scorer for the Maryland-D. C. Ladies League at Silver Spring, led for high game with a nice 134 count, although Herma Reid, Howard Hairdressers, took the set with 378. Gifford Ice Cream and National Ale divided team honors with 570 and 1,612, respectively. The Beebees, Howard Hairdressers and Shaffer Flower Shop girls, took all three from Bergmann's Laundry, Sandford's, Inc., and Corr's Sport Shop, respectively. Bergmann's won the championship with Shaffer Flower next.

H. Black, Southern, had high game of 145 in the Electrical League at Takoma Recreation with two men, H. Cleary, E. B. Adams, and "Fiddles" Holland, Redmon & Brown, tying for top individual set with 398 each. The Cameo quintet was best on the drives as a team, taking game and set with 606 and 1,764, respectively, and three games from E. B. Adams as well to go out in front by six contests. Western Electric is the runnerup.

Bordie Munson, Cohen Brothers Jewelers, led the Arlington Commercial League at Tom Murray's Arlington Bowling Center with top counts of 141-378 to spark his team to a record set of 1,743 and a sweep over Martin's Men's Shop as well.

Art Hawkes, Monroe, and Andy Landrus, Underwood-Elliott-Fisher, led the Office Appliance League at the Ice Palace with a 145 game and 375 set, respectively, with the latter's count making it possible for his team to take highs after pinfalls of 632 and 1,707. A. B. Dick, U.-E.-F., I. B. M. No. 1 and Remington-Rand won all three from I. B. M. No. 2, Royal No. 1, Procurement and Dictaphone, respectively. I. B. M. No. 2 and Royal No. 1 top the league with 51-27 each with A. B. Dick just two games behind.

The four-man team Boy Scouts League at Northeast Temple was led by Winter, Suckers, with 140 for top game and Pettis, Travelers, who rolled a 391 top net. The Travelers took team highs after pinfalls of 462 and 1,339, the former mark tying the season record for team game. The Suckers are seven games ahead.

4 Favorites Advance in North-South

By the United Press

Pinehurst, N. C., March 25.—Four tournament favorites, including defending Champion Estelle Lawson Page and Medalist Elizabeth Hicks, came through with first-round victories today as match play began in the annual North and South Women's championship at Pinehurst Country Club.

In the day's most thrilling match 17-year-old Jeanne Cline, of Bloomington, Ill., defeated the veteran Jean Bauer, Providence, R. I., on the twenty-first green.

Miss Hicks eliminated Mrs. T. E. Schulderberg, of Baltimore, 5 and 3, and Mrs. Page defeated Mrs. R. S. Patton, West Hartford, Conn., 5 and 3.

Young Dorothy Kirby, of Atlanta, Ga., another favorite, was carried to the seventeenth green before she defeated Georgia Tainter, youthful Fargo, N. Dak., star.

Louise Suggs, 17-year-old Lithia Springs, Ga., entrant, won out over Deborah Verry, Worcester, Mass., in 20 holes.

Arlington Five Easily Beats Ballards, 40-18

Twelve games marked the continuation of D. C. Recreation Department Basketball League play last night, the most one-sided triumph being turned in at Central gym, where the Arlington Macabees smashed Ballards, 40-18. In other clashes at the same site Call Radio defeated Bowie Thorobreds, 24-20, and Maryland Park nosed out P. O. Mailing by 36-30.

At Roosevelt the Barons had little trouble with Population, winning by 37-21; Agriculture swamped Geography, 37-16; Shannon and Luchs beat Royal Typewriters, 37-35, and A. G. O. turned back F. D. I. C., 23-16. In two games at Eastern the Census Farmers defeated Eckington, 35-20, and the Census Ranchers beat the Ramblers, 32-28. Action at Tech saw Sons of Pericles nose out Bliss Electric, 29-27, Washington Boys Club trounced Justice, 30-17, and Book Section smash Club "40," 28-16.

A. A. U. Lists Closing Dates

Entry deadlines for both the Y. M. C. A. handball championships and the D. C. A. A. U. squash racquets championships were announced yesterday by Ralph W. Foster, director of physical education at the "Y." The first will be at 6 p. m. next Monday for the event which will be held April 2-12, and the second will be 2 p. m. April 4 for the event April 7-12.

Gustave Goldstein, winner of last year's title in the handball tourney, will not defend his crown in Class A, but other class winners in action will be Alex Kardos, George Young and James Madden.

There was no squash racquets tourney last year, but John Pratt, who won the 1939 championship, will probably be in competition this year.

Virginia Tech Nine Wins Opener, 13-3

Blacksburg, Va., March 25 (AP).—Virginia Tech's baseball team opened its 1941 schedule with a 13 to 3 victory over Drexel Institute, of Philadelphia, here today.

Recreation Badminton Meet Opens Tomorrw

The Department of Recreation's second annual badminton tournament will be held at Banneker Recreation Center tomorrow night and Friday beginning at 6 p. m. each night. Recreation areas throughout the city have been staging elimination tournaments for some time to decide on their representatives. Events will include men's and women's singles and doubles and mixed doubles.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Fort Myers, Fla., March 25.—Fort Myer, Va., is a militaristic nerve center of the U. S. Cavalry. But at Fort Myers, Fla., peace reigneth supreme. Doves bearing olive branches have replaced the angry squawks of the nearby gulls. The skies may sometimes be cloudy all day, but seldom is heard a discouraging word around Fort Myers, Fla.

CONSIDINE

For at Fort Myers, Fla., the 1941 Cleveland Indians are training. The celebrated insurrectionists of 1940 all have been measured for halos. Gentle Roger Peckinpaugh, the new boss, has a kind word to say to them, day and night. There isn't a frazzled nerve in camp. The days of their ultimatums against the management seem remote indeed in this peaceful spot. The only cloud on their horizon, if it is a cloud, is that about 70 per cent of the baseball experts have picked them to win the 1941 American League pennant. That puts them on the spot. If they finish a flashy second they'll be called quittin' bums again.

But a visit to their training tepee doesn't indicate any worry—or grief—or dissension—or any of the other traditional complaints of this often distressed ball club. If Roger Peckinpaugh does nothing further as manager of the club, he has pacified it. The pacification may have come a trifle late. If it had come last August, under Oscar Vitt, the Indians would have won that A. L. pennant by ten games, instead of losing it to Detroit by a couple of contests.

"I don't want to talk about Vitt," the black-browed, leather-skinned Peck told us, "but from what I can gather from these fellows they sincerely disliked Ossie. They must have, because ball players never hold grudges against the manager very long. Sure, they have an occasional flare-up, but it's quickly forgotten. These fellows didn't forget. They must have had something on their side. I know ball players. A ball player will lean over backwards to keep from being called a clubhouse lawyer, or get a rep as an underminer. Anyway . . . all that's gone and past. I never mention it to them and they never mention it to me. I've got a fine bunch of boys on this team. They're working hard for me, they're full of hustle, and I think thy're going to stay that way."

Peck's reappointment as manager of the Indians (he was their keeper from 1928 through part of 1933) was well received in Cleveland. The Cleveland baseball writers, who have been known to garrot more than one manager, are all for him—as of 11:59 p. m. (E. S. T.) March 25. The fans expressed pleasure, too, even though there was much baring of fangs at Peck before he got the heave-o in midseason of 1933. Peck lays this change of heart to his occupation since then.

For the past four or five years he has been a part of that American League promotion department, and has shown the American League films at nearly every club, fraternal organization, school and college within an 80-mile radius of Cleveland. He built up a lot of good will, and let's hope he keeps it, for he is a fine fellow. As for his club's chances:

It is generally overlooked that Cleveland had only one .300 hitter last season. He was Roy Weatherly, who got one nostril above that level or to .303. But Peck envisions more power this year. He picked up Gerry Walker from Washington, for one. "And a fellow like Ken Keltner is going to hit more than .254, and Rollie Hemsley's a better hitter than that .267 he hit last year," he said. "Anyway, that's our chief problem—hitting.

"If we don't hit it won't be for lack of trying. We didn't hit much yesterday in an exhibition game, and every fellow on the team voluntarily came out here early this morning to take batting practice. I think it was just an unlucky slump last season, more than anything else.

"Some of the boys might have been upset by things that went on with Vitt, but I kinda doubt it. I've never seen a ball player yet who thought of anything else except getting a hit when he was up there at that plate."

Peck has the best second base combination in baseball in Lou Boudreau and Roy Mack—in fact has strong men at every position. But in the pitching department he really has sheer elegance. Much of this is vested in Bobby Feller, but Peck is high on Al Milnar and Al Smith, and says that Mel Harder (only man left from his earlier regime as manager) is throwing better than he has thrown for three years.

He likes Jim Bagby a lot and believes he might have pulled the wool over old Fox Griffith's eyes by acquiring Joe Krakauskas. But Feller, of course, is his ace. When he mentions the great kid's name the contented look of a man with money in the bank comes into Peck's eyes. Unlike Vitt, Peck won't say Feller is going to win 20 or 25 or 30. "All I'll say is that he'll pitch for me," he says contentedly.

So Cleveland has peace, pitching and more power. We're convinced that this is finally the year it will win.

Gus Suhr Is Traded To Milwaukee Brewers

Macon, Ga., March 25 (AP).—Hector H. Racine, president of the Montreal Baseball Club, announced today the consummation of a player deal with the Milwaukee club of the American Association by which Montreal secures the services of Claude Corbitt, star shortstop of the American Association club. In exchange for Corbitt Montreal gives Milwaukee two players outright—First Baseman Gus Suhr and Out-Outfielder Arnold Moser, and also options to Milwaukee for the 1941 season, Pitcher Ray Roche.

Bosox Sign Keenan, Hopewell Hurling Ace

Hopewell, Va., March 25 (AP).—Ray Keenan, former Hopewell High School pitching star, has signed a contract with the Boston Red Sox and will report to Bennettsville, S. C., for spring training with the Scranton, Pa., club of the Class A Eastern League.

German Bikers Lead

Buffalo, N. Y., March 25 (AP).—Gustav Killian and Heintz Vopel, Germany, regained their point advantage today, although tied by three other teams after 1,414 miles in Buffalo's eleventh international six-day bicycle race.

Lee Taylor Rides Victor, $31.90 Shot

Winner Is Given A Powerful Ride; Favored Requested Big Disappointment

By the Associated Press

Tropical Park, Fla., March 25.—Walter Lee Taylor, who lost the 1940 riding championship to the late Earl Dew by a whisker and then rested up for an extended period, today rode his first winner since the turn of the new season. He drove W. F. Mannagh's lightly backed Ration to a photo victory in the Oleanders Purse, 4-furlong feature of the card. The Houston lad had to put up a powerful ride to get the dark bay daughter of Hard Tack home a head before Mrs. Warren Kaine's Single, an aptly named son of the Good Stakes winner, Only One.

F. J. Buchanan's Quick Conquest was third in the field of nine 2-year-olds, three lengths away. B. F. Whitaker's Requested, the 6-to-5 choice, never could improve over seventh position in a very disappointing performance. Ration paid $31.90 for $2 and skipped past the wire in 0:47 2-5.

The winner, Quick Conquest and Counimein are eligible for the $2,000 Viscaya Stakes, a test for 2-year-old fillies slated for Saturday.

Taylor, who was riding in almost every race on the programs during the closing days of 1940, has had comparatively few mounts of late. However, he was up to the stiff task assigned him astride Ration. The Texas youngster hustled the filly to the front in short order. His mount never could get clear. Single went right along with the eventual winner. It was nip and tuck all the way home, with Ration gamely clinging to her very small advantage. Quick Conquest always held down the show position.

Kearns to Promote Ambulance Show Here

Ball Park To Be Scene Of Big Show

Championship Bout Planned for British War Relief; Dempsey To Appear on Card

Jack Kearns and his carnival of fight champions, former champions and would-be champions will make Washington a June 2 stop on their Nation-wide tour in the interest of the British-American Ambulance Corps Relief.

Kearns, the former manager of Jack Dempsey, who helped create the $1,000,000 gate with the late Tex Rickard, will promote a big-time boxing show at Griffith Stadium in conjunction with Promoter Joe Turner and Matchmaker Gabe Menendez.

Battleground

Thus Washington will become the temporary battleground of boxing's most influential promoters—Mike Jacobs, the czar of the New York fight industry, and Kearns, whose attempts to usurp Jacob's fight monopoly so far have proved unsuccessful.

Kearns, however, plans to promote a championship battle featuring the current light heavyweight champion, Anton Christoforidis, against Red Burman or Gus Lesnevich or Mello Bettina.

Dempsey's old-time manager has a contract with William V. C. Buxton, president of the British-American Ambulance Corps Relief, giving him exclusive right to promote fights throughout the Nation, with the Ambulance Corps sharing in the proceeds. The first of these fights was staged recently in Miami and the second was last night in Tampa.

Blum, King Arrive

Carl Blum and John King, both of Newark, N. J., arrived in town last night as Kearns' advance agents and will set up local offices. For the next two months they will set about establishing local committees composed of leading public citizens who will act as unofficial sponsors of the war relief show.

As added attractions, Kearns plans exhibition bouts between Benny Leonard and Lou Tendler, Slapsie Maxie Rosenbloom and King Levinski, Jack Dempsey, who has patched up his old disagreement with Kearns; Johnny Risko, Tom Hennay and Jack Britton will appear on the program as guest referees.

22 Baseball Games Listed For Briarley

Special Dispatch to The Post

Ammendale, Md., March 25.—Faced by a long and strenuous schedule of 22 games, Briarley Military Academy's baseball team has been undergoing daily workouts here under the guidance of Coach Lodge. First game of the season will be with National Training School on April 1.

With the squad already cut to 18, prospects appear bright for the season. Eight lettermen are in the group, and the ten newcomers have indicated they will capably fill the shoes of players lost by graduation.

Veterans on the squad include Capt. Charley Hodgkin, third; Ingberg, centerfield; "Winnie" Lodge, catcher; Stitt, second; Meyers, leftfield; Enloe, first; Insley, utility, and Reed, short. Filling out the team will be such fine candidates as Russ Cordua, Jay Foote, Jack Dove, Ken Hawkins, Jack Cissell, Jack Pritchard, Bob Sullivan, Clark Snyder, Bill Boise and Calvin Cuvall.

SCHEDULE

April 1, National Training School, home; 3, Herndon High School, home; 8, Sherwood High School, away; 15, Coolidge High School, home; 18, Gonzaga High School, home; 21, Charlotte Hall, home; 23, Blair High School, home; 29, Rockville High School, home; 30, Western High School, home; 29, Devitt, home.

May 2, Coolidge High School, away; 6, Glenburnie High School, away; 8, Roosevelt High School, home; 9, Sherwood High School, home; 13, Devitt, away; 16, Charlotte Hall, away; 20, Glenburnie High School, home; 23, Rockville High School, away; 26, Blair High School, away; 31, National Training School, away.

June 3, Fairfax High School, away; 7, Alumni, home.

Basket Coaches Elect Norgren

New York, March 25 (AP).—Nels Norgren, of the University of Chicago, today was elected president of the National Association of Basketball Coaches, at the organization's annual meeting. He succeeds Nat Holman, of City College of New York.

Other officers elected were: First vice president, Ed Kelleher, Fordham; second vice president, Ed Hickox, Springfield (Mass.); third vice president, W. H. Browne, Nebraska; secretary-treasurer, Marsh Diebold, Carleton (Minn.)

International Boxer Champion Is Dead

Milwaukee, March 25 (AP).—Dorian von Marienhof, international champion Boxer, is dead.

Jack Wagner, Milwaukee taxi cab company executive, paid $4,200 for the dog when he imported it from Germany in 1935. The importation established a new breed in this country and made the dog one of the most famous in the land.

Before being retired to stud here the champion was adjudged best dog in show 22 times and best of breed 50 times.

Richmond U. Crew Winner in Florida

Winter Park, Fla., March 25 (AP). Springfield (Mass.) University defeated an improved Richmond University varsity crew here today by 2 lengths on the Lake Maitland course.

Springfield's boat rowed the distance in 5:18 2/5. Richmond was a different crew this afternoon than the one Rollins beat by 5 lengths yesterday. Springfield's weight advantage made the margin of victory.

Rollins and Springfield race Thursday afternoon over the same course.

The Mauler and Old Manager Pals Now

Jack Dempsey (right) tells his old manager, Jack Kearns, the latest one about the traveling salesman just by way of proving there's no more hard feeling between them. Kearns will bring a big-time boxing show to Washington June 2 for the British-American Ambulance Corps Relief, and Dempsey is expected to appear on the program as a referee

Miracle Age: Galento's in Hard Training

To allay any fears that Tony Galento is training for his 10-round fight with Buddy Baer at Uline April 8 by tending bar in his Orange, N. J., tavern, Promoter Ray Alvis yesterday proudly announced that Two Ton has taken up quarters in Mme. Bey's camp and is doing serious labor—believe it or not.

Tony, who now weighs a mere 246, plans to train down to 235 for the Baer fight, Alvis said he was informed by Harry Mendel, who's playing nursemaid to the fun-loving Tony at Mme. Bey's.

"All of Tony's old scars are healed and he has all the confidence he ever had, and he has quieted down a little bit—but not too much," Mendel hastened to add.

The New Jersey tavern keeper is working daily with a couple of sparring partners built on the gigantic proportions of Maxie Baer's younger brother, Buddy—namely Ripper Schenck and Steve Colucci. Buddy's stock was boosted no end when Abe Simon lasted 13 rounds with Joe Louis. Buddy knocked out Abe in three rounds, and he stands a good chance of meeting Louis if he beats Galento.

Ken Overlin, Soose Fight May 23

By the Associated Press

New York, March 25.—Promoter Mike Jacobs rolled up his sleeves today and came up with some boxing action in divisions ranging from the heavyweights right down to the lightweights.

First he announced a middleweight championship match between Ken Overlin, the titleholder, and Billy Soose, the Farrell (Pa.) "Fancy Dan," for Madison Square Garden May 23. This will be over the usual 15-round title route. In signing, Soose agreed that if he dethrones Overlin he will take on either Overlin or Georgie Abrams within 90 days thereafter. Both Overlin and Abrams are managed by Chris Dundee, and Abrams already holds a decision over Soose. Overlin now is recognized as champion in New York, California and several other spots.

Greek Benefit Fight

Then Mike turned to the lightheavyweights and announced a 15-rounder between Anton Christoforidis, of Greece, the National Boxing Association's titleholder, and Gus Lesnevich, of Cliffside, N. J., in Madison Square Garden June 12. This tussle will be for the benefit of the embattled Greeks. The winner will take on Jimmy Webb, of Houston, Texas, some time later to decide who shall be recognized as world light-heavyweight champion in New York. Billy Conn is the current titleholder, but since he is to fight Joe Louis for the heavyweight crown in June, he has agreed to give up the 175-pound throne on request.

Finally, Promotor Jacobs switched a couple of already scheduled May days in the Garden for convenience sake. He moved the Joe Louis-Abe Simon rematch up from May 16 to May 9 and pushed the lightweight leather-tossing between Champion Lew Jenkins and Philadelphia's Bob Montgamery back from the ninth to the sixteenth. This will leave more time between Louis' outings against Simon and Conn, and will give Jenkins an extra week for his cut eye to heal.

Wolverine Grid Aid Named Head Coach

Rapid City, S. Dak., March 25 (U.P.). David A. Strong, 24-year-old assistant football coach at the University of Michigan, was signed today as head coach at the South Dakota State School of Mines, President Joseph P. Connolly announced.

Strong starred at Helena, Mont., High School; lettered one year at the University of Illinois and two years at the University of Michigan. He succeeds H. A. Sullivan, who resigned.

Mabel McEwan Takes Second Rifle Honors

Dropping only 6 points out of a possible 500, Mabel McEwan, of George Washington University, took second honors in the 1941 National Women's Individual Match, sponsored by the National Rifle Association and open to all the feminine sharpshooters of the Nation's colleges and universities. The District co-ed finished two points behind June Newcomer, of Beaver College, near Philadelphia, who totaled 496 for the 50-shot event, it was disclosed in a bulletin released at N. R. A. headquarters.

Miss McEwan's 494 total, however, was not the only medal-winning score turned in by a local college girl. Three others, two from George Washington and, one from Maryland, turned in totals that landed them places in the first ten. In a close race for third place, Emma Shelton, of Maryland, and Margaret Kinsman, of G. W., both fired 493 scores. The tie, however, was broken in favor of Miss Shelton who took third place award while Miss Kinsman had to content herself with fourth. The other local winner was Shirley Schafer, of G. W., whose 487 netted her ninth place.

The annual tournament is held under N. R. A. postal rules and is fired indoors on a standard 50-foot course.

Cocoa to Meet Andre Jesserun Here Monday

Louis Kid Cocoa, listed by the National Boxing Association as one of the top-ranking welterweights, will fight Andres Jessurun, veteran ring campaigner from New York, Monday night at Turner's Arena.

Cocoa, who drew some $18,000 in three fights last summer at Griffith Stadium, is of the scientific school and doesn't have much punch, but his stylish workmanship caught the fancy of Washington fans.

He defeated Wild Bill McDowell in the first mixed match in the District, came back to beat Phil Furr and then returned to lose a close decision to Georgie Abrams in one of the best fights of the year in the Capital.

The Cocoa-Jesserun meeting will be nothing new. Cocoa, the 28-year-old Puerto Rican colored fighter, lost a ten-round decision to Jessurun in 1937, but came back the next year in Baltimore to knock out Andre in 11 rounds. Jessurun was idle for a long period of time, but has started a comeback.

State Officials To Greet Chilean Skiiers Here Today

A sextet of Chilean ski experts will arrive in Washington today at 4:45 p. m. at Union Station where they will be welcomed by a delegation from the State Department.

The skiers, members of the Chilean ski team which has been touring the United States for the past two months, will be feted at a party tonight from 6 to 7:30 p. m. at the Chilean Embassy by the Ambassador and Senora de Michels. They will be guests of the Washington Ski Club tomorrow at 12:30 p. m. at a luncheon in the National Press Club.

Court Tournament At Silver Spring

Special Dispatch to The Post

Sandy Spring, Md., March 25.—The third annual amateur basketball tournament of the Sandy Spring Athletic Association will be held Friday and Saturday of this week, it was announced last night. Four games will be held the first night and three the second.

In the first game Friday at 7:30 Reisterstown A. C. faces Sherwood High. Other clashes see Calvary Eagles meet Maryland Whizzes, Sandy Spring tangles with Damascus A. C. and Maritime Commission engage Adjutant General's Office.

Bill Ackerman On Fishing

Any fishing jaunt affords considerable pleasure. Ours usually has three phases—the time during which we look toward it, the actual enjoyment of long days in the open, and finally, in retrospect.

ACKERMAN

We are starting the finale now. Little worries that loomed large at the time are forgotten and the pleasant things hold the spotlight.

How can one remember days when the wind blew to hard to fish, that Sunday bonefishing off Shell Key with Erl and Maybell Roman to recall, or the long drive down the Overseas Highway when we can think of the way big yellowtails wrecked our cotton thread.

No matter what heavy skies put off until next year several days at Bimini and Cat Cay with Larry Richey on the Lev-Lou, the three days we had in the sailfish schools off Stuart with Lev and Lou Raymond are memories to be retained forever. And the day bottom-fishing in Norris Cut was every bit as enjoyable as a run down Hawk Channel would have been had the water been clear.

Unthinking anglers hogging the bridge roadways to the point where driving was dangerous (for them) was but a faint recollection when we relive the two days at Plantation Key Fishing Camp and the many new friends it brought us.

There is something about angling friends that make them wear well. An off day cannot be considered lost when you can spend part of it chewing the fishing fat with Tommy Aitken, or with Don McCarthy (and a Cuba Libre) at the Rod and Reel Club.

Particularly notable, the meeting of the Rod and Reel Club at which Hans Heinrichs told of his Chilean marlin-fishing trip, and the catch of the first striped marlin to be made on the South American coast, and Capt. Doug Osborn's recounting the catching of the giant squid in the Humbolt Current at Capa Blanca.

We count best, of our Florida fishing trips, meeting those Rod and Reelers, for we have always considered it the finest organization of anglers in the world, in a smaller measure, those daily luncheons at Walgrens, in downtown Miami, where, sooner or later, one meets everyone interested in angling, no mater from where he comes.

An idea we tried to put across here two years ago, but which will never reach the popularity these mid-day gatherings have at Walgrens, for anglers coming to Washington seem to have other things to think about.

New additions to the gang always try to "treat" the crowd, but soon learn these get-to-gethers are dutch. In fact, it is the one unwriten rule, and those who break it are never asked back.

Fishes and fishing is the usual topic, and often, it is from these meetings that springs plans, for the welfare of the one and the betterment of the other. We could like to see anglers here do likewise, for through such meetings there would grow priceless friendships—a part of angling that is just as big a part as the actual fishing.

Sphas, Bruins Play Tonight At Turner's

The world champion Philadelphia Sphas, of the American Basketball League, will come to town tonight for a professional engagement with the Washington Bruins, colored five, at Turner's Arena.

The Bruins and the Sphas will take the floor at 9 p. m., and college rules will be used.

Against the Philadelphians' all-star cast, the Bruins will throw such court artists as Tarzan Cooper, Soupy Campbell and Wilmeth Sidat-Singh—all of whom provided many anxious moments for the Sphas when that trio played with the Original New York Renaissance Club.

Included in the Sphas' line-up are Petey Rosenberg, Inky Lautman, Shikey Gotthofer, Irv Torgoff and Howard Rosan. Pat Kennedy, who has gained great popularity as a referee, is being sought for tonight's game. The Urams and the Royal A. C. meet in a preliminary for the District colored independent championship, sponsored by the Community Center.

All Favorites Enter Finals In Badminton

Favorites in every case found their way into the finals last night as the D. C. Badminton Tournament continued at Kensington Armory.

Charlotte Decker, seeking the women's title left vacant by Kay Baker, earned a meeting tonight with Polly Thompson in the finals by ousting Francis Rowan, 11—1, 11—7. Miss Thompson needed three sets by finally defeating Margaret Graham, 5—11, 11—1, 11—5.

Joe Baker, defending champion in the men's division, retained a good chance of keeping his share of the championships in both singles, men's doubles and mixed doubles. After a 15—3, 15—3 beating of Bill Rainey last night, he will face Shep Holt, who defeated Scott Pollock in the semifinals, 15—11, 15—9.

LAST NIGHT'S RESULTS

Women's singles—Charlotte Decker defeated Francis Rowan, 11—7, 11—7; Polly Thompson defeated Margaret Graham, 5—11, 11—1, 11—5.

Men's singles—Joe Baker defeated Bill Rainey, 15—3, 15—3; Shep Holt defeated Scott Pollock, 15—11, 15—9.

Women's doubles—Decker-Thompson defeated Catlett-Ryan, 15—3, 15—6; Rowan-Wilson defeated Norment-Willoughby, 15—8, 15—7.

Men's doubles—Baker-Mackell defeated Faulkner-Turinton, 15—4, 15—3; Edwards-Whitcomb defeated Wilkinson-Sparrow, 15—9, 15—7.

Mixed doubles—Baker-Thompson defeated Faulkner-Graham, 15—4, 15—4; Mackell-Decker defeated Edwards-Edwards, 15—11, 15—7.

Consolation women's singles—Sanabeck defeated Yobst, 11—1, 11—3; Pope defeated Kidwell, default.

Consolation men's singles—Wilkinson defeated Pierce, 12—15, 15—8, 15—12; O'Donoghue defeated Fuss, default.

TONIGHT'S SCHEDULE (FINALS)

9 p. m., women's doubles—Decker-Thompson vs. Rowan-Wilson.

9:30 p. m., men's doubles—Baker-Mackell vs. Edwards-Whitcomb.

Ferrell Easy Mark

Austin, Tex., March 25 (AP).—A sixth inning uprising gave the St. Louis Browns four runs today, enough to provide them with a 9-8 decision in a renewal of their rivalry with the Boston Bees.

Wes Ferrell started for the Boston club and once again proved no mystery, giving up five hits, an equal number of passes and three runs. Joe Rucidlo was battered for the quartet of runs in the sixth after a costly error by Sibby Sisti. Art Johnson worked the last two innings most effectively.

Bob Harris started for the Brownies and was in constant hot water, finally being nicked for a cluster of four in the third. Jack Kramer finished and was effective until the ninth when Mel Priebisch homered with two aboard to bring the Bees within a run of tying the score.

The Cub recruit knocked a homer into the centerfield bleachers, scoring Glen Russell. Phil Cavaretta and Herman ahead of him.

Lou Novikoff, the Cubs' most famous yearling, got a single and double in his first three trips to the plate.

Tiger Rookie Shines

Lakeland, Fla., March 25 (AP).—Young Hal White held his former teammates, the Buffalo Bisons, of the International League, to two hits in five innings today and took a long stride toward a berth with the Detroit Tigers. The Tigers beat Buffalo, 4 to 2, with a rookie-laden lineup.

White, who shared the mound with Freddie Hutchinson, did not walk a man and refused to let a runner get past first base. The Bisons got six hits and both their runs off Hutchinson.

The Tigers, limited to five hits by three Bison twirlers, put together two passes and two singles with a wild pitch and fielder's choice for three runs in the fourth.

Phils Nose Out Giants

Miami Beach, Fla., March 25 (AP).—The crippled New York Giants couldn't hold a five-run lead today, and the Phillies beat them, 6-5, to gain an even break in their two spring exhibitions.

The Giants landed on Frank Melton, a distant relative of their own Cliff Melton, for five runs in the third, when Ken O'Dea opened with a triple and the next five batsmen singled, but Si Johnson and Roy Bruner gave them only two more hits. Meanwhile the Phils picked up two runs off Slick Castleman and hammered Jimmy Lynn for their winning four-run rally in the sixth on four straight singles followed by Bob Bragan's two-bagger.

Reds Drilled Hard

Tampa, Fla., March 25 (AP).—Manager Bill McKechnie put his World Champion Cincinnati Reds through their last spring training session here today before starting the roundabout trip to home and opening day.

In muggy, hot weather, the players worked at top speed for more than an hour on fungo chasing, base running and batting practice.

The team left tonight for Miami and two games with the New York Giants. Thence the players go to Havana for three games with the Boston Red Sox.

Jorgens Fails Chisox

Anaheim, Calif., March 25 (AP).—Orville Jorgens failed in his first comeback attempt today, but the Chicago White Sox went ahead to defeat the Philadelphia Athletics, 9 to 6, in an exhibition game here.

Jorgens, who formerly pitched for the Phillies, is being given a tryout by the Sox after being out of action with arm trouble. He pitched the first three innings, yielding six hits and six runs in the third and letting the A's tie the score.

Moose Solters, of the Sox, hit a home run.

took the puck from McCurry skating at top speed into a corner and lifted a high shot which went into the big side of the nets.

The teams devoted the first half of the second period trying to score, and the second half trying to decapitate each other with some of the most reckless stick swinging seen here. Washington, scoring two goals early in the session and adding another in the last three minutes, increased its advantage to 6 to 2.

Burns chalked up his sixty-third goal of the season in giving Washington a 4-1 lead at 1:04. And a sensational goal it was, with Norm bowling over both Sea Gulls defensemen, Harry Dick and Dick Livingston, before rapping in his shot as he fell face first. Jim Russell matched this goal with one for Atlantic City at 7:11, but Mailley (8:45) and Rossignol (17:11) knocked in two more for the Eagles.

Contract Bridge

"Last night in a rubber-bridge game," writes M. F., my partner, East, opened the bidding with one heart. The opponents were vulnerable. South passed and I then bid one no trump, holding these cards:

♡ Q 9 7 6
◇ J 8 6 3
♣ Q 7 5

"My reason for the bid was that I didn't want to raise the bid with such poor cards (except for partner's bid suit), and, on the other hand, I didn't want to see the bid die. And with my distribution I thought possibly game could be made in no trump. North said two spades over my one-trump and East doubled. South again passed, and I also passed, thinking my partner had made a business double to set the vulnerable two-spade bid. North passed and proceeded to play the hand for two sp des, doubled.

"My partner immediately became furious, saying I shouldn't have dropped the bidding the second time after his double, since he did it as an informative double to make me bid again. My argument was that making a double of an opponent's bid after his partner has already shown his strength (or weakness, as in this case) is for the purpose of setting the bid.

"Incidentally, when this hand was finally played out, my partner and I set the bid three tricks, which, of course, gave us 800 points, which in itself seems to me to justify the argument."

While some players might question M. F's first response to his partner's bid, prefering a reply of two hearts to one no trump, none of them would critize his pass of the business double of two spades. As he pointed out, the result speaks for itself.

All experts agree on this point: any double is meant for penalties when partner has bid, no matter how low the opposing contract.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, March 25 (AP).—Wheat futures, under the leadership of the May tract, continued the advance today, stretching the extreme gain for that delivery to 1¼ cents. New crop futures advanced ¼ to ⅝ cents and all contracts closed at or near the peak prices for the session.

The advance in the nearby delivery was credited principally to mill buying. A firm undertone prevailed most of the session and prices were at their best near the close. Other factors contributing to strength in grains were the Balkan situation, reports intimating that the Government might put a ceiling over prices of many commodities, including lard, soybeans, cottonseed oil and grains, and progress of farm aid measures in Congress.

Wheat futures close ¼ to 1¼ cents higher than yesterday's final prices; May, 88⅝@88⅞; July, 85⅝; corn advanced ½ to ⅝; May, 65⅛@68¼; July, 65⅝; oats were up ⅜ to ½; rye gained ⅛ to ¼; soybeans were ⅝ to 1 cent higher and lard was unchanged to 5 cents up.

Broomhall reported that Germany was eating into the reserves of grain accumulated before the war and a Swedish report recently emphasized the responsibility of the German government for feeding almost the entire continent of Europe. Traders also watched developments of the tense Balkan situation closely as a possible market influence.

District Sales Gain Sharpest In the Nation

Department store sales in the fifth Federal Reserve District, which includes Washington, are showing the widest percentage gain in the Nation, according to the Federal Reserve Board at Washington.

For the first two months this year the Richmond district's gain was 16 per cent over the corresponding 1940 period, while the average gain for the country was 10 per cent.

In Washington retail sales showed an 18 per cent gain during January and February. Other cities in the fifth district reported gains for the first two months as follows:

Baltimore, 14 per cent; Winston-Salem, 11 per cent; Charleston, S. C., 29 per cent; Lynchburg, 7 per cent; Norfolk, 48 per cent; Richmond, 13 per cent; Charleston, W. Va., 13 per cent; Huntington, W. Va., 13 per cent.

Controllers Hear Verner

The March meeting of the District of Columbia Control of the Controllers Institute of America was held last night at the Carlton Hotel. Prof. Arthur A. Verner, of the Foreign Service School of Georgetown University spoke on "National Defense and What It Means." F. H. Kenworthy, of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., president of the local control, presided.

In his talk to the controllers, Mr. Verner said:

"One of the greatest worries confronting the banker, the businessman and the man in the street is the problem of financing a $65,000,000,000 debt. The big fear which faces us is whether such a financial burden can be carried without ensuing inflation and ultimate deflation."

He added that while some inflation may be expected, it need not be excessive. He pointed out several steps already taken to control inflation:

1. Business and Government have shown their consciousness of the danger of commodity price increases, and so far have cooperated in avoiding such advances.

2. Taxes have been raised and will go higher in an effort to meet part of the defense costs.

3. The Treasury has inaugurated a policy of financing out of savings primarily, rather than by credit expansion.

4. The board of governors of the Federal Reserve has suggested a plan to avoid credit inflation which undoubtedly will be facilitated by the necessary legislation.

Bankers' Units to Meet

A joint meeting of the fiduciaries and auditors' sections of the District of Columbia Bankers Association is to be held at the Mayflower Hotel tomorrow, Henry K. Dierkoph, chairman of the fiduciaries section, said yesterday. The auditors section has been invited as guests of the trust group.

George Pausch, vice president of the Safe Deposit & Trust Co., of Baltimore, will discuss "Trust Department Cost Analysis." Assisting Mr. Pausch in conducting a panel discussion will be Kenneth F. Brooks, trust officer of the Riggs National Bank, and James D. Barrett, auditor of the American Security & Trust Co.

Clearings Near Record

Income tax payments swelled check transactions to near-record totals last week. The Federal Reserve Board said that in 274 leading cities, the total of checks debited to individual accounts was $11,223,000,000. This compared with $8,914,000,000 in the preceding week and $9,141,000,000 in the corresponding week last year.

In the Richmond district, which includes Washington, check transactions last week totaled $424,000,060 as compared with $331,000,000 in the corresponding 1940 week.

Foreign Exchange

New York, March 25 (AP).—The Shanghai dollar rolliads .02 of a cent in the free foreign exchange market today after slipping to the year's lowest quotation Monday.

The fluctuations locally reflected concern in Shanghai over rumors the Chinese stabilization fund was unwilling to support the market.

$36,056,668 Net In Year Reported By Sears Roebuck

Chicago, March 25 (AP).—Sears, Roebuck & Co. reported 1940 net income of $36,086,668, equivalent to $6.32 per share, compared with $37,255,274, or $6.60 per share, in 1939.

The company's tax bill amounted to $32,650,033, compared with $18,548,160 the previous year. Of this total the Federal income and excise profits taxes amounted to $22,500,000 in 1940, compared with $10,000,000 in 1939.

Net sales totaling $704,301,014 compared with $617,414,266, were the largest in history.

Earnings in 1940 were after a contribution of $4,136,140 to the savings and profit-sharing pension fund for employes. This was more than $1,000,000 in excess of the 1939 contributions.

T. J. Carney, president, said that Sears' plant expansion would be curtailed during the national emergency.

Utility to Offer $20,000,000 Issue

New York, March 25 (AP).—An underwriting syndicate headed by Blyth & Co. will offer tomorrow a $20,000,000 issue of Pacific Gas & Electric Co. 3 per cent bonds due in 1971 at a price of 101¾, it was announced today. Proceeds will be used for new capital purposes.

Pacific Gas originally planned a debt-refunding program involving an issue of $110,000,000 in bonds, but the deal was abandoned late last week because of unfavorable market conditions, financial quarters heard.

A spokesman for the underwriting firm said the $110,000,000 refunding might come up for consideration within six months.

SEC Recommends McKesson Plan

New York, March 25 (AP).—The Securities and Exchange Commission today recommended the trustee's plan of reorganization for the drug concern or McKesson & Robbins, Inc. William J. Wardall is trustee for the company, which was adjudged bankrupt after the Coster-Musica scandal late in 1938.

In an advisory report filed in the New York Federal Court, the commission said:

"We conclude that the plan is fair, equitable and feasible and should be approved."

Seat Price of $25,000 Sets 43-Year Low

New York, March 25 (AP).—The long decline in the quoted value of New York Stock Exchange memberships brought a new 43-year low today on arrangements for the transfer of a seat at $25,000, a drop of $1,000 from the previous sale. Highest price recorded since the start of the year was $35,000, early in January.

American Woolen Has $61,000,000 Backlog

Springfield, Mass., March 25 (AP).—Unfilled orders of $61,000,000—about half of them Government contracts—and a bright outlook for the year were reported today by Moses Pendleton, president of the American Woolen Co., at an annual stockholders' meeting. Officers were reelected.

Rail Issues Show Buoyancy, Utility List Lower In Mixed Deals; North American at New Low

New York, March 25.—Rails and assorted specialties exhibited strength in today's stock market while utilities generally backed water and mild irregularity was witnessed in most other departments.

The list was hesitant most of the session but carriers came to life at the last, apparently buoyed by estimates last week's freight loadings were the best of the year to date and February net operating revenues far ahead of the same month a year ago.

Recovery proponents had to contend with spreading strikes, particularly labor disturbances at Bethlehem Steel plants; fears of new war upsets as Yugoslavia joined the Axis, and the virtual certainty mounting taxes would take heavy toll of all corporate profits. Sale of a stock exchange seat for $25,000, off $1,000 from a previous transaction at a new bottom since 1898, provided a damper.

On the other hand, expectations defense spending momentum would be stepped up briskly, unemployment lowered and quick help given the British served to prop sentiment. A little cheer also was derived from the Russian-Turkish neutrality agreement.

Among favored stocks, Santa Fe, Atlantic Coast Line and the preferreds of Gulf, Mobile & Ohio and Pere Marquette went into new high ground for the year with gains of better than a point each.

Lesser improvement was retained by New York Central, Pennsylvania, Southern Pacific, United States Steel, Youngstown Sheet, General Motors, Chrysler, Montgomery Ward, United States Rubber, Douglas Aircraft, Anaconda, American Smelting, Dow Chemical, Union Carbide, Texas Corporation, Paramount and Electric Boat. Senior issues of Universal Pictures and Genneral Steel Castings were up 2 and 1, respectively.

New year's lows were posted for North American, Electric Power & Light, Commonwealth & Southern and United Corporation. Recent slipping tendencies of holding company common shares was thought to reflect doubts as to just how some of these will fare when integration proceedings are completed under the Securities Act.

Other losers included Bethlehem Steel, which halved an early drop of a point or so; Republic Steel, Goodyear, Kennecott, American Telephone, Western Union, Public Service of New Jersey, New York Shipbuilding, J. C. Penney, Sears-Roebuck, United Aircraft and Standard Oil of New Jersey.

A block of 32,800 shares of Western Union was offered privately after the close at the final listed price of 21⅛.

Carrier bonds pushed up in the loans division. Commodities were mixed. Wheat at Chicago was up ¼ to 1½ cents a bushel, and corn ¼ to ⅝ improved. Cottton was 10 cents a bale higher to as much lower.

In a spotty Curb, Electric Bond & Share preferred advanced while the common was off ⅛. Moderately advanced were Bell Aircraft, Glen Alden Coal and Todd Shipyards. In arrears were Brewster Aero, Gulf Oil, Niagara Hudson Power and Republic Aviation. Preferreds of Empire Gas were off 1 to 4 on a few deals. Volume here was around 79,000 shares, versus 74,000 Monday.

New Haven R. R. to Oppose ICC Reorganization Plan

By the Associated Press

New Haven, Conn., March 25.—President Howard S. Palmer, of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, told the stockholders in his annual report today that the company would oppose as "unfair and inequitable" the Interstate Commerce Commission's reorganization plan to wipe out their equity.

He charged that the commission had "failed to give effect to three important factors bearing on the value of the equity of present stockholders" and listed them as:

1. Perpetual leasehold rights in the Grand Central Terminal and perpetual easement over the New York & Harlem Railroad.

2. Current improvement in earnings and future prospects and the company's recuperative powers as demonstrated by its past earnings record.

3. The effect of the cancellation, as provided in its plan, of claims of the Old Colony and Boston & Providence Railroads.

The report set forth that under the statute the Federal court, to whom the commission certified the plan, must determine if it is "fair and equitable" and should objections arise hold hearings open to all interested parties.

The report outlined the progress of reorganization proceedings during the past year and detailed "high spots" of the modified reorganization plan as issued by the commission February 26, 1941, which requires acquisition of all properties of the Old Colony and inclusion of the Boston & Providence Railroads.

The plan was certified to the court February 27 and objections must be filed by April 7 and supporting briefs by May 5. No date has been set for oral argument.

President Palmer said that the total claims for expenses, fees or compensation for services incident to the reorganization up to December 31 amounted to $2,200,000, adding that "the incidence of these claims and their amount affords a distressing picture of some of the costs of protracted reorganization proceedings."

The report stated that the railroad ended 1940 with a $2,003,000 deficit after all fixed charges including full interest accruals on present capital structure and depreciation charges of $3,323,000, an improvement of $911,000 over 1939 and the lowest deficit since 1932.

Cross revenues of $85,604,000 were the highest since 1931, an increase of 2.6 per cent over 1939. Freight revenues increased 6.3 per cent and passenger dropped 3.8 per cent, the latter due to a reduction in coach fares to 2 cents a mile.

Boston Wool

Boston, March 25 (AP).—(U. S. Dept. of Agr.)—Very little business was being transacted today in greasy combing wools, but scoured wools suitable for woolen purposes were moderately active on a demand from mills that were recently awarded Government contracts for woolen and foreign wools pending awards from contracts by the Government for worsted goods. The volume of worsted wools being offered in Boston was quite restricted.

Commodities React as U. S. Studies Spurt

By the Associated Press

Recent high flyers in commodity markets settled down yesterday coincident with reports Federal officials were watching closely price trends that might upset defense production plans.

Domestic sugar at New York declined .02 to .03 of a cent a pound in futures trade after hitting peak prices since late 1939 on Monday. The market evidently considered a possible further increase in quotas, or the use of larger amounts of sugar grown in the United States, as a deterrent to a sustained rise.

Coffee, also at around the best prices in months Monday, dropped as much as ¼ cent a pound. Dealers said the decline was largely a result of profit-taking after a too fast rise.

Silk, cocoa and tin also receded. All have been favored in past weeks because of the possibility of ship shortages and increased freight rates.

Wheat at Chicago responded to, among other things, the favorable report of the Senate Agricultural Committee on the Bankhead bill with gains of ¾ to 1¼ cents a bushel. Corn rose ¼ to ⅝ of a cent.

The New York cotton market, however, was a little less bullish on the committee approval because of the belief the Administration disapproved of the measure. The Bankhead proposal would assure producers of major crops a return of 100 per cent of parity. Cotton closed 10 cents a bale higher to 10 lower.

Other staples higher included lead, cottonseed oil, wool tops, world sugar and rubber. Uneven were hides and copper.

The Associated Press index of 35 commodities sold in spot cash markets, based on 1926 as 100, advanced to 80.20 from 80.02 Monday.

Curb Expels Two For Splitting Fees

New York, March 25 (AP).—The New York Curb Exchange announced today the expulsion of two members on charge of violating rules against splitting commissions.

They are Charles R. Powers and Erward F. McCarmick, independent floor brokers.

Curb officials said the charges grew out of revelations by Jerome Chester Cuppia, a former member, in recent hearings before the Federal Securities and Exchange Commission at Washington in disciplinary proceedings against the curb.

Cuppia testified supposedly independent brokers acted as "virtually my employes" in sharing commissions for handling orders.

Curb authorities, it was said, were investigating cases of other members involved in the Cuppia testimony.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia. Mamie Humphreys, 710 E Street Northeast, Washington, D. C., plaintiff, vs. Oscar T. Humphreys, 3534 Canal Street, New Orleans, Louisiana, defendant. No. 61630. Equity. The object of this suit is to enlarge the decree of divorce from bed and board heretofore granted the plaintiff in the above entitled action from the defendant on the 16th day of December, 1936, on the ground of cruelty into a decree of absolute divorce from the bond of marriage on the ground that the separation of the parties has continued for two years and more since the date of said decree. On motion of the plaintiff, it is this 18th day of March, A. D. 1941, ordered that the defendant, Oscar T. Humphreys, 3534 Canal Street, New Orleans, Louisiana, cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default, provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in the Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post before said day. Listen!

with Glynn

One really has to know Bill Slocum (jr.), erstwhile "Listen" conductor, to realize fully what's he doing for his country these days.

For, although Bill's now in radio, as director of special events for CBS, he still clings manfully insofar as he can to the fine old tradition of the morning newspaperman, which he started out by being—that is always to get to bed as late as one possibly can and never, never undergo the disgrace of ever having it said that one has risen much before noon.

Now, Bill's most recent assignment is a country-wide tour of Army camps, with occasional broadcasts from them telling of his reactions. And, therefore, you should know that when you heard Bill's voice over WJSV and the Columbia network Tuesday morning at 8:11 a. m., Washington time, it was a fine, brave thing that he was doing. For he was speaking from Los Angeles and, by simple arithmetic, the time out there was 5:11 a. m.—dawn, mind you! What braver thing could a man do?

Bill's tour started out from Wright Field, Ohio, on the twentieth and he continues visiting the camps throughout the country until the tour concludes at Fort Monroe in Virginia on April 2.

Next Sunday, incidentally, Bill's expected to speak over the network from Maxwell Field in Alabama. It won't be quite as heroic, though. The broadcast's at 2:30 p. m.
